EMPLOYMENT REPORT

OTTAWA, May 10 — (CP) — Industrial employment in Canada March 1 was slightly lower than a month earlier, the Bureau of Statistics reported today on the basis of figures from 19,938 firms. However, the Bureau reported its index, on the base 1926 equals 100, was at a new high for late winter, standing at 189.2 compared with 180.5 Feb. 1 and 188.9 on March 1, 1948.

BARRED FROM THE U.S.

TORONTO, May 10 — (CP) — Mrs. Julia Christensen, Canadian business manager of Magazine Digest, was refused entry into the United States today by U.S. immigration officials. Mrs. Christensen was being transferred to the New York office of the monthly publication. Immigration officials said her exclusion was in line with a policy of barring those whose presence is considered not in the best interests of the United States.

Happy-Go-Lucky

By Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

Both of them were so excited that night they could not go to sleep for hours. Tony was full of radiant plans, but they were not the plans that he would have made a year before. He said they would buy a house in some good suburb out from New York, where Skeeter could have a big lawn to play on and a swimming pool, some place close to the best schools when he got old enough to go.

Tony put in all of November on the revision of the play. He had not wasted the time he had spent on the other after all. It came in very handy when he was polishing up the rough draft. He mailed the completed manuscript to Pinkney Law on Thanksgiving Day. They fairly held their breath the next few days. But a week went by, then two weeks, without a word.

"He can't be much interested," faltered Tony, "or we'd have heard before this."
"On the contrary," insisted Barbara, "if the play had been impossible he'd have said so at once."
She was certain that the delay was a good omen. She convinced Tony she was right. Christmas was coming on. Everything Tony saw in the shop windows he wanted to buy either for Skeeter or Barbara. He fretted because he did not hear from the producer.

But just three days before Christmas Eve the play came back with a curt letter from Pinkney Law's secretary. The letter said Mr. Law was sorry to have to reject Angel Unaware by Mr. Anthony Blake, but while the play was not without merit it was not in line with Mr. Law's policy.

"That's that," muttered Tony, looking as if he had been stabbed. "I guess by now I ought to know I can't write."
"You can write!" exclaimed Barbara indignantly. "There is nothing wrong with the play. It simply shows Mr. Pinkney Law is not as smart a judge of the drama as he is supposed to be. Won't he be sorry when some other producer snaps it up?"
Tony tried to smile. "If one does,"

"Everybody can't be that dense," insisted Barbara.
They mailed the play out again on Christmas Eve. They tried to act as if they were not disheartened. They had a tree for Skeeter and Tony raided the ten-cent store for toys. He gave Barbara a little pink silk jacket to wear when she had breakfast in bed, except of course Barbara never had time for breakfast in bed. She gave him a pipe and a tobacco pouch because Tony said a pipe was cheaper than cigarettes. It would have been a dreary Christmas except for Skeeter, who saved the day.

when they see it doesn't mean the play isn't good. Look how often Abie's Irish Rose was turned down before somebody took a chance on it, and it ran for years and years."
"Sure," said Tony, beginning to look more cheerful.
"Where are you going to send it next?"
"You really think it is worth trying again, if we have to go without stockings to pay the postage?" cried Barbara.
"Tony squeezed her hand. "You're a trump, kid."
"You're not so bad yourself, Mr. Blake," whispered Barbara, kissing him.

However, when for the third time the play returned without having attracted a ripple of interest, even Barbara's courage faltered while Tony's went into a complete decline. "Might as well stick the thing into the fire," he muttered and made as if to do so.
"No, No!" cried Barbara seizing his wrist.
Tony shrugged his shoulders. "All right," he said. "We'll save it as a reminder that I once thought I had a brilliant future. But put it behind the wallpaper or something. I never want to set eyes on the darned thing again."

Barbara found a box and laid the play away, along with a few tears, in the bottom of the dresser drawer. "I still say it's good," she insisted tremulously.

Tony made a grimace. "They don't play off on that, Mrs. Blake." Their finances were at a low ebb. It had been a cold winter. They had used a lot of coal and the price of coal and everything in the food line had gone up. Try as she would, Barbara could not hold their expenses within the budget. They ran a little into debt during January and again in February.

