THE FIERCE ONE

Too often those who chance take Forget how much may be at stake. —Old Mother Nature.

In the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows most of the folks in fur and feathers who live there take chances every day of their lives. They have to. And all too often the chances taken are with their lives. It has to be so. They can't help it. But they can do something about it. They can always remember that their lives are at stake and never take unnecessary chances. But they are just like boys and girls and altogether too many older folk—forgetful and careless. Forgetfulness and carelessness are inseparable. Where you find one you find the other. So those who take chances can't afford to be forgetful or careless.

He was down from farther North, where his real home was

Peter Rabbit learned this long ago, but he is one of those who have to learn things over and over again. He was doing just that now as he ran as fast as his long strong hind feet could take him over the ground toward the dear Old Briar-patch. Of course, he used his front feet, too; but when Peter runs it really is his long hind feet that take him bounding over the ground.

One, flying so fast he couldn't check himself in time, crashed into the tangle after him. Peter darted along the little path, but the tangled brambles stopped the great Hawk. He beat against them with his great wings. They pulled feathers from his coat. Then he stood glaring in with such fierceness that Peter and Mrs. Peter shook with fright although they knew they were safe. They could not help it.

Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson

A DEFENSIVE "MUST"

The first duty of a defender is to avoid being "thrown-in," if that unpleasant fate can be avoided. Observe today's deal:

South is declarer.

♠ 6 3 2	♠ 10 7 4
♥ 8 4	♥ 10 9 7 3
♦ A 9 3	♦ 8 6 4
♣ K Q J 9	♣ 10 7 4

West is dummy.

♠ 10 7 4	♠ 10 9 7 3
♥ 8 4	♥ 10 9 7 3
♦ A 9 3	♦ 8 6 4
♣ K Q J 9	♣ 10 7 4

The bidding:

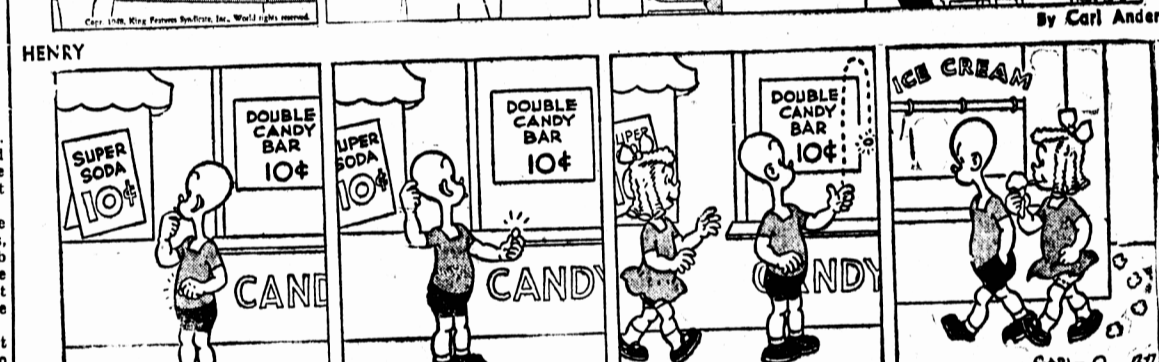

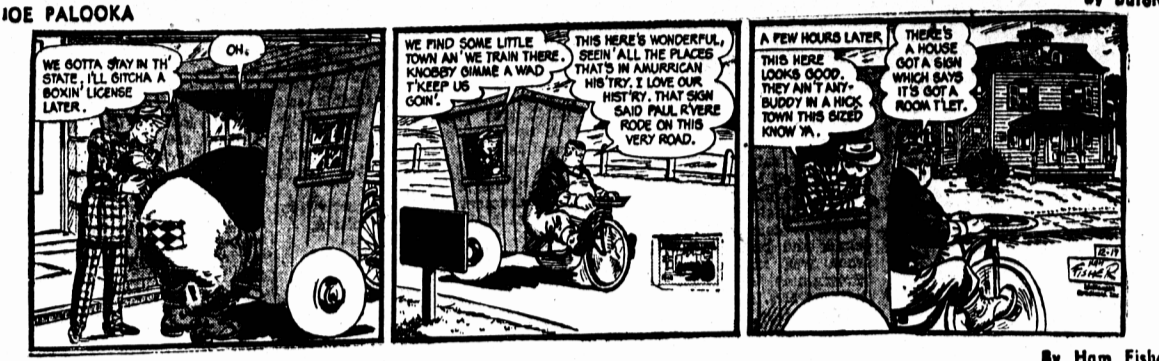

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♠	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the spade king. East played the seven-spot, and South held up the ace. The spade king followed, and this time East followed suit with the four.

South now cashed dummy's five diamonds, discarding two hearts, while East discarded the club seven, the heart three and the heart seven, in that order. West let go the ten of clubs and the five of spades.

South, sensing that the heart finesse would not work, decided to try for a throw-in play. He cashed the club ace and led a second club. As he had hoped, this put West on lead, and now that defender erred badly, ignoring or overlooking the fact that two more spade tricks would not defeat the contract. West laid down the jack and nine of spades, and then could only lead a heart up to South's tenace. Thus, the contract was fulfilled.

Considering East's discarding, it should have been obvious to West that he could not afford to lead a heart up to the closed hand. Moreover, from East's follow-suit plays in spades, West should have known that his partner had the spade ten. Thus, after being thrown in with the club, West should have led back the nine way where brambles and brambles grew closer together and more tangled. It was just as well. Peter plunged in at the entrance to one of their private little paths cut through the brambles. The Fierce

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
