ROBERT T. LINCOLN, SON OF EMANCIPATOR, LAST OF NAME IN DIRECT LINE

In his seventy-seventh year, Robert Todd Lincoln, the only living son of Abraham Lincoln, is now once more a citizen of the District of Columbia. Immediately after he retired from active professional life, when he was identified with the great village, Chicago, he went back to Washington to live in the unpretentious house at 1775 N. Street, but he soon removed to the old Laird home at 3014 N. street a fine old place, long known as a social centre, which occupies an imposing site on the high ground of Georgetown and affording a magnificent view down the Potomac and across the river to Arlington.

Last of the name in a direct line, for his daughter is married and his only son died from Typhoid fever in England, Mr. Lincoln is living a retired life befitting his advanced years, but he is by no means to be regarded as a recluse. He still preserves many of his former professional connections with large corporate bodies, and is an active, if not strict, business man. He reads and studies continuously, keeps two stenographers in copy and is well versed in current national and international affairs.

Robert Todd Lincoln was born in Springfield (Ill.) on August 1, 1843, He was educated at Illinois State University and at Phillips Exeter Academy. He afterward attended the Harvard Law School, but interrupted his studies to service in the civil war, where he was a captain on the staff of Gen. Grant. At the close of the war he completed his course and was admitted to the Illinois State Bar, in 1867. He took up his practice in Chicago and soon after married Mary Harlan, the daughter of Senator James Harlan of Iowa. In those early days he took an active part in the conventions of the Republican party, but was never at any time a candidate for any public office. Nevertheless his intellect and personality marked him for service, and public office sought him.

He was chosen for the cabinets of both presidents Garfield and Arthur for the position of Secretary of War, and in that office displayed marked administrative ability. As United States Minister to Great Britain (1889-1893) he served his county well and commanded the admiration and respect of British officialdom. Just before the McKinley campaign a few enthusiastic friends of his rushed into print with the statement that "Bob" Lincoln was the logical nominee for President, that he was the only man who could carry the country and unite it as it should be united. Lincoln not only discouraged the propaganda but repudiated it.

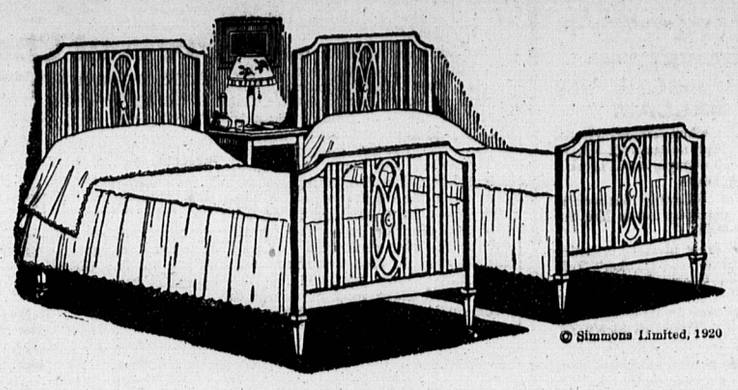
Robert Lincoln, as his father before him, applied himself very diligently to the study of law and became a man of outstanding ability in his profession. Unlike his father however, he specialized in corporated law and the protection of syndicated interests rather than in individual suits. He was special counsel, for the Pullman Palace Car Company, and after the death of George W. Pullman became president of the company, which position he resigned in 1911 for that of chairman of its board of directors. He was vice-president of the Commonwealth-Edison Company, and director of the Chicago Telephone Company. He has for years had an office in the Pullman building in Chicago, in which city he necessarily lived for years and afterward spent much of time. He is a member of the Golf and University clubs of Chicago and of the Union, University and Harvard clubs of New York.

There is little physical resemblance between the son and Abraham Lincoln. Robert takes after his mother's family, the Todds. He is short and plump, and even as a young man moved rather ponderously. His complexion is like that of his father, dark and swarthy, and his voice, rich, deep and sonorous, is another splendid paternal inheritance. Those living who heard the Emancipator in one or other of his great speeches have marked the likeness in volume, intonation and timbre as a thing remarkable.

