MOTHER!

Your Child's Bowels Need "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now and then thoroughly cleans the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even a cross, feverish, constipated child loves its "fruity" taste, and mothers can rest easy because it never fails to work all the sour bile and poisons right out of the stomach and bowels without griping or upsetting the child.

After Ten Years

BY MARION RUBINCAM

AN EASTERN HOME

Chapter 88

Mrs. Munn was in jubilant spirits. She had accomplished more than half of her plan when first Mrs. Park and her Millie left. She began preparing a surprise for Patty. Millie's train had gone early in the evening. Mrs. Munn had had her to dinner, and was very nice. Patty was to stay on at the big house just off the Avenue. Paul was delighted, since he could see her new whenever he wanted.

And Patty, returned to her new home, found that the bedroom and adjoining little dressing room and bath on the floor above Mrs. Munn's had been fitted up for her.

"I did nothing elaborate," Mrs. Munn explained, "for I'm afraid I shan't keep you with me long." And she glanced at Paul and smiled.

But when Patty went upstairs to her room, she found that quite a bit had been done. Mrs. Munn had done the walls in her favorite silver grey, but had brightened that by hanging long curtains of rose pink taffeta lined with blue against the windows and had used rose pink for the furniture. The little dressing room that opened from this self in a drapery silk negligie sitting on a machine used to make her laugh.

"Just old materials I had around the house," Mrs. Munn said, coming in behind her. "You've no idea what fun it was, I can't think why I've been living along here in this big house all this time, when I might have had you all along."

She quite forgot Patty's family and her sense of obligation. "There no sense in having you every day at that Committee," Mrs. Munn went on, settling herself in one of the big chairs to talk. "In any case, I'm afraid that Committee is about done. What can you expect of a lot of silly women?" and she began to laugh a little. "So I resigned for you this afternoon while you were helping Millie off."

"But that would make me dependent upon you?"

"And thereby give me more pleasure than I've had since you started for home a year ago!"

It was tyranny, but a pleasant sort. And Patty was the type easily tyrannized.

"Instead of giving you a salary as I used to, I'll open you a bank account for you, just as I did for Mary. Every month I'll put in a certain amount. And tomorrow we'll do some shopping."

Paul had always seen Patty well dressed, so her new and expensive frocks did not impress him as much as she with pardonable feminine vanity thought they might. A year ago she had a nice collection of things cleverly made over from Mrs. Munn's frequently discarded wardrobe. Within the year many had become shabby, but Patty had a clothes sense, and wore her things well.

If she had any feeling against being dependent, Mrs. Munn was tactful enough to overcome it. "You might just as well be my social secretary," she said. "I'm supposed to spend my mornings in bed, you can come to me at ten, and we'll go through my mail, answer letters and then read a bit."

until I'm allowed to get up." So Patty, discarding her businesslike suit for a silk negligie which she secretly adored ran down to her friend's room after breakfast, and opened and read her mail to her, answered telephone calls, made engagements, and made notes about business letters which she wrote on a typewriter in another room. The sight of her self in a drapery silk negligie sitting on a machine used to make her laugh.

Mrs. Munn decided that Patty needed a change of air, "after the confinement of your office," she said.

"We'll take a little trip somewhere," she decided. So she took her off to the shore for two weeks, secretly amused at Paul's long face, and secretly and a little selfishly pleased at having Patty quite to herself. It was one of the few signs she gave of growing old, this tyranny, gentle as it was, and this occasional selfishness.

But Patty bloomed like a rose in her new life.

She was physically and nervously strong enough so the hours bent over a desk did not hurt her, though of course, her cheeks were a little less pink in so confined a life. It was mental worry that told even on her. She had been worried over her mother's unhappiness over Millie's restlessness, over the need of money, and certainly over this affair between Paul and her self. The little flat had not been a pleasant home, in spite of being in love, her winter had been anything but happy.

When she went out now, with her smart Spring suit and her little hat pulled down around her face, her Abastian wolfhound that Paul had given her trotting along beside her, she was the picture of good health and good spirits.

"It's wonderful to be 21 and in love and suddenly given a pretty home and clothes," a friend of Mrs. Munn's remarked, watching Patty leaving the house one day.

"Isn't it? I'd take her to Europe, but I don't. Paul would have me carried off rather than lose sight of her," Mrs. Munn answered.

"How about his mother? Is she more agreeable?"

Mrs. Munn laughed. "She hasn't been near me since I took Patty to live with me."

