TRIO RESCUED FROM FLOODED ENGLISH MINE

Swim To Safety After Being Trapped Since Saturday In Mine Shaft.

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
PENZANCE, England, Jan. 25—A breathlessly watched mining accident ended tonight on an heroic note as three men reached safety after being trapped in the flooded Whealreath tin mine here since Saturday.

Entombed under circumstances that recalled the Moose River tragedy in Canada last April, Jack Bates, George Williams and David Sedgmen swam 150 feet through the flooded mine shaft from the cavern where they were imprisoned when water broke into the mine from an old shaft.

Clifford Bowden, another miner of this Cornwall tin-mining district, swam first through the shaft to reach the men who were becoming exhausted from exposure and chilling dampness.

Bowden carried brandy in a sealed container. He told the three men they could swim out as pumps had lowered the surface of the dark water.

Fortified by the brandy they plunged into the water after him and were guided to the spot underground where rescuers had established headquarters.

Amid cheers, they were hoisted to the top of the shaft and sent to their homes in ambulances. Physicians late tonight said they were little the worse for the narrow escape.

The men were caught on Saturday without a chance to escape when a wall of water rushed into the mine. Fellow workers nearer the pit mouth were able to swim to safety and spread word of the accident.

Pumping was immediately begun but hope was gradually being abandoned when on Sunday night faint tapping was heard by the rescuers.

Today 40 men continued pumping ceaselessly and another pump with a capacity of 300 gallons a minute was sent down the shaft to press the work.

Plans were made to send divers through the shaft with food in watertight cans and a beginning had been made on a diamond drill shaft to give the trio air and food, when finally the water reached a level low enough for Bowden to make his successful attempt at rescue.

Rioting Flares In Strike Centre

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
ANDERSON, Ind., Jan. 25—Rioting broke up a meeting of Anderson members of the United Automobile Workers of America here tonight and police chief Joseph Carney said at least six persons were hurt.

The chief estimated a crowd of 2,000 "non-union men" had halted a meeting of the auto workers in the courthouse after throwing eggs and engaging in fist fights.

Police, according to the chief, intervened and conducted Union leaders to safety.

Labor difficulties recently resulted in the closing of two General Motors units here. The guide lamp plant was closed following a "sit down" strike, and Delco-Remy plants shut down because of labor trouble in other parts of the county, officials said.

Reserves Decision Re Contested Will

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
HALIFAX, Jan. 25—R. F. Yeoman, registrar of the Halifax Court of Probate, reserved decision today in the contested will of Mrs. Sarah Croker Giberson after having heard witnesses who had come here from as far away as London, England, and Fredericton, N. B. to testify.

As the prolonged hearing wound to a close, Roy Laurence, Halifax barrister, termed as "neither cogent, clear, satisfactory nor conclusive" the evidence of Harry Croker, aging seaman who "rose from the dead" to claim he was Mrs. Giberson's undivorced first husband.

Mrs. Croker Giberson was found dead in Halifax harbor last summer. Her will, dated two years before her marriage to Blanchard Giberson of Beaconsfield, N.B., left $20,000 to the Salvation Army.

Giberson with Mrs. Lorna Abbott, a daughter of the deceased, are contesting the will jointly on the grounds it was made before the woman's second marriage.

Belfast

Since the beginning of the year Belfast lost two of its landmarks by the death of Mrs. Colin MacKenzie Melville and Mr. John S. Murchison, Point Prim. The late Mrs. MacKenzie would within a few years have reached the century mark and leaves to mourn a son and daughter on the homestead who tenderly cared for her at the last also a daughter residing outside the province. The funeral was held from her late residence on Monday Jan. 18th, the service was conducted by Rev. D. A. MacKinnon Windsor N. S. who supplied the pulpit of St. John's church for the past two Sundays. Interment at Belfast Cemetery.

Hockey at Marshfield

On Saturday night January 23 at Marshfield rink Frenchfort defeated Dunstaffnage in a league game by the score of 6 to 1. The game was fast with only three penalties handed out in the dying moments of the third period. Only for the good tending of Alf. Reed in the Frenchfort net the score would have been much more even. Those who were outstanding on the Frenchfort team were Jimmy Miller and McCallum brothers, and for Dunstaffnage, Lloyd Wakelin and Irving Thompson. A large crowd of hockey fans attended and the game was capably handled by referees G. Adams and M. Darrach.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank MacLeod of Alberta left for their Western home after spending Christmas with Mr. MacLeod's brother Mr. Lawrence MacLeod Orwell. They were also the welcome guests of his sister Mrs. J. A. Martin, Eldon.