On the subject of his father the son is naturally not only deeply interested but jealous. The mention of it is sufficient to draw him out of his natural and acquired reserve. He will not permit even a slight misrepresentation of his great father's name and fame, however innocently or ignorantly it may be made. And of pictures and status commemorative of Lincoln the son is equally critical. He was displeased with the Bernard statute of Lincoln and therefore took comfort n its rejection in London. The Saint Gaudens Statute of Lincoln in Lincoln Park, Chicago, has the son's endorsement as an excellent likeness of his father and a good work of art.

"Tad," as he was lovingly called when a child played about the Springfield home, is a man of quiet manners, always well dressed, with gray brown eyes, always sparkling with intellect and a closely trimmed beard, now almost white, of the Vandyke type. He has distinctly disliked publicity of any kind, and the younger generation hardly know of his long and proud record of public service, much less of the nature of the man. But he has many acquaintances, especially in Washington, and many friends to whom he is always accessible. While in his new home Mr. Lincoln will be able to hold himself removed, as is his desire, from the social and political hubbub of the capital; he will there, as he has always done, exercise a simple but retiring hospitality.

Why do Some Folks Dream All Night



IF you are one of those healthy individuals who "never" dream, be sure you are a deep sleeper. Your sleep does you lots of good.

You'll never get sound, refreshing sleep unless you relax. You can't relax in a bed that rattles or groans—or on a spring that squeaks every time you move.

The least noise keeps the nerves on edge. You may not wake up—but your nerves will. That's one reason you dream.

* * *

WHAT you need for deep, dreamless sleep all night is a perfectly quiet bed and a spring that invites complete relaxation.

That is why folks sleep so much better on a Simmons Metal Bed and a Waldorf Box Spring.

The Simmons Bed is noiseless. It locks firm at the corners. The corner locks are made of pressed steel—have much longer bearing surfaces than the average—fit true and snug—not a creak, rattle, or feeling of unsteadiness.

The Simmons Pressed Steel Corner Locks are protected by basic patents—exclusive with Simmons Limited, not to be duplicated or imitated.

And these patented corner locks have made possible the Three-piece Bed—the new Simmons idea—the spring forming a single unit with the side rails.

* * *

THE Waldorf Box Spring really does what you have always wanted a spring to do.

It invites complete relaxation.

It supports the body at ease on fine resilient spring coils—each coil conforming freely to the contours, so that the spine is perfectly rested, whether one sleeps on the back or on the side.

Simmons Waldorf Box Spring is covered with ticking of the finest grade and great wearing quality, in new and attractive designs.

It fits firmly on the bed—never sags or humps, never loses its resiliency.

And Simmons Mattresses and Pillows are in every way worthy to go with Simmons Metal Beds and Waldorf Box Springs.

THE most advanced thought of the day about sleep is "a separate bed for each sleeper," either in a separate room or in a Twin Bed. Physicians have been urging Twin Beds for years—and Simmons Limited has long made a specialty of Twin Beds.

They are welcomed by people of nice feeling everywhere.

* * *

ALL leading merchants have Simmons Metal Beds, Waldorf Box Springs, Simmons Mattresses and Pillows.

Simmons Beds offers you a wonderful choice of brass, and enamel in colors and in beautiful natural wood effects to match your bedroom decorations.

And when you are selecting your Simmons Beds with an eye to their appearance in the room, you will see that Simmons has for the first time established beautiful and authoritative design in Metal Beds.

If you like, we will send you the names of merchants in this community who can give you Simmons Beds, Waldorf Box Springs, Mattresses and Pillows.

CORRECTED

Mr. Hughes, the Australian Premier, who has recently announced his intention of retiring altogether from public life in a certain eventuality tells the following amusing story concerning the days when he was a school-teacher in London:

"I once wrote on a blackboard," these words. The toast was drank in silence,' and then asked my class, 'Can anyone tell me what the mistake in this sentence is?'

"The pupils pondered. Then a little girl held up her hand, and at a nod from me went to the board and wrote the following correction: "The toast was ate in silence."
