THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

NEAH! HAW! HAW! AINT IT A ROT? BOY, THAT'S PUTTIN' IT OVER ON THAT SHAKER!

CARDEN, DID YOU LOOSEN THE CAP ON THAT SHAKER?

ANOTHER ONE OF THOSE PRACTICAL JOCKERS—THEY AMUSE ME LIKE THE BARBERS' TITCH!

WAIT! I'LL HAND HIM THE TAB FOR ANOTHER FILLET MIGNON! WATCH THAT BRAV TURN INTO A DEATH RATTLE!

THERE OUGHTA BE OPEN SEASON ON BIRDS LIKE NEAR AROUND!

I'D LIKE TO PUT SOMETHING OVER ON THAT JERK MYSELF—A TOMBSTONE!

TRYING TO ENJOY A BITE WITH ONE OF THESE BLIGHTS, THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

Thank to

Green Bay and Vicinity

Mrs. Peter MacQuaid, Green Bay, was a welcome visitor at the home of Mrs. Eugene MacQuaid, Elmwood, on Thursday evening.

The Green Bay School is progressing favourably under the capable management of Mrs. Mathias Flood.

Among the recent motorists to the Capital on Thursday were Mr. Harold Malone, Peter Murray, Emmet Flood, Albert S. Corney, Francis Flood, John P. MacQuaid and Peter MacQuaid.

Mr. Leonard Kelly, Kelly's Cross, spent Sunday in Green Bay at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pope Costello.

Miss Mabel Groves, Green Bay, was a recent visitor to the City where she was the guest of Miss Etta Costello, Sacred Heart Home, on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Costello spent the week-end in Green Bay at the home of his parents.

Mr. Murchison Groves motored to the City early in the week on business.

Mr. Gage Currie was a recent visitor to Riverdale, accompanied by Orvin Corney.

The many friends of Mr. Jean Malone are wishing him speedy recovery from his recent illness and hope he'll soon be out again.

Bag Of Gold Pieces Creates Disturbance

MACOMB, Ill. Jan 25—(AP)—Melvin Shrier, Carthage, Ill., accountant, strode into a Macomb bar and deposited a bag containing $1,000 in gold pieces on the bar — just as in the days of the wild west.

The bartender, E.E. Kellum, was unappreciative. He charged the incident created a disturbance and Shrier was fined $4.00 for disturbing the peace Saturday.

Police said the bag contained $1,000 in $10 and $20 gold pieces. The said Shrier told conflicting stories about where the money came from. One was that he found it buried in his yard.

and lights, also to purchase some coal for the club. The fees for the evening amounted to three dollars and thirty cents. The officers appointed for the ensuing year were, President: William Miller, Vice President: Lucy Miller, Secretary: James D. McHerron, Treasurer: James D. McHerron, Conventions: D. MacLure, T. S. Reid and Verne Clow. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing volley-ball and various other games. This is the fourth consecutive year for this club which has promoted good wholesome recreation and fellowship among the young people during the winter months. Much of the success accomplished by the League is due Rev. C.D. Henderson who has been of great assistance to the League since its organization in 1946.

The Harvey Girls

By Samuel Hopkins Adams
CHAPTER II

Deborah Rapalle was hungry. She was habitually hungry, as were her parents, two brothers and an elder sister. Only her father refused to admit such weakness. Mr. Rapalle restricted his household to a diet made up of the fruits of the field: Nuts, wheat with milk but no sugar. The family accepted this discipline with a bravado but no sugar. Little Mr. Rapalle frequently wrestled in prayer with this incomprehensible second daughter of his. He suspected her of a tendency to worldliness. At one time she had an ambition to be a librarian, in spite of his admonition that librarians were pitiful for the innocent baited with frivolous and godless books. Then she wanted to study music, an ambition sternly quashed when it was found that instruction included secular music and even love songs.

Not long thereafter her perurbed father surprised little Deborah with a colored ribbon in her hair, and lectured her, more in sorrow than in anger, upon the perils of vanity and self-adornment. "Remember that beauty of face is but a snare," he warned her sadly.

Starried, Deborah ran upstairs and made shift to examine her reflection in the windowpane, no mirror being permitted in the house. Was there really the possibility of beauty in that gaunt, owl-eyed face of which the wavery counterpane confronted her? It was a new thought. Perhaps she might be pretty in a way, if she weren't so thin. A surge of repressed and starved femininity rose within her.

On a September Saturday, lugubrious and chill with rain, the postman arrived with a missive which Mr. Rapalle proved to be for Deborah. "Is that the Sunday School leaflet?" he inquired.

She concealed the card when her father was called out to consult with the postman about a missent letter. This she was able to smuggle it away for later reading. It was from a former schoolmate who had left for California.

Look on the other side (Nina Clark had written and you'll see how they feed us on these trains. Wish you were with us. It's a grand country.

P.S.—Do you remember that sawd-off, freckle-faced Branley girl from somewhere down Egypt way? I saw her waiting on table at one of the Harvey restaurants. She is crazy about it; pretty near persuaded me to write for a job myself if I weren't going to marry Simon Fordyce. You knew, didn't you?

The reverse of the card was a Fred Harvey bill of fare. There were thirty-four luscious items. Deborah went through the list, savored each in her fantasized imagination. At Fleet of Whitefish her tender mouth began to water. At Roast Sirloin of Beef with Boiled Sweet Potatoes, Asparagus and Sugar Beets, her eyes followed suit. Apple and Mince Pie with New York Ice Cream—it was almost too much! But the culminating and inspiring line was in Nina's writing at the foot of the card.

"And they always ask you if you don't want a second help."

"Pressing the menu to a spot between her rebellious heart and her craving stomach, Deborah ran to the door, blurted it, and wrote a letter to Nina Blake.
