ROD CAMERON DUE IN BANG-UP FILM
 Rod Cameron's first ambition in life was to be a red-coated North West Mounted Policeman. Cameron was born in Calgary, Canada, where the Mounties are thickest, and he thinks to this day that the glamour he associated with them is mainly responsible for his later, and successful, ambition, to become an actor.

To date he hasn't had a chance to portray a Mountie on the screen but in the forty roles he has played in his first four years in films, he has played almost everything else. His current starring assignment is a western for Universal, "The Old Texas Trail," due today at the Capitol Theatre, with Fuzzy Knight, Eddie Dew, Marjorie Clements, Virginia Christine and Ray Whitley and his Bar-Cowboys.

London Sidewalk Artists Get Down On Their Knees

BY FRANK LOWE

LONDON, March 27 (CP) — Art loses its capital "A" and gets down on its knees with a scrubbing cloth when London's sidewalk artists show their wares.

Every fine day these men who earn a sometimes good but more often precarious living appear in droves to smear the city pavements with chalk, charcoal and oil drawings. A sunny day sees as many as 15 of them in the half-mile between Westminster and Piccadilly, drawing lurid sunsets and fevered-looking bowls of fruit — beside them a rigged cap to catch coins.

The ambitious ones put on a non-stop show. They realistically admit that the act of drawing, and not the drawings themselves, attracts customers and the hoped-for shower of tips, so they sketch continuously.

Others, however, and especially the old-timers and temperamental ones who believe their art alone merits the money with a minimum of work on their part, draw but one set of pictures daily.

Len belongs to this group. This white-bearded man with glowing eyes whose most bitter complaint is the ignoring have chopped his artistic name from Leonardo to "Len." His day begins at 10 A.M. when he arrives with a damp cloth and scrubs clean a few squares of pavement on which to chalk some six pictures — a wolfish-looking mon-gomery, a fatherly Stalin, a Churchill, a couple of pastorals and a comic effort.

By that time it is 11 and the pubs are open, so he "sells" his cap with a few coins, leaves it beside the drawings and disappears. This, he says, earns him from three to four dollars daily. He has no overhead except for the price of chalk, and no taxes while his place of business is through the courtesy of the policeman on that beat.

Dean of the sidewalk artists is Rem. He has a great mop of untidy white hair straggling out from under a slouch hat, a flowing tie and the reputation of once having received $500 for a portrait from the father of the late Amy Johnson, the woman flyer.

His pitch is in the shadow cast by the porch of St. Martins-in-the-Fields Church, just off Trafalgar Square and his specialty is reproducing oil portraits from snapshots.

Rem claims the great days of the London sidewalk artists are over. "The present crop, to his mind, is a pretty poor lot and he likes to think back to the days "when Dave Burton used to pitch on Hampstead Heath and sold his stuff for two quid (about $9) each ... and old Bill Neale left the street when a reproduction of Queen Mary won him fame."

Then, with a sad shake of the head, he recalls the present and business and offers to "do you" for a dollar.

JELLIED RHUBARB

1/2 cup sugar
 1/4 cup water
 1 pound rhubarb, cut in small pieces

1 package jelly powder

Method: Combine the sugar and water and heat until the sugar has simmered until tender. Measure this mixture after cooking and then add enough water to make two cups. Dissolve the jelly powder in the hot rhubarb mixture. You can use any flavor of jelly powder for this, but if you use one that is red in color, the finished product is more attractive in appearance. Turn into a greased and rinsed mold and chill until set. To serve, heap in sherbet glasses and serve with cream, if desired.

This dessert, like all other jellied desserts, can be made well in advance requiring no last minute preparation before serving.

We have already given one recipe for rhubarb betty, but here is another, slightly different version.

NEW PLAY CLOTHES ARE "NEAR NAKED"

NEW YORK—Summer beach and play clothes, which the over-optimistic put into current openings, are "near naked" (in swim suit of summer is destined to be bra and baby-pants shorts variety as brief as the jav allows.