If the proposed ferry service becomes a reality it will put Belfast on the map to a certain extent as it leaves from the Southeast part of the district of Fouth Queens. Visions of the highway being extended to make it connect with the city will mean the giving of much-needed employment all around.

Japanese Royalty To Visit Canada

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
TOKYO, Jan. 25—Prince Yasuhito, Chichibu, brother of the Mikado, and Princess Chichibu will make a state visit to Canada while on their way to the coronation in London.

Official announcement was made today that their Imperial Highnesses would again visit the Dominion, which they toured several years ago shortly after their marriage.

The invitation was extended by Canada. The Royal Party will arrive at Vancouver March 29, proceeding by special train to Ottawa for a two-day visit. From the Canadian capital they will go to New York, sailing on the liner Queen Mary for England April 7.

After the coronation, at which Prince Chichibu will represent the Emperor of Japan, the royal couple will make a six-months' European tour, studying political and military matters.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. W. J. PAYNTER

On the last day of the old year 1936 there passed away the great beyond W. J. Paynter, a life long resident of Long River, at the age of sixty years.

The late Mr. Paynter had been in ill health for several months and had entered the Prince County Hospital where it was found necessary to remove him to a Halifax Hospital for treatment but it was found that very little could be done and he returned to his home. He was a great sufferer but bore all with patience and heroism putting his trust in his Saviour.

During his illness he had the best of medical skill and was tenderly nursed by his family, who left nothing undone to give relief. The deceased was a man of sterling character, an industrious and prosperous farmer and a kind neighbour. His genial disposition and ready wit made for him a host of friends. It

The House Not For Her

Into the dead silence that followed that remark Alec said hurriedly: "What about your running and seeing about some tea, my sweet, while Sonia and I have a sit down?"

Chloe nodded, and with rather a curious look at Sonia, went out of the room. Sonia and Alec were alone. She must say something—anything, it didn't matter what, she thought, terrified of the silence.

"I like it enormously, Alec!" she began in a voice she hardly knew for her own. "I congratulate you on your taste. So—so up-to-date it is so convenient and—"

The end of the sentence was lost, for she had turned away, ostensibly to look out of the window but in reality to hide the trembling of her lips.

Feeding Alec's eyes upon her, she said after a moment's struggle with herself.

"I mustn't be long, Alec. I really ought to go now."

"Oh, nonsense. Of course you'll stay to tea. You aren't in such a hurry to get away from my house too, till Alec closed it with a kiss.

"Alec—you mean—?" she gasped, as all that, are you, Sonia?"

"No. Of course not," Sonia said. "Only—"

"Only what, Sonia? You aren't upset about anything, are you, dear?"

He had come round between her and the window. His eyes sought hers. Oh, if she could only hide herself somewhere!

"I threw up her head defiantly. "Upset! No, why should I be?—"

To her horror she realized that a sob had cut short her utterance and that large tears were running her cheeks.

"You are upset! Sonia—my dear!"

He had put an arm round her shoulder, but Sonia shook it off. "I'm not!" she snapped. Then suddenly, unable to keep up the pretence any longer, "Well, then, yes I am, if you want to know. And I simply can't bear any more of it. Let me go, Alec."

"You're not going," Alec said. "And you have got to tell me what it is you can't bear any more of. Tell me, Sonia."

His arm went round her again, so warm and comforting that she hadn't the strength to push it off this time.

"You know perfectly well," she sobbed. "Seeing you in this house, you've furnished for someone else. Seeing you together here. Thinking of you—Oh, I couldn't have believed you'd do it, Alec, after all we've been to each other!"

"And—suppose I haven't done it, Sonia?" Alec said, with his lips very close to her ear. "Listen, dear. This house is my cousin George's house. He and Chloe are getting married next month. All this furniture is theirs. So you see—"

"Alec!"

Sonia's eyes were wide and incredulous, her mouth wide open. "I mean that I've been playing a trick on you, darling! But I simply had to wake you somehow and make you face the facts of the case. For I do want to get married and have a home of my own. I intend to do so, but the only girl I have ever

Troubled with Constipation, Couldn't Sleep; "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Quick Relief.

"For many years I was troubled with constipation," says Miss M. E. Johnston, St. Stephen, N.B. "I was weak, listless, had little appetite; my complexion was broken and I spent a good many nights of broken rest. I started taking Fruit-a-tives, and almost at once was enjoying my food. My complexion improved and I began to sleep soundly the entire night. Fruit-a-tives are made from extracts of fruits and herbs. They act to stimulate the liver and flow of bile; cleanse the elimination tract of wastes and poisons and tend to purify the blood stream of acids that often cause ill-health.
