

The Importance of Making Your Will

No man at present in possession of good health, can tell just how soon he will meet with some fatal illness or accident. In case no will has been made the Court must appoint an official Administrator who will close out the estate in as short a time as possible—and sometimes at a loss.

relative may share in the distribution of a deserving friend may be overlooked. In the same way an intended bequest to a society, benevolent institution, church or college must of necessity be left out.

PRINCE OF WALES COLLEGE BANQUET

could not estimate. Those traditions that were handed down by former students were the influence that was governing and disciplining the institution today, however little or much they might know it. It was the tradition of former years that enabled them to hold that banquet there that night. It was rather interesting to have been at the inception of many of those traditions. It was his good fortune and he thought that also of the Superintendent of Education to have been students at the time when Rugby football was introduced into this province.

It was two students of Prince of Wales that carried to Victoria Park the first goal posts that were erected for playing football in this province. (Applause.) They also happened to be around when the first athletic club was formed; that club was now known as the Abegweit Athletic Club. Abegweit Football Club it was in heydays. At the same time there were formed two other clubs, St. Dunstan's Football Club and that of Prince of Wales College. (Applause.) When he heard that night that they had emerged victoriously from their encounter with St. Dunstan's last year in football, he had made inquiry as to which team it was with which they had competed, and when they recalled those happy memories the struggle they had had with St. Dunstan's first team and had carried off the palm, they must think, when they were told that it was the intermediate team that had been competed with last year, that things were not flourishing with Prince's football. In the days that he was referring to the athletics of the province was confined practically to football. Since then they had seen introduced basketball, hockey, aesthetic dancing (Laughter); and so many branches of athletics had come in that he was not prepared to say but what they were an improvement, only he felt that they dissipated the enthusiasm which often times was centred around one game. (Applause)

GET RID OF POOR COWS

The advice to select out the unprofitable cows has been given time and time again, yet there are many farmers who do not test their cows and know nothing about how many of them are unprofitable. Farmers do not seem to realize that there can be cows in their herd that are absolutely worthless, cows that do not pay for the feed they eat, and yet when the time and trouble of taking care of them, says Michigan Farmer. At first thought it does not look reasonable that cows will fail to pay for the lead they eat, and yet when we test the cows we know very well that this is so. This idea is very strikingly brought out by the results of the world's egg contest, held in Missouri at the experiment station. There were several hundred hens entered from all over the world. Every hen was kept so that a complete record could be made of her eggs. Each hen was tested individually, just as we test our cows. The ordinary farmer, of course, finds it impossible to keep track of every individual hen. It could be done by having traps, but it takes out a lot of attention to do this. In this laying contest, however, every hen was controlled, that one could tell the number of eggs laid. Now it is surprising to note that two of the hens of these several hundred laid 260 eggs each in one year. A few years ago it was considered wonderful that a hen would produce 200 eggs in a year, out here are two hens that produced 260. Now it is believed that it will not be long before for a hen will be bred that will lay 300 eggs a year. But what I wanted to bring out that in this contest of several hundred hens, 700 I think it was, there were five hens that never laid a single egg during the whole year. What do you think of that? Think of people who believed that they had hens good enough to send to a world's egg-laying contest and then send hens that didn't lay one single egg during the whole year.

Now this being a fact, what must be the condition of the average farmer's flock? It may be that a third of them never lay an egg from one year's end to another. Probably one-fourth of them are laying two-thirds of the eggs, and if he only had some way of selecting out those that did not lay there would be much more profit in hens.

It is just so with cows—only with cows it is easy to select out those that do not produce well. By weighing the milk, testing it for butterfat and keeping track of the feed which each cow consumes we can easily discover the cows that are not producing a profit, and when we find them they ought to be made into bologna sausage because that is all they are good for. Some cows will not change feed into milk economically if given the best of care. They are not dairy cows and consequently should be used for other purposes. Their elimination will increase the value of the herd.

DEBATING CLUB.

