SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JEREMIAH CAST INTO PRISON.

Jer. 37: 4-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.

"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil againrt you falsely, for My sake."—Matt. 5: 11.

POINTED SUGGESTIONS.

By Rev. D. W. Snider.

What is that subtle persuasion of the devil which leads men to veneer their hardness of heart by the soft hypocrisy of asking for themselves the prayers of the good? Jeremiah's prayers were sought even while the word of the Lord from his lips was disregarded. Why will not a young man understand that to obey the counsels of his mother is as likely to put him upon a safe and prosperous course as her prayers? Yet how often her prayers are treasured and her counsel despised! Such is the devil's fatalistic lullaby.

Appearances may lend themselves to the inclinations so far that the truth-teller stands almost convicted of the false, but while appearances have deceived a thousand, thousand times the truth never fails. The Chaldeans away from the gates of Jerusalem did not mean the freedom of Jerusalem.

Many unpatriotic tricks are played in the name of patriotism. There are those whose dying gurgle in the abysmal darkness of infamy, in the sewer sinks of rottenness and shame, will proclaim their patriotism. Think of Jeremiah being turned back at one of the city gates as a traitor! Beware of men who have nothing else to wrap themselves in but the old flag.

Let it be understood that no mere flag-waving patriot is as far-sighted as the patriotic prophet or man of God who can tell his country in good round terms what is the matter with it and the judgment that awaits it and the bigness and blackness of the devil that seeks to make it his own. No one has learned the character or history of Jeremiah until he has caught some glimpse, at least, of the meaning of patriotism, which, at the same time, spells piety—truth-telling, God-fearing, nation-loving, soul-surrendering piety.

Moreover, notice from this lesson, when compared with a former one, how one-sided men are. When the priests were condemning Jeremiah because of his statements which affected the temple, and which they thought blasphemous, the princes defended him. Uow, however, when the charge is of another sort and is named treason the princes are against him. But it was the same truth-telling Jeremiah! It is well not to put confidence in men. What a juggler the prophet would have been to have done it successfully!

Surely there is something suggestive for us to learn from such circumstances. Perhaps it is this: That common sense, if it only means class-sense, will not do. It is not sufficient for the information of sane and just judgments. Men must learn to be bigger than their class. Neither priest-class nor prince-class is big enough for a man—unless he is in every way a very small man.

But it was to this supremest test of patience Jeremiah was put—that of having to do and deal with small-bore men. What a specimen Zedekiah was! Secretly he wanted all the help he could get from the prophet, but he dared not follow his counsel. Dr. Maclaren calls him "the archaic Mr. Facing-both-ways." Good.

Everything in the lesson goes to show the greatness of Jeremiah. He was thoroughly human, but he was filled with the Spirit. Man is most man when he is filled with God. We are not surprised, then, at the unfolding story of patience and forbearance and moral courage and confidence in the goodness of God and of the final triumph of His cause and kingdom.

SUMMER MONTHS FAT L TO SMALL CHILDREN

The summer months are the hardest of the year on small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are all common at this time and many a precious life is snuffed out after only a few hours illness. As a safeguard mothers should keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes on suddenly will bring the little one through safely. Mrs. Larry DeGrace, Mizonette, N. B., writes: "Last summer my baby suffered greatly from her stomach and bowels and nothing helped her till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. They regulated her bowels, sweetened her stomach, and now she is a big, healthy, happy child. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FALSE IDEALS

"Graball Too Often the Height of Ambition.

False ideals of happiness haunt the ways of men and lead them on to danger and destruction through the siren song of fantasy. One markes his of wealth. He has enough now for all the purposes of refined living; but he wants that extra ,that margin by which enough may be broadened out into excess, and refinement may be made to include frantic luxury and insolent ostentation. "When I have so much, I shall be content," he says to himself. But he is never content. If he gets a hundred thousand pounds, he wants two; if two, three; and so on till he covets a million which then, when compassed, shall positively be the term and boundary of his desires. But the million spreads out and rolls on, as the hundred thousand had done before it.

Rousing Response.

At a Toronto theatre not long since the curtain rose on an empty stage in the second act of a play, and by and by a meek-looking young man with a dust-coat slung over his arm came on and loudly called, "Uncle! uncle!"

According to the book of the play he should have received no answer to his call, and after an appropriate pause he should have gone on with the monologue. But a graceless "god" in the gallery took upon himself to answer the actor.

"All right, I'm coming in a moment; how much do you want on it?" he shouted.

