NEW M-G-M COMEDY IS MERRY PICTURE OF MODERN MARRIAGE

You'll smile, then you'll chuckle, then you'll laugh. That's the kind of merry little picture "Blonde Fever" the new tenant at the Prince Edward Theatre, is. It's one of those movies that asks no questions and settles no problems.

Excellently directed by Richard Whorf, that fine actor of stage and screen whose talents as a film director here make their debut, "Blonde Fever" is the story of a man who, nearing forty, has ideas about half his age—in the form of a beautiful, blonde and naive young charmer who almost wrecks his marriage of ten years.

Philip Dorn plays the fortyish proprietor of a swank restaurant and newcomer Gloria Grahame (remember that name, for you'll certainly remember the face and figure!) is seen as the waitress who plays havoc with his life. Beauteous Mary Astor is the very understanding wife who shrewdly goes about righting the upset apple cart, and her allies in the maneuvers are Felix Bressart, as a ubiquitous waiter, and good-looking young Marshall Thompson, Gloria's flaming youth boy friend.

More Than Half Rhodes Scholars Saw War Service

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twenty of Canada's brilliant students, more than half of them present or former members of the services or engaged in war work, will enter Oxford University next fall as Rhodes Scholars.

First such awards since before the war, the appointments are made for two years and a third year will be granted when a scholar presents a definite plan of study for that period satisfactory to his college and to the Rhodes Trustees.

Each scholarship has an annual value of some $1,350. Generally, that sum is not sufficient to meet expenses of term-time and vacations and scholars supplement the amount from their own resources. Travelling expenses to and from Britain also are borne by the scholars.

Of the 20 Canadian awards allowed by the Rhodes Trust at Oxford, 10 were named by provincial selection committees across Canada regardless of whether or not the applicants had seen war services, and five more were with war service. In addition, four or five scholarships awarded members of Canada's Khaki College in England have been filled and the fifth will be awarded in London in March after an interview of applicants there.

Scholar ships-At-Large

The five scholarships-at-large to present the former member of the services, or to those who participated in war work, were the last to be announced D. R. Michener, Toronto barrister and secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, named the winners recently as:

J. W. W. Graham, B. A., Weyburn, Sask., a former naval officer who has honors in political science and economy. He is attending law college in Saskatchewan.

Victory Graham, Calgary, third year honors in modern languages and classics, University of Alberta. He did war work in the National Research Council from 1943 to last year.

Bert James MacKinnon, B. A., Vankleek Hill, Ont., a former lieutenant observer in the Canadian Navy. Now in his first year at Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto, he held honors in history at Hamilton's McMaster University.

H. S. Scott, Montreal, former Canadian Army lieutenant and of the Faculty of Engineering at McGill University, Montreal.

E. B. Tucker, Sackville, N. B., B.S., Mount Allison University, a naval lieutenant serving on the Canadian cruiser Ontario.

The four already selected from Canada's Khaki College are:

Sgt. K. C. Brown, Toronto, formerly of University of Toronto; Col. John Cameron Clunie, O.B.E., Sarnia, Ont., University of Western Ontario; Maj. James Grandy, Toronto, University of Western Ontario; Lieut. M. L. Weiner, Outremont, Que.

Provincial Selections

In the provincial selections two each were named from Quebec and Ontario, the two provinces with largest centres of population, and one each from the others, excluding Prince Edward Island. Applicant-residents of that province applid either in New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, if they took their University course in P.E.I., or applied in the province in which they attended university.

Provincial selections were:

British Columbia: Allan Ainsworth, 22, Vancouver, prominent in University of British Columbia student activities and interested in economics and English.

Alberta: Maj. John Dougan, M.C., and Bar, recently discharged from the Canadian Army after a career with the Loyal Edmonton Regiment during which he was twice wounded in Sicily. He was decorated twice for outstanding leadership, one of the requisites of the scholarship Trust. He is a B.A. of the University of Alberta.

Saskatchewan: Peter Larkin, Saskatoon, holder of an honors bursary in biology and a chemistry instructor at a Saskatoon high school. Native of New Zealand, he proposes research and academic work in zoology at Oxford. Active in dramatics, as a member of a university entertainment troupe.

Manitoba: Robert Moyse, 26, Winnipeg, now at University of Toronto seeking a master's degree in political science. Graduate of University of Manitoba, he enlisted in 1940 as an ordinary seaman in the Royal Navy and was commissioned a few months later.

Ontario: Robert Aldwinckle, 26, Varna, Ont., student in engineering physics at University of Toronto. Discharged from the R.C.A.F. last May, he won the D.F.C. and was mentioned in dispatches.

