

How the great strike of Coal Miners in Great Britain is benefiting Hewson Pure Wool Textiles, Limited.

At first glance this would seem altogether unlikely, however, it is a fact that this much to be regretted strike is proving of considerable benefit to this well known Amherst industry. It is another instance of "ill bloweth the wind that profiteth nobody."

paratively small number of such mills in Canada, and the favorable regard in which the lines of the Hewson Pure Wool Textiles are held, these mills are receiving a large share of such business.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to conquer in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for literature to J. C. KENNEDY & CO., Toledo, O. BURIED IN QUEBEC.

Sir Walter Scott's Brother Lies in Little Graveyard. Every spot in Old Quebec is historical, and if there is not a sermon in every stone there are at least stories associated with most of them—stories that recall men and events connected with the making of Canada and the Empire.

Some of these remembrances dominate the place—battlefields where deeds of valor were done and the current of the history of this continent turned into new channels; forts and battlements that have withstood sieges; buildings associated with liberations and enactments that are the landmarks of our constitutional history. Besides these landmarks there are less conspicuous remembrances of the past to be met with at almost every turn, and which supply the most subtle hints of the great historical picture in which the fork-crowned heights of Cape Diamond are the central object.

Here is a little churchyard in the very heart of the city which illustrates the truth of this statement. Perhaps ten minutes' walk from the Terrace, up St. John Street, which is carried through the outer wall of the ancient fortifications, stands a stone church in Gothic style so generally adopted by the Church of England. One wall of the building stands close to the street and the notice board at the main entrance announces that it is St. Matthew's Church.

Close to the gateway and not more than a couple of feet from the wall separating the churchyard from the street, is a weather-stained slab of grey limestone somewhat less than four feet in height, and shaped at the top into a Gothic arch. The stone stands firm and erect, and although its inscription is well-worn, it can still with a little care be wholly read. It is in these words: "Sacred to the memory of Thomas Scott, Esquire, late Paymaster of the 70th Regiment, who departed this life Feb. 4, 1825. And to his daughter, Barbara Scott, who died on the 5th of Oct. 1821, in the 5th year of her age."

In the graves thus simply marked repose the remains of the brother and the niece of Sir Walter Scott, "the Wizard of the North," and one of the great literary geniuses of the eighteenth century. In 1808 Sir Walter Scott wrote a brief memoir of his early life, bringing it down to the year 1792, when he and his friend, William Clark, were admitted to the practice of law in their native Scotland. In that brief and partial autobiography Sir Walter tells of his family. "My father and mother," says he, "had a very numerous family, no fewer, I believe than twelve children, though only five survived very early youth. My eldest brother Robert was bred in the King's service and was in the most of Rodney's battles." Later he entered the service of the East India Company, made two voyages to the east, and died a victim of the climate.

Conserving the Forests. The progress of the conservation policy of Canada, as applied to forest resources, depends more upon the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior than upon any other organization. Upon the technical knowledge and executive ability of the officers of the Forestry Branch depends the future of the forest on 16,000,000 acres of Dominion forest reserves, as well as upon the large area of non-agricultural forest land in Western Canada, which for the good of the country may yet be set aside as permanent forest reserves. In addition to looking after Dominion lands the Forestry Branch is now being asked by Eastern land owners to furnish advice as to the best means of securing at the earliest date a profitable crop of timber on waste land or wood lots. In order that the new Rocky Mountain forest reserves may be administered according to the latest scientific knowledge and the best experience, the Forestry Branch is now making detailed studies of the habits of the merchantable species of trees on the eastern slopes of the Rockies in Alberta and has sent one of the men in charge of the work to study the systems of forest management practiced during the past few years by the Forest Service in the national forests of Montana.

New Idea in Almanacs. Some person in Collingwood has created a brand new idea in almanacs. It is entitled the "Collingwood Almanac and Encyclopedia," and contains the brief story of one thousand events in the history of the town. These are, of course, arranged in months, with one or more events recalled by each day. The historical data was compiled by Mr. David Williams, a past president of the Canadian Press Association and a persistent student of local history. The idea in this almanac is one which might be taken up in other cities with a view to making citizens more familiar with the local history of the city and district. Local patriotism is as valuable as national.—Courier.

Influx For 1911. Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration, has handed out official figures of immigration for the calendar year 1911. These show a total immigration of 351,000 as against 311,000 in 1910. One hundred and thirty thousand persons crossed the border from the United States last year as compared with 121,451 in 1910. Immigration from Great Britain totaled 175,000, which represents an increase of 30 per cent from Scotland and 20 per cent from England over 1910. There was a relative increase from Europe and other foreign countries. Peach Replaces Pear.