The effect on the audience may be imagined.

Japan has Cheapest Postal Service.

Japan has the cheapest postal service in the world. Letters are carried all over the empire for two sen, about seven-tenths of a cent. This is the more remarkable when we consider the difficulties of transportation over a mountainous and irregular country that has only about a hundred miles of railway, while only a few of the chief roads can be used for wagons and the steamships connect only a small number of stations on the coast.

We Eat Too Much.

To rise from the table able to eat a little more is a proverbially good rule for every one. There is nothing more idiotic than forcing down a few mouthfuls because they happen to remain on one's plate after hunger is satisfied, and because they may be "wasted" if left. It is the most serious waste to overtax the stomach with even half an ounc more than it can take care of.

Summer Evening Wraps.

Evening wraps are unusually novel this season, the great vogue for sheer materials finding a happy expression in these more elaborate garments. Marquisette wraps are the latest novelties, and while exorbitant prices are asked for them in the smart shops, there is no reason why any woman could not fashion one herself or at least plan one and have it made at very little expense.

Black, white, Alice blue, gray, gold color and king's blue are good colors for these little wraps. Many of them are cut on extremely simple lines, with the kimono sleeve and plain back and front. There seems to be no attempt to fasten these garments. They are cut so that the front just meet, and are apparently designed to hang free.

Small Heads Dont Mean Small Brains.

The fact that you take a small size in hats does not necessarily mean that you have a small brain. A man with a small head may be much cleverer than a man with a large one. Moreover, the size of the brain is not everything, since, if undeveloped, it is no more likely to produce anything of value than land which is not fertile. There are people with large heads who display so little intelligence that one almost expects to hear their brains rattle when they move, like a shrivelled kernel in a nut.

Too Much Education a Mistake.

It is a mistake to suppose that a good general education wil secure success in life. No wise man accepts a general invitation to dinner! it involves no particulars. Only a particular education is of practical use. Let the boys be educated for something particular — lawyers, doctors, clergymen, printers, merchants, tradesmen — only something definite. No hands are so often idle as those which are supposed by the owners — and by no one else — fit to "turn to anything."

Expecting Much.

The sphere of our affections is one in which we are very apt to expect too much from others, and thus to cause bitterness and often estrangement. Where we love we naturally crave to be loved; but this craving if not regulated by reason, is very likely to blossom into a selfish oppression.

A Sewing Machine Wrinkle

A hand sewing-machine is often very apt to slip about on the table. To obviate this, all that is necessary is to place a couple of the old-fashioned gelatine lozenges, slightly moistened, under each corner of the base board. In a few seconds the machine will be found to adhere to the table and equal a stand-machine in firmness.

Humility Safest Virtue.

Among all the virtues, humility, the lowest, is pre-eminent. It is the safest, because it is always an anchor; and that man may be truly said to live the most content in his calling who strives to live within the compass of it.

STRIKING LIFE OF LAFAYETTE.

From poorly-paid bank clerk to one of the world's foremost entertainers drawing a salary of $200,000 a year, such in brief is the record of the "Great Lafayette," who was killed in the Empire Theatre fire in Edinburgh.

He was born in Los Angeles, and even as a boy he showed a marked partiality for music and art. He was sent to Munich to study, which he did not do very conscientiously, but he performed a good deal at smoking concerts, getting a vast amount of experience that in later days was of the utmost value to him.

When he returned to America he went into a San Francisco bank, but still clung, as an amateur, to entertaining in his spare time. He did almost anything, singing, reciting, imitating, and playing all sorts of musical instruments.

Having saved a little money he left home determined to make a music-hall career for himself, though his parents told him that he would be home in a month without a penny in his pocket. He got his first engagement at Spokane Falls at a fee of $10 a week but not at a music hall. Lafayette's part in the programme was to make caricatures of American celebrities and bang a big drum while teeth were extracted. His salary was soon raised, but he left that business and became an actor in a regular theatre.

In New Orleans he saved $5,000, and this was the starting point of his brilliant career. Chicago was the first big city he took by storm. New York followed, and when there, six years ago, he was being paid $25,000 for a twenty-three weeks' engagement.

Lafayette's first appearance in London was at the Hippedrome, under Mr. Stoll's management, in 1900. His turn, which lasted over an hour, consisted of conjuring tricks, characteristic, acting, conducting, illusions, impersonations, and wonderful scenic effects, an absolute unique act.

WONDERFUL ILLUSIONS.