Dr. Ramsay Gunton, 23, London, Ont., honor graduate in medicine at University of Western Ontario, now an interne at Montreal General Hospital.

Quebec: David Wanklyn, Montreal, who served on the continent as a trooper with the 12th Manitoba Dragoons. He re-entered McGill University when discharged last September.

Pierre Langlais, Quebec city, a sub-lieutenant in the R.C.N.V.R., stationed at Halifax who graduated with the B.A. degree from Laval University in 1943.

New Brunswick: William Young Smith, Saint John, whose army experience included North Africa, where he was wounded. Later he was attached to an R.C.A.F. battle school in England and returned home as an army instructor nine months ago. He was news editor and later editor-in-chief of the college weekly at University of New Brunswick.

Nova Scotia: Nordau Goodman, 26, King's College, Halifax, native of New Glasgow, N. S., who had a brilliant record at Dalhousie University. At Oxford he will specialise in mineralogy.

RESTORE SUNDIALS TO PALACE GARDEN

LONDON, Feb. 2 —(CP)— Sixteenth century sundials, removed during air raids from the stately gardens of Hampton Court Palace are to be restored.

Sundials were the official timekeepers when Henry VIII resided at the Palace. They were moved in 1940 because of the danger that bomb blast might bend the iron indicators, displacing the time "shadows." Though bombs crashed around the palace boundaries, the massive stone architecture bears few scars. Of particular interest to tourists is a grape vine, 700 years old, which continues to bear fruit each year within a steam-heated greenhouse.

Wartime Secret in Final Chapter

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 4 —This week, when the last of five Canadian National Railways special trains carrying lethal mustard gas to Dartmouth, N.S., leaves from the $3,000,000 Stormont Chemicals Limited plant on the outskirts of Cornwall Ont., it will end the final chapter of one of Canada's biggest and best kept wartime secrets. The gas will be loaded in the hull of an incompleted ship built at Sorel, Que., and towed out hundreds of miles and sunk 900 fathoms in the Atlantic.

The big chemical plant, nearly 50 buildings of varying sizes, employing 260 persons, was built on a 900-acre property, fenced in and surrounded with armed guards, in the early and dark days of the war. Canada remembered the suffering and death of her soldiers in the first world war, when the enemy sneak-attacked with gas in the battle of St. Julien. She wasn't going to let history repeat itself. If the Germans used gas this time, she would be ready.

More than 3,000 tons of mustard gas was manufactured, and the plant was ready to go into mass production. In other sections of the plant, chemists worked on a new type of charcoal for gas masks and chemicals to protect soldiers from severe gas burns. After long, tedious hours of research, they discovered a new process for charcoal, which made Canadian-made gas masks the best protection in the world against any known gas which the enemy could possibly use.

So powerful was the mustard gas that if it were sprayed over a Canadian city, a chemical warfare officer says, no one would be safe unless he were sealed up in his house for a month or longer. Everything would come to a standstill. There would be no means of transportation, no deliveries of bread and milk and other foodstuffs. Not until decontamination squads were rushed into the city from outside to clean it up, which would take at least a month, could anyone venture outdoors.

The Germans didn't use gas and when the war ended, the Chemical Warfare and Smoke Branch of the Department of National Defence, Ottawa, faced a new problem. How were they going to dispose of the mustard gas? Burying it in an uninhabited, faraway spot, burning it, and many other suggestions were made and turned down until the idea of sinking it in the Atlantic was thought of and accepted. Then a transportation problem cropped up, and officials of the Canadian National Railways were called in to work it out.

The movement of the 10,000 drums, each weighing 656 pounds, the biggest rail movement of mustard gas known required 187 C.N.R. all-steel box cars. It was one of the most dangerous shipments ever handled by the C.N.R. and caused the responsible officers considerable worry, despite the fact that every possible precaution was taken to ensure its safety.

A specially picked Army decontamination squad, one member for each carload of mustard gas, and two carloads of their anti-gas fighting equipment and supplies, made the 900-mile journey with each train. Their job was to inspect the drums in each car at least four times en route, which took an hour. Twenty-eight drums were placed at each end of the car, leaving the door space free for the squad to work if a leak occurred and had to be sealed up. Anti-gas paper lined the floor of the car on which two inches of dehydrated charcoal was spread. To hold each drum securely in place, more than 540 feet of lumber were required for each car.

Fur Shortage Reported In Northern Manitoba

CHURCHILL, Man., Feb 5—(CP)—Hints of hardship among Northern Manitoba fur trappers circulated today in this Hudson Bay settlement, with one barren-land veteran describing the winter as "the worst for fur he has experienced in 17 years." Many of the 40 licensed trappers operating from Churchill have been forced to return for dog feed and other supplies.