Mr. P. Keeping spoke to the toast, "Debating Club". He urged the necessity and value of the cultivation of the ability of public speaking and debating, as besides the fact that it could sometimes if not often be needed, it afforded great pleasure to its participants. Their debating society as one of the most useful factors in their college. Mr. Keeping's ability as a raconteur sent his audience into roars of laughter. He told them of an old gentleman who one day saw a "mule" on the roadside and began to "mule" it, not observing that the mule's mother goat was coming up behind and coming up fast. The arrival of the mother goat was simultaneous with the moment at which the gentleman gave expression to this remark. "I have a tender place for animals." When the laughter had subsided, Mr. Keeping added, "I have a tender place for the Debating Club", an innocent remark that sent the entire company into paroxysms of hilarity, which scarcely abated when the speaker in a lull was heard remarking that a wrong impression had been formed about his last remark.

THE LADIES.

The duty of replying to the important toast, "The Ladies," devolved upon Mr. Bonnell, who handled his subject in an excellent manner. He new, he said, of no act of his life had justified the placing upon him that duty. However, he would try to rise to the occasion. He considered that the importance of that toast entitled it to have been placed first in the list. As a punishment for that not having been done, he felt like opening them there as long as possible, and he could imagine the married men of their company wending their way home at three o'clock in their morning and halting on the doorstep in fear and trembling with the recollection of a broken promise of an early return, and with the reflection that within those walls there was a divinity that shaped their ends. (Laughter.) There was something lacking that night which lent grace and beauty to every occasion, and that something was the happy faces of their young ladies. There was one deepening feature, and that was that could see the presence of "our young ladies shining in the eyes of our young men." Throughout history they had noble examples of women. One of the greatest was Florence Nightingale. He spoke in conclusion

It was significant that the student, who had captured the first prize for being the best all-round athlete had also captured the gold medal; that went to Messrs. McPherson, Riley, Brown, Murray, Boates, McEwen and D. Millar made appropriate little speeches. "Our Host" was the last toast, and with the singing of the National Anthem and the lusty rendering of the College yells, the proceedings were brought to a close at a late hour of night.

Enjoyable diversion was given to the speechmaking by the rendition of a number of musical numbers, the contributors being Profs. Barlow and Davison and Sergt.-Instructor Ir-lam, whose delightful vocal performances were in every case vociferously encored.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS. Prof. J. A. Murphy said that there were some of them present for the last and some for the first time at that function, and to them it was an occasion of great importance. They had come there to celebrate their athletic achievements. While there were not many victories to the official speaker of the football club; and Fred. Donald, who pressed the claims of basket-ball, and urged the importance of more attention being given to the game, and of the college putting itself in a position next year to be represented in the basket ball championships.

LOVELY MILLINERY AT PROWSE BROS LTD.

Yesterday's bright sunshine was ideal for the lovely showing of millinery which Prowse Bros. Ltd., had prepared for the ladies of Charlottetown.

Everybody is at present thinking of spring clothing and new head dress, even the sterner sex, many of whom were in attendance at the opening last evening and chose for themselves a smart hat or one of the caps so plentifully shown.

The ladies however hovered around Miss Rendie, who is certainly one of their favorite milliners. She has visited the leading millinery opening this spring, and has for her large number of customers and exceedingly lovely range of trimmed and untrimmed hats for either choosing.

Touques, abnormally high on one side and flat on the other are shown in great variety. In these the brim is oftentimes evenly wide throughout, the high effect being produced by a wide pleating of ribbon, piece of silk meline or velvet.

No decrease is noticed in the popularity of beretta styles; the latest designs are adapted to meet the new demand for height by having soft folds of their drapery pulled high at one side and supported at this point by fine wire. The bandeau, which may be either circular or else extended over one side (generally the left), is a characteristic feature of the shades.

The new straw hats are neither large nor small, but of medium size and are becoming to the majority of women. The turban is a leader, and many of the new turbans are fashionable in the extreme.

A small turban was shown in shot blue and green, effect, with double rolled brim of straw, shot with pink and white, and finished with a high black jet and feather mount. Price $10.00. A turban with the high effect at the sides, was composed of Tansy and with Terry silk facings of same shade. This hat had a wing on each side mounted with clusters of black and Tango flowers and was priced at $10. One might describe several other very lovely creations and still leave many equally as nice out, which would be regrettable as the showing is perhaps one of the finest ever made. As the showing is to be continued today everyone should endeavor to attend and get a glimpse of the millinery loveliness at Prowse's store.
