TRADE AND COMMERCE

A WEEKLY LETTER FROM LONDON

(From a Special Correspondent).

London, 20th June, 1924.

The unsatisfactory position of this year's cotton crop raises questions of great importance to the Empire. The feature of the last few days market during the publication of the first Bureau crop condition report of the season. The report is based on the aspect of the crop as on May 25th, and the figure of 65.5 indicates a bad start and presages, as far as can be foreseen at this early period, a smaller crop than was hoped for. It must be remembered, however, that the plant is only just entering its growth and that it has all the vicissitudes of the season yet before it. This low report does not necessarily mean that we are to have another very small crop, for with favourable climatic conditions during the next six weeks and particularly in August, a lot of leeway can be made up. At the present time it is ridiculous for anyone to attempt to forecast what the American crop is likely to be. Since the Bureau report was issued, better weather advice has been received and there has been a fall in prices. From existing supplies of 2,500,000 bales and it is probable that at the end of the present season (July 31st) there will be a carry over of between 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 bales. A minimum yield of about 13,000,000 bales is needed to supply the raw material. Should there be no real lasting improvement in the condition of the crop during the next two months, the outlook with regard to future supplies will be extremely grave, for the world's present stock of cotton means that high prices will prevail and that the depression which has obtained in Lancashire since 1920 will continue. With regard to the Egyptian growth, new crop reports continue very favourable, indicating good progress.

THE EMPIRE'S OPPORTUNITY

I have often, in these letters, stressed the importance of the Overseas Dominions taking up the growing of cotton. It is becoming more and more apparent that the world's needs are greater than the world's supplies, and that unless energetic measures are taken to plant cotton elsewhere there will soon be a famine that will have world-wide disastrous effects. We here would rather see that cotton growth within the Empire than elsewhere. In normal times Great Britain requires 4,000,000 bales a year, of which about three-quarters is at present obtained from the United States. But we are now faced with the problem. How much longer will America be able to supply us with our cotton needs? For some time past the American cotton crop has been short and a bigger production from that quarter has become more remote every year. Indeed the time is not far distant when the American mills will consume as much cotton as is now being produced altogether in the United States. This constitutes a real menace to Britain's foreign trade, for before the War our export of cotton goods was one third of the value of our total exports. Not only that, it affects the whole Empire, for scarce cotton means dear cotton goods everywhere. The British Cotton Growing Association and its predecessor the British Cotton Trade Association have been preaching and practising the advantages of the Empire growing fine cotton suitable for Lancashire. Added to that the Cotton Industry Act, passed last year, provides for the payment of bounties to the Empire Cotton Growing Corporation of every 500 lbs. of raw cotton purchased, thus providing a fund for stimulating cotton growing within the Empire. There is no reason why the British Empire should not, with sufficient energy and enterprise, produce all far off. There appears to be grounds for the belief, too, for recently one leading firm in that city obtained an overseas order for 2,000 dozens of the best quality business happens to come from a market which, during the past couple of years, has been buying from hand-to-mouth, so that it would appear that the moment has now more than one Sheffield firm has travelled on route for the colonial and dominion markets with hopes that the journeys will prove profitable. This is particularly true of the Canadian market, where there seems to be an improved demand for Sheffield goods. Other parts of the world were summed up in the following words by the gentleman well in touch with the trade—"India: It is looking up a bit and we are receiving more enquiries, Australia fairly good with signs of improvement. New Zealand: Fairly decent orders are coming through, though not quite what was expected. South Africa: A certain amount of holding back in taking place owing to the troubled political situation there. South America: Steady demand, though not great for cutlery, but best quality plate for that country is improving."

PLEASANT VALLEY SCHOOL CLOSING The closing exercises of Pleasant Valley School took place on the 27th. There was a representative attendance of visitors, who followed with keen interest the exhibition of the classes in the variety that a decided improvement is not MacLeod was assisted by Rev. O. Peters and others showed the system in which the teacher, MacLeod, had regarded. Mr. Peters' address emphasized the need for healthy bodies and sound minds in order to accomplish efficient work. He also encouraged the pupils to continue industriously to obtain education so as to better fulfill their duties of true citizenship. The singing of the National Anthem brought a very pleasant afternoon to a close.

CUTLERY POSITION AND PROSPECTS. Through actual operations in the Sheffield cutlery trade are far below normal, there is a growing feeling amongst manufacturers and exporters that a decided improvement is not far off.
