VISITING THE ISLAND—Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Atkinson, of Montreal, are visiting in Port Elgin, N. B., and Prince Edward Island.—S.

VISITING SUMMERSIDE—Mr. and Mrs. McCintock, of Chicago, Mrs. J. V. Mersereau, of Chatham and Mrs. L. S. Brown, of Moncton, N. B., are visiting Summerside, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Steves. The ladies are sisters of Mr. Steves. Mr. McCintock is a large contractor and is very interested in the new school building.—S.

ANNUAL GOLF CLUB DANCE—The annual Golf Club Dance held in Holman's toyland on Friday evening was a great success. In addition to the dancing was a delightful program of music. Mrs. Gladys Bell Owen's very fine selections of light opera pieces were very much enjoyed. Mr. Earle Schurman and Mr. Lowell Hancock gave some fine solos. The hostesses were Mrs. E. T. Tanton and Miss Flossie Hunt. There were some novelty dances which added to the enjoyment of the evening.—S.

SLUGGERS WIN MCMURDO CUP—The Sluggers clinched the Town League championship Friday night on the school diamond by winning their third straight victory over the Eagles, 9-1. "Biff" Howatt pitched a wonderful game and was only robbed of a shut-out by "Poney" Daley, who scored the Eagles lone marker in the 6th inning on a passed ball. Although the Eagles worked hard from start to finish they could not cope with the sensational brand of ball dished up by the Sluggers. At the conclusion of the game amid the cheers of fans and players Dr. McMurdo presented Manager Harris of the Sluggers with the cup which he so kindly donated to the Town League. Thus concludes the most successful ball season that Summerside has enjoyed for a good many years, and it is the sincere hope of not only the players but also the many ball fans that next year will prove equally successful. The line-up was as follows:—Sluggers: Catcher, J. Schurman; pitcher, "Biff" Howatt; 1st base, W. Peters; 2nd base, D. Stewart; 3rd base, A. Wilson; short stop, H. Warren; left field, L. Gallant; centre field, J. Wilson; right field, G. Lockhart. Eagles: Catcher,

The motorist whose car had come to a sudden standstill quickly diagnosed the trouble, and then applied at a neighboring cottage for assistance.

"Pardon me," he said to the woman who answered his knock "do you by chance possess any lubricating oil?"

"The woman shook her head. "Any oil will do," said the motorist hopefully; "caster oil if you have any."

"I ain't got it," said the woman, "but I could fix you up with a dose of salt."

Nelson's Travels In America Traced

HALIFAX, N. S. July 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Having dropped for a time the argument about a suitable place to erect a monument to Leif Erickson and his adventurous Norsemen, supposed to have lived in Nova Scotia 900 years ago, local historians now are paying attention to the dispute as to whether or not Horatio Nelson walked the streets of Halifax before he became a British naval hero.

Many have contributed to the argument during the last few weeks, but W. D. Taunton and George Mullane, two veteran newspapermen, seem to be more aggressive than the others. Taunton, who writes under "I. C. R." and other by-lines, is inclined to believe Nelson visited Halifax, while Mullane, sometimes known as "Occasional," says "no."

Here is some of Taunton's ammunition: "Horatio Nelson is on the carpet now. Some folk are trying to prove that he was in Halifax at one time during his naval career. Others deny point blank that he ever saw the clouds over Halifax. And so the discussion goes merrily on. 'I. C. R.' does not desire to butt in on such a momentous question, but he may be permitted to say that Horatio Nelson, the victor of Trafalgar, was attached as man and boy to the British North American and West India squadron and I hardly think the local historians will dispute me when I say that it is more than probable that squadron visited Halifax. In fact, it was the custom, as it was the custom of later years, for the British North American and West India squadron to summer at Halifax and winter in the West Indies, and I have it in black and white that while in the West Indies Horatio Nelson took unto himself a wife. Down in the little island of Nevis, near St. Christopher's, there is a little church called 'The Fig Tree Church.' When Canadians visit that island they seek out that church, especially on Sundays, and after the service the pastor will ask them if they would care to see Horatio Nelson's signature at one shilling per 'I. C. R.' paid his shilling along with a lot of other Canadians and the preacher produced the marriage register and displayed Horatio Nelson's signature. He married a widow Nesbit, perhaps none too readily, but he married her legally and formally, and she wasn't Lady Hamilton either. A tablet to the memory of Dr. Nesbit, his wife's first husband, is there on the wall and in the main aisle is a memorial slab to the memory of Alexander Hamilton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence in the U. S., long, long before it contained the 18th amendment. That is all the proof I have to offer that Nelson was in Halifax for it stands to reason that if he fleet he was attached to sailed up our harbor. He was on board one of the ships. Unless, perhaps, he did not want to come in and they placed him on the outer automatic or whatever buoy was there at the time, and left him there till they picked him up a few months or weeks later. Of course it is understood that at the time Nelson is presumed to have been on this station he was not 'Lord' Nelson, but a midly or a sub-lieutenant and at best a captain. It is possible his shipmates called him 'Rach' or some appropriate nickname. The British navy from its very beginning always had lads, sons of titled parents, among the complement of petty officers, but they never presumed on their rank or family connection. In other words, they cut very little ice in the public eye, and it is just possible Nelson roamed the streets of Halifax with his shipmates and behaved like any other well bred youngster."

Mullane endeavors to support his claim by tracing Nelson's movements in America, like this: "There is a great difference of opinion about Nelson when he was in America. Some writers say that he dropped anchor in Halifax Harbor. Others claim that in all the time he was in America he was not in Halifax Harbor (or what was then known as Chebucto Bay). He

THE RUBY

The ruby, birthstone of those fortunate ones born in the month of July, is a fortune-teller! At least, it has long been so considered by many who have believed that they could read in the changing shadows of this rare "lord of gems," the foreboding of good or evil. The startling talismanic quality of this most precious of precious stones was instanced notably in the case of the famous Black Prince Ruby. This historic gem was thought to have turned the tide of battle at Agincourt, when, flashing in the helmet of King Henry V, it saved the life of that monarch as he was beset by assassins. This same ruby now occupies the place of honor in the state crown of King George V.

In the East, this rare stone is believed to confer invulnerability, though, to attain this magic power, it is not sufficient to wear a ruby; the stone must be inserted in the flesh, they say, actually to become a part of its owner's body!

There are so many legends concerning the ruby, each told with luck in 1850—and disappeared. The lucky finder of the Throne Ruby should certainly be generous enough to notify the anxious jewel world of his signal discovery.

Carat for carat, rubies of the first quality are rare and consequently more valuable than diamonds of a corresponding grade. In this most true story of rubies which holds all the thrill of historical romance and buried treasure—a mystery the gem world would give much to solve. Where is the Throne Ruby? After a dramatic career beginning so far as there is record, when Timur plundered Delhi in 1398, this gorgeous stone was taken to England, an imposing array of authority, that even a modern skeptic finds himself trying to decide whether the first ruby was hatched from the head of a dragon, or snatched from the head of a dragon, or that rubies really are the concentrated tears of Buddha!

But all legends aside, there is a precious material it is possible to concentrate the greatest amount of wealth in the least possible bulk for a ruby equal to a "king's ransom," can be carried in the corner's of one's waistcoat pocket.

The water lily is the harmonious flower for this month.