Bare midriffs and sheer revealing tops also are the order of evening dress, as long formal gowns go in for glamour with a capital "G." Two silhouettes are notable in the evening gown lineup—the Lillian Russell gown with long tight sleeves, long tight skirt, slit to the knee and draped in back either with a bustle effect or a low Victoria swag (these for the femme fatale); or the bouffant variety with wide full skirt, often shown in Guatemalan cotton or pastel eyelet, embroidery, and still sprinkled with sequins.

May Be New Probe Of Oakes Murder

MIAMI, Fla., March 28 (CP) — Detective Raymond C. Schindler said here today that the resignation of the Duke of Windsor as governor of the Bahamas may open the way for a new investigation into the murder last year of Sir Harry Oakes, wealthy Canadian gold miner owner, in Nassau.

The detective was retained, following the murder by Nancy DeMarigny in behalf of her husband Alfred, who was tried and acquitted four months later of a charge of murder.

Schindler said he had made two visits to Nassau in the last month, during the last one, from which he returned yesterday. He said he conferred with "many persons" who expressed themselves as "disappointed" by the failure of the authorities to investigate the case any further.

"Many people in Nassau are of the opinion that a new prosecutor will reopen the case," he said.

Schindler said that following the acquittal of Alfred De Marigny, he had the services of the Bahamas authorities but had met with a "courteous but firm rebuff."

Post-War Job For Montgomery?

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH THE 21ST ARMY GROUP March 28—(CP Cable) — What will Field Marshal Montgomery do after the war?

It is an open question being asked by soldiers here. Possibly soon after the war in Europe is over the 21st Army Group commander will visit Canada.

He has not taken any long leave from the front since the battle of El Alamein in Egypt late in 1942 and a trip to the Dominion might be his active way of spending a month or more of leave.

A rumor that he may become governor-general of Canada is not taken seriously here. Britain's amazing commander, with a string of victories from El Alamein to beyond the Rhine, certainly will be active, however, in some important capacity after the war.

It does not appear likely that he will go to Burma or the southwest Pacific, British soldiers there already are at their posts.

Neither is he likely to go into politics. He shuns the very idea and although efforts will be made to induce him to enter public life it is a hundred to one that he will never run for parliament.

It is possible he may become head of the British Legion—the British veteran's association. He follows the work of the legion extremely closely and always has supported it strongly.

There is another association which draws his interest—the Boy Scouts Association. Perhaps Field Marshal Montgomery will become the new Baden-Powell and head this organization with an influence on youth the world over.

TAXIMEN FROM COAST TO COAST say "IT'S A GREAT SYNTHETIC TIRE!"

Taxis were among the first to receive the new Synthetic Rubber Tires because taxis are an essential form of transportation ... and also they form a ready-made, "mileage-in-a-hurry" test fleet. Naturally, tire-wise taxi owners tried and compared all makes.

Now, with more than a year's driving experience behind them, their verdict is in. These men who judge tires on their performance, prefer Goodyears. Some of them have written testifying to service far beyond anything that Goodyear has ever claimed for its synthetic tires. Here are a few extracts from typical letters:

"Goodyear synthetics are giving the same long wear and satisfaction that Goodyear tires have given our 72 cabs for many years."
 —De Luxe Cab Limited

"... in reasonable care they deliver equal, and in some cases better mileage than three we received before restrictions."
 —Eglinton Taxi

"... have used Goodyear synthetics for some time ... to the best of our knowledge, they are equal to the pre-war tires."
 —Manor Taxi

For passenger-car tires there can hardly be a more severe test than that of operating on taxi fleets under all conditions of road and weather, and in all parts of Canada. When you ride on Goodyear synthetic tires, you have tires that pass that test with high honours.

Now, as always, all tire companies have access to the same raw materials. Now, as always, it is Goodyear's experience and Goodyear Research that puts extra quality into Goodyear tires. Now, for 30 years, "More People Ride on Goodyear Tires Than on Any Other Kind."

Keep in touch with your Goodyear dealer whose experience and regular attention will help to keep your present tires in service.
