MELBOURNE, Australia — (CP) — Corrugated aluminum roofing, claimed to be rustless, non-toxic and requiring no painting or maintenance, now is being sold on the Australian market. Initial cost of the product is about double that of iron roofing, but it is more durable and can be carried by lighter roof frames.

LONDON — A scheme of training in the economics of fuel, efficient use of fuel for stokers and boiler house attendants has been announced by the ministry of education as a step in meeting the present shortage of fuel in Britain.

WOOD BORING BEETLES

During the past few years, a number of reports have been received by the Division of Entomology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, of injury to the timbers and interior finish of houses and also to furniture in the Maritime Provinces by beetles which bore into the wood and reduce it to powder. A few specimens and remains, says the Bi-Monthly Progress Report of Forest Insect Investigations indicate that a European species, which is known by the scientific name of Anobium punctatum, is responsible. In all cases the houses were old and situated in the vicinity of the coast.

It appears, says the report, that Maritime conditions of temperature and humidity favour the beetles, especially if the houses are left vacant for a time. Widespread damage is not to be expected, but reports of this type of damage, with specimens, would be of value in determining what measures of control are advisable.

Hope Abandoned Of Saving Minesweeper

HALIFAX, Dec. 4 — (CP) — The merciless Atlantic tonight had all but won another victory over men and ships. With hope for her rescue practically abandoned, the Canadian minesweeper Middlesex was tottering dangerously on the rocky shore of Half Island Point, 15 miles from here, as a rolling surf beat steadily at her sides.

All day seamen from the ill-fated ship, aided by shore parties, removed valuable equipment from the warship with the aid of a breeches buoy.

The ship, they said, was taking water forward and in the boiler room. Seams along her sides had opened under the pounding seas. Tugs standing by for a salvage attempt had been recalled to Halifax.

The sleek Port Arthur, Ont., built ship ran aground during a lashing Atlantic storm two days ago while rushing to the aid of another distressed craft. No official report has been given as to the cause of her grounding.

At first no fear was held for the vessel unless a strong southeast wind arose. The grounded craft was unprotected from this quarter and naval officers feared she would be pounded to pieces if the wind shifted; but they saw no immediate danger of such a change. By the time the wind did change they would have the ship free, they thought.

But a long drawn-out storm made rescue operations dangerous and work at night impossible. Now the wind has shifted to the southwest and is already sending the craft harder aground.

Meanwhile, the ship the Middlesex had left port to aid was safely under tow and was being brought to Halifax by the R.C.M.P. cutter French. At first the French and her charge were expected here today but she was delayed by high seas and is not expected until tomorrow morning. The Ohio asked for assistance after losing her propeller near Sable Island.

The same high seas have also delayed the salvage tug Foundation Franklin also headed for Halifax with the Spanish freighter Santi in tow. The Sants called for assistance after breaking her main shaft about 450 miles southeast of here.