Happenings Of The Week

a holiday in Montreal and Windsor, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Currie have returned to their home in Summerside from Moncton, N. B., where they spent a few days visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. G. W. Hollett and Mrs. J. I. Boyd of Fort William, Ontario, arrived in Summerside to spend Mother's Day with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Matheson. They left yesterday morning on return.

On Thursday evening Mrs. C. E. Corney, Summerside, entertained at bridge in honor of her sisters, Mrs. G. W. Hollett and Mrs. J. I. Boyd of Fort William, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Willet, Summerside, had as their guests for the week-end, their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Willet and son David, of Moncton, N.B.

Mrs. Chester Robertson spent the week-end in Summerside where her husband is on the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. A. J. Howatt on the death this week of her mother, Mrs. Archibald Gaudet, Tignish.

W.C.T.U. NOTES

LIFE'S READING

I am my neighbor's Bible. He reads me when we meet. Today he reads me in my home. Tomorrow on the street. He may be relative or friend, Or slight acquaintance be; He may not even know my name. Yet he is reading me!

NO ABILITY?

I listened to one of our most faithful workers tell us of her answer when someone she asked to serve made the excuse we so often hear, I have no ability. I pass the recipe on to you:
80% willingness, to work anywhere, or anyhow, God wants us to.
7% faith.
6% determination.
5% perseverance.
2% of what the world calls ability.
This mixture should be mixed very thoroughly and set to rise with the leaven of prayer, in the warm rays of God's love, and then let Him have His way.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE?

Rev. W. W. Judd, writing on beverage alcohol and Christian responsibility in the Church of England Social Service Bulletin, states "Intemperance, like other evils seems to come in cycles. Before they reach a peak, thoughtful people should do something against them. Youth is repelled and disgusted with the drunkard, but alcoholism is more respectable, its dangers not so apparent. Beginners are not aware that it results from habitual moderate use of hard liquors, beer, wine. Every person, old or young, should ask himself, 'Can I be a moderate drinker, for in the greatest moderation there is danger for our youth. It is so easy for temperance to become intemperance, for moderation to become excess. The rising tide today is bound to inundate large social areas of society in the habit of women drinking in public places and in their social circles has become respectable. There is a challenge to our youth and older church people to give leadership in the field of total abstinence. In the life of the community the example and practice of Christian people is of great importance. They must always remember their weaker brother and help bear the infirmities of the weak. Temperance is therefore a bounden duty and abstinence, for the sake of others, a splendid privilege."

The government of Madras plans to introduce state-wide prohibition in that province this year. From 75% to 90% former addicts of alcohol in the eight districts which went dry in 1946 are now free of this curse. Money spent on liquor is now going for food, clothing and happier homes.

TEXAS DRYS REFUSE LIQUOR-DEALERS' GIFT

It is worth noticing that, a few weeks ago, the Dallas Retail Liquor Dealers' Association sent cheques for twenty-five thousand and thirty thousand dollars respectively, to two Texas Universities, Baylor and Southern Methodist, the first under Baptist control, the second under Methodist control. These two well-known universities are both glad to receive contributions for their schools, but not from liquor dealers. Both cheques were returned with thanks. The universities said that they were fighting the liquor traffic and race-track gambling, and could not accept contributions from such sources.

NORWICH, England — (CP) — Rats are causing much damage on Norfolk farms by eating newly-planted spring corn. In one district it is estimated about 10 per cent of the corn has been lost.

DOVER, England — (CP) — A new lifeboat will be used here this summer. Named Southern Africa, she is the gift of the South African branch of the Lifeboat Institution.

In a range, in common with most manufactured articles, it is the results obtained that measure the worth of the performance. It is on this point that Fawcett proudly stands on its reputation for giving continuous cooking and baking satisfaction for over 96 years. The result of years of experience, the new Fawcett models shown in this catalogue offer you scientific and engineered cooking advancements that are, as always, "just ahead of today." All Fawcett ranges over the years have been literally packed with the features that mean better cooking, better eating and easier living. A conscientious determination on the part of the management and the skilled craftsmen of the company to maintain this amazing record, partially accounts for Fawcett's continual efforts to produce only quality ranges. It is worthwhile to remember that there is only one grade of quality in a Fawcett range — top. Never has nor never will a Fawcett range sacrifice this hard earned and well deserved reputation of quality — for price. "NO ONE EVER REGRETTED BUYING QUALITY"
