JAMES STEWART, IN "MAGIC TOWN" AT CAPITOL

How an unexpected romance causes an upheaval in a model American community is hilariously revealed in Robert Riskin's absorbing production, "Magic Town", co-starring James Stewart and Jane Wyman.

Rip Smith, fast-talking, self-confident young man, goes to Grandview and, at the same time, is thinking a change that would spoil the town for Rip's purposes. Rip thwarts Mary's plans but later succeeds in winning her confidence. Only when chaos overtakes the community and its people, do Rip and Mary realize they are in love, and join forces to bring the situation back to normal. James Stewart was one of the outstanding roles of his career, while Jane Wyman, as the heroine, has a triumphant characterization. Lloyd Cutcliffe. 100 yard dash, girls 14 years, 1. Something further on what we said recently regarding the very large number of strikeouts pitchers get in these parts. We saw recently where Branch Rickey, now of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said that if a pitcher pitched more innings than he allowed hits, and struck out more men than he gave walks to, he was doing well. The last part of his remark was what interested us, and we started to look up some Big League records. We found that in 1946, Howie Pollet of the Cardinals was the National League's leading pitcher. In 266 innings he struck out 107 batters and issued 86 walks. This figures out to about 3 1-2 strikeouts a game, and not quite 3 bases on balls per game. Imagine that! And Pollet was the best pitcher in the league.

For purpose of comparison we give you the records of four of our local pitchers, whose work is fairly typical of the pitching in general in our league:

Table with columns: Name, IP, SO, BB. Mickus, R. C. A. F. 34 41 7; Stewart, Kinmen 24 26 5; Powell, Red Sox 20 19 3; Arsenault, Legion 14 19 1

Stewart, the highest, averages 13 1-2 strikeouts per game, and Powell, the lowest, averages 8 1-2 strikeouts per game. Taking the four together, they average about 1 1-2 bases on balls per game.

Feller, the strikeout king, averages slightly under 8 1-2 strikeouts per game, the same as our lowest man, so you can see what a piker Rapid Robert is after all. The comparison seems to indicate that down here in the sticks the pitchers are away ahead of the hitters, as compared to the relationship between pitcher and batter in the Big Leagues. The larger number of walks in the big show may be because the pitchers are continually shooting at the corners rather than the heart of the plate, while our boys can get away with a lot of shots right on the bull's eye.

The local Legionaires, after losing their first three games, have put on a victory polka that has taken them from the cellar to a position where they are breathing down the necks of the leading Kinmen. This, in spite of the fact that they have lost their ace pitcher, "Joe" Bernard. Last year, Bernard, being the peerless pitcher that he was, was inclined to get