Henry Johnson, who came here in 1930 from Prince Albert, Sask., described the catch as the poorest he has seen and 62-year-old Angus MacIver of Scotch Town, Que., added that only unusually high prices for short-furred animals prevented a disastrous season.

MacIver whose book "The North Is My Country" is scheduled for publication next fall, said mink brought a peak of $75 before the market dipped 30 per cent in the last few weeks. The usual price is about $9-$14.

No reason was advanced for the poor season. "Fur comes and goes," said Eddie Datstone from Little Bay Island, Nfld. "Nobody knows for sure why or how."

Batstone, who sets his trap lines from Nonala 100 miles north of here, said white fox are particularly scarce and seem to be moving farther north each year.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Feb. 4 — (CP Cable)—Prince Bishnu Shumshere, 33-year-old son of a late Maharajah of Nepal, was found dead in bed today. Cause of death is under investigation.

When a nurse saw him at 4 A.M. he was apparently well and ordered breakfast for 8 A.M.

Prince Bishnu, who had lived at Nassau for 4 1-2 years, directed in his will that his body be sent to Miami for cremation and the ashes sent to his secretary, Hatim Attari, in London, for shipment to India.

In Memoriam

JAMES EMMETT COADY

It is with a feeling of gross incompetance and a full realization of his own very limited ability as a composer that the writer begins to chronicle the death of the late James Emmett Coady which took place at his home in Brookvale, in the parish of Kelly's Cross, on January 11th. He feels that one so richly endowed with literary ability and educative talent, as was the late Mr. Coady, should have one more gifted in the art of composition and self expression to fittingly relate and truly portray his many fine gifts of mind and heart.

The deceased, who had not been in robust health for several years, was seriously ill for only two days, and was attended in his last illness by his pastor, Rev. Fr. Ayres who administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church of which the deceased was always a faithful member.

Mr. Coady was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Coady, and was born in Brookvale on August 4th 1887. He was educated in the rural school from which he matriculated to Prince of Wales College where he obtained a teacher's license. For almost twenty years he laboured in the teaching profession and earned the reputation of being one of the most successful teachers in the province. Today many men and women who are now holding responsible positions throughout Canada and the United States can attribute their success, in no small measure to the diligence and competance of their old teacher, James Emmett Coady.

In 1922 he married Loretta McCaffrey of Tyrone, Lot 65, who together with two sons Joseph and Maurice are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and father. One daughter pre-deceased him some nineteen years ago when only 6 months old. Two brothers, John Anthony and Tobias Francis died some years ago, but three sisters, namely, Mrs. Peter McQuaid, Mrs. James McQuaid and Mrs. John L. Sullivan are left to mourn their loss.

The funeral, which was under the direction of Mr. Frank J. Trainor of Tyrone, Lot 65, was held on the morning of January 14th to St. Joseph's Church, Kelly's Cross, and despite the fact that the temperature was ten below zero accompanied by a wind of almost hurricane velocity, was largely attended.

Requiem High Mass was sung by the Pastor, Rev. Leonard Ayres who also performed the commital services at the grave.

The pallbearers were: Emmett Stordy, Owen Cudmore, James Quinn, Patrick Callaghan, Patrick Clarkin and Walter Coady.

May he rest in Peace,

ORGANIZE FOR HEALTH

It is fitting that once a year—during "Health Week" which this year opens February 3—all citizens should take time to consider what has been accomplished in the program of health for Canadians. With the co-operation of Dominion, Privincial and Municipal departments of health departments of education, schools, churches, service clubs and other public-spirited organizations, an effort is being made to again call to the attention of all Canadians the need for organizing for health.

Science has made enormous contributions in the field of preventive medicine in our own lifetime. And yet, failing to apply the discoveries of science, we go on allowing health and life to be sacrificed because we are not sufficiently informed to spend reasonable time or pass adequate legislation for the prevention of sickness and the conservation of life.

The statement that in the war years 50,000 industrial workers were unable to work on account of sickness on an average day, and that of 1,260,000 men examined for military service 357,000 were unfit for military duty of any kind, should be sufficient to give pause. In spite of our existing milk-borne disease and our failure to control venereal disease, only one province in Canada has a province-wide law enforcing pasteurization of milk and only two provinces have adequate legislation for medical examination before marriage. This is an evidence of the fact that either Canadians generally are still uniformed as to the urgent need for action or extremely lethargic.

In either case, there is a vast need for a widespread educational campaign. Briefly, if the facts are disseminated widely enough and often enough there will be a widespread demand for action.

"Health Week" is but a brief intensification of the year round effort of your health departments and the Health League of Canada to make you health-conscious.