Fort William to Liverpool

Mr. E. A. Weir, B. S. A. discussing the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes Waterway project in the Winnipeg Farmer's Advocate, reminds his readers that this new waterway would bring the ocean 1,200 miles closer to the prairies of Western Canada. Windsor would be only one hundred miles farther from Liverpool than is New York. It is claimed that wheat could be sent from Duluth or Chicago to Liverpool ten cents a bushel cheaper than via New York or the present system, and the possibility of making all the ports in the Great Lakes ocean ports is very alluring. The size and depth of the canal would allow ocean carriers of 7,000 tons dead weight to use it, and this would mean eighty per cent of all ocean going craft or about 37,000,000 tons. The danger which it is proposed to build just above Cornwall, would give hydro-electric power estimated at 1,750,000 horse power, and if the new method of transmission, by which a million volts can be sent over a single wire, is available this power can be transmitted over a radius of 1,000 miles. The registered tonnage passing through the Detroit river in 1919 was 53,564,765, and the preceding year was about 10,000,000 tons more, and the value of this 53,564,765 tonnage $37,422,796. The Panama Canal in 1918 only passed 2,167 vessels carrying 6,131,875, net tons, and the Suez in 1918 showed 2,522 vessels passing with net tonnage of 9,251,801. The total tonnage entered and cleared of all the ocean ports of the United States during 1919 was 92,875,347 net tons, while the freight tonnage passing the Detroit river was greater than the aggregate of all the cargoes borne by all the ships, British and foreign, entering the ports of Great Britain in a year. The promoters of the new waterway reckon that the new route will save the two countries about $30,000,000 in reduced freights alone. Of course, most of this is on paper, but still the great project looks good and it will probably be put through.

THIN, FLAT HAIR GROWS LONG, THICK AND ABUNDANT

"Danderine" costs only 35 cents a bottle. One application ends all dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, and in a few moments, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will appear a mass, so soft, lustrous and easy to comb. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first, yes, but really new hair growing all over the scalp. "Danderine" is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. This delightful, stimulating tonic helps dandruff, itchy hair to grow long, thick, heavy and luxuriant.

CUSTODY TRANSFERRED

DUBLIN, March 2.—To the accompaniment of cheering by the crowds assembled to witness the ceremony, the guard over the Bank of Ireland, on College Green, in which the Government funds are kept, was changed today from British to Irish. The British soldiers who were on guard handed over the custody of the premises to a detachment of Irish volunteers, who marched through the streets with fixed bayonets, headed by Irish pipers, to take possession. Ever since the bank took over the old House of Parliament, after the Union, British soldiers have been on guard, but the premises hereafter will be in the custody of the Provisional Government.

Difficulty Understood

"Do you know how to make the repairs on a car?" "Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "I know exactly what work has to be done and how hard it is. That's the reason I always head for a repair shop and hire a regular workman."

Self Appreciation

"People very rarely know their own good or bad points." "It's the same way with a turkey," replied Farmer Corntosse. "He stuts around showin' off his feathers 'stead of braggin' about how good he is to eat."

RUSTICO NOTES

Mr. Abraham Peters has purchased the store and dwelling house at Oyster Bed Bridge formerly owned by Mr. Joseph Gallant. Mr. Peters intends starting business on the first of April. His many friends wish him every success.

Mr. Jerome Diagle has sold his farm to Mr. Leon Doucette. This former will occupy the house till the first of June when he intends going to Boston.

The many friends of Mr. Joseph J. Doucette are very sorry to learn that he has been indisposed for the last few weeks. Mr. Doucette while attending the Supreme Court in Charlottetown contracted a heavy cold which about with Asthma makes it very trying for him. In the meantime we are glad to learn that he is always improving.

The members of the Society "L'Assomption" assembled for the purpose of organizing a game of "whist" and a Pic Social which were held in Rustico Hall on Feb. 20th. Considering the unfavorable condition of the roads there being about fifty tables taken up Cards were indulged in from 7.30 till 9.30 after which the pies were sold. The lucky winners for the evening were 1st prize, Mrs. Curtis Doucette, 2nd prize, Mr. Leo Doinon, while the third prize was won by Mr. Leo Gallant. On Monday Feb. 27th quite a number of friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallant to spend the evening. Needless to say we all had a jolly good time. For words cannot express the feelings of those present, being so very much, it being one of the jolliest and best gatherings held in Rustico for a long time. The violinists for the occasion were Ray and Ben Doucette, and Wilfred and Curtis Doucette. There was also a good deal of singing which formed no mean part of the programme. Our popular singer, Mr. Albert Gallant sang quite a number of songs, besides there being several choruses. The accompanists were the Messrs. Beatrice McKenna and Juliette Doucette. Mrs. (Dr.) McKenna also gave some beautiful selections on the piano. About eleven o'clock luncheon was served by the hostess in her usual grand style, and after all had done justice to some thereof some fancy dancing performed. Special mention must be made of the pair dancing executed by Messrs. Albert Gallant and James Steven-