Lafayette was a clever modeller of clay, and this accomplishment, as well as that of painting, entered into the scheme of his great "entertainment offering," as his "show" was billed in the country of his birth. In the second part of his programme we found him at work on a model of of "Leda and the Swan," bringing them into shape with extraordinary rapidity, but by the actual process of the sculptor; and then, in some mysterious fashion, disposing of his work in a flash, and revealed to our astonished eyes a living Leda mounted amid cascades of scintillating waters from the fountain of Isis.

His "mysteries," though they dealt with the appearance and the disappearance of a man or a woman under amazing circumstances, were very different to those of the ordinary illusionist. They were magnificently spectacular, and often given in dramatic form. His last illusion, for instance, was a romance in Oriental setting, wherein a noble young Persian prince rescued a captive maid from a lion's den, which she had preferred to the harem of a terrible pasha.

It was called "The Lion's Bride," and its mysteries and quick changes and perplexing dodgeries were performed by Lafayette amid gorgeous and most elaborate scenery, with slaves, soldiers, guards of the harem eunuchs, and all the human paraphernalia of Oriental high officialism, filling the stage as in some play of importance.

Of late years Lafayette added to his knowledge of the technicalities of instrumentation, and succeeded in becoming composer for both orchestral and military bands of scores of no mean order.

BELIEF IN ADVERTISING.

He was an extraordinary man for detail, and when away from London he would send no fewer than from twenty-five to thirty telegrams a day to his agents. He was extremely particular about his contracts, and would never attach his name to a paper until he had carefully considered its whole meaning and gone into every phase of it.

One of the great secrets of his success was his belief in advertising. He spent thousands of dollars yearly in exploiting himself, and as one London theatre manager said, "Some of his ideas were enough to scare the average advertiser."

Although not reckless with his finances, he spent large sums when he foresaw that they would return him tenfold. He was particularly extravagant in the selection of his scenery and other paraphernalia, and most of it was built to order after his own design.

It is stated that he had paid at least $10,000 for his famous lion, and that his scenery, curtains, etc., were valued at about $50,000.

It is related of him that when he was still a struggling performer, he asked a certain manager $50 a week and was promptly refused. He told the manager he would make him one day pay him the biggest fee in his record. A few years later he refused a fee of $1,250 at that very house.

THE ART OF DINING take 2.

Perhaps his soul yearns for chicken croquettes. He passes up ham and eggs, omelettes, roast beef, cold tongue. He is nearing the end of the line, he is hungry; he sees no croquettes. There is no return, for at the end of the rail stands a gum chewing Atropos who inspects his booty and puts the punch of Nemesis on his meal check.

"Get a move on, you big stiff," says the man behind him.

Flustered, harassed, famished, the banqueter seizes at random a baked apple, three sausages and a bowl of clam chowder, only to find, too late, the chicken croquettes at the end of the counter.

There is also another species of quick lunch emporium; the physical culture. Here you find substitutes for meat, fake milk, cream, butter, eggs and imitation coffee, to prove that the honest products of hen, cow and Mother Earth are the injurious weapons of a malicious power toward the human race. On the wall hangs a brutal placard "Chew your food; your stomach has no teeth;" also tables showing how many babies died from drinking plain milk and the moral degeneracy caused by the porterhouse steak.

But the quick lunch has its universal charavteristics. It is generally built.

The "Ohio"

Nearly every farmer knows he needs a

Gasoline Engine.

But what style of engine shall he get

1st An engine that is absolutely safe and to secure this, the gasoline must be enclosed in a solid cast-iron base and pumped up automatically. The farmer who puts in an engine and uses a tin gasoline tank, and suction and gravity feed in his barn is inviting a fire.

2nd Your engine should be economical in the use of gasoline. The Ohio thoroughly mixes and vaporizes its gas before taking it into cylinder thus reducing the amount consumed by more than 10 per cent as compared with others.

3rd You want a durable machine. Here the Ohio's superiority is most apparent; the first in this country and the oldest one running just as well as ever.

4th You want a machine with power We furnish customers with size of cylinder in inches. A comparison of these with other engines on the market, as well as on actual working test proves that the Ohio is 25 per cent larger and stronger than most other engines sold in the Western Provinces.

Further, the Ohio is thoroughly reliable; starts easily in frosty weather; a water cooled engine without water pipes or circulating pump to freeze. Governor controls speed anywhere from 75 to 450 r. p. m. Best running qualities guaranteed.
