And one recommendation is that they can be sent to the laundry without impairing their looks. Cotton and linen scarfs predominate, among them pin striped patterns, checked patterns and striped linens, as well as solid colored scarfs.

WORLD'S FAIR HAS INFLUENCE ON CLOTH

CHICAGO, April 24—The coming world's fair and its modernistic architecture have inspired new silk dress prints being shown now by a large State street department store.

In addition these prints have been styled into frocks, suits, hats, and gloves—yes, gloves, and they are something decidedly new and different.

There is one print called "Science Tower," which hints of the outlines of the hall of science on the fair grounds. It was made up into a frock having a waist length jacket with wide shoulders.

The "sky-ride" attraction at the fair inspired a print by that name. It was fashioned into suit having a jacket fluted at the shoulders with a big organdie bow under the chin.

A meeting to be held at the hall. Meeting adjourned after which a delicious luncheon was served and a collection of $1.00 taken.

A bank has installed a "black box" system in its treasure vaults, a dialogue by Miss A. McLennon which if intercepted by a thief at and Miss Frances White. Next once sets an alarm ringing.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE DISCUSSED

MacDonald And Roosevelt Issue Joint Statement On Conversation.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—(A.P.)—Progress was reported tonight by Prime Minister MacDonald and President Roosevelt upon the vital subjects of world economic recovery and disarmament after a day of discussion on the sun-swept decks of the Government yacht Sequoia as it cruised down the Potomac River.

The statesmen suddenly brought forward the armaments question, simultaneous with the arrival in the Capital of Edouard Herriot, the representative of France and preparations for the arrival from Ottawa tomorrow of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett.

It was emphasized by Mr. Roosevelt, who said he would continue with M. Herriot tomorrow the discussion of disarmament problems which have deadlocked the Geneva Parley.

In a genial mood, the French Envoy spoke hopefully tonight of his meeting with President Roosevelt. He told newspapermen the recent action of the United States in going off the gold standard had "changed some of the technical aspects" of the conversations but not the purpose of his visit—a restoration of world economic stability.

Returning from their yachting cruise down the Potomac, Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Roosevelt issued the following joint statement after summoning their economic staffs for a late White House conference.

"Today was occupied in a thorough survey of the business of the Disarmament Conference at Geneva. It was felt by both the President and the Prime Minister that the results of the day's conversations would considerably advance the prospects of the success, both of the Disarmament Conference and of the International Economic Conference. "The President will continue the discussion of Disarmament problems with M. Herriot."

HEART INTO THE UNEMPLOYED

Men are bestirring themselves on behalf of the unemployed, and of the schemes suggested and submitted, many have proven to be of practical value. Some, of course are more novel than practical but all suggestions are welcomed.

Consider the plight of the "white collar" men walking the streets, says a writer in the "American Magazine." Why not organize these jobless men into groups of say, thirty, to work for one another. Then, instead of every man for himself, it would be a case of thirty men for every man.

The unemployed man who conceived this idea took it to the executives who had established a bureau of employment assistance in the financial district of New York. To-day the plan is in operation, going over big, with its originator in charge.

Each man pledges to make a minimum number of calls each day, presenting himself to employers as a representative of a team. If there is a job open, and it is one that he himself cannot handle, probably one of the other twenty-nine members of the team can. In this way each job hunter really has twenty-nine men working for him. It gives him new confidence and infuses into an otherwise miserable task the zest of team-play.

In another city, men receiving relief from various agencies formed themselves into an unemployed married men's council, while their wives formed a women's auxiliary. They secured the use of a vacant school building, and an active self-help program was inaugurated, including barbering, tailoring, shoe-repairing, and canning of surplus vegetables. A radio station gave the scheme publicity to secure offers of jobs, for wages or on a barter basis. The council now totals 1,500.

The Province of Quebec, in supporting a movement to assist unemployed city dwellers back to the land, makes careful enquiries into the case. If it is found that he has some of the qualifications of a farmer, he is backed by sufficient supplies to give him a fighting chance. It often turns out that relief in this nature costs no more than out-and-out support of indigent families.

ANGEL OF CHINATOWN RESCUES MANY GIRLS

NEW YORK, April 24—Rose Livingston, who for the last 29 years has conducted a single-handed campaign against white slavery in this city, has submitted her 1932 report to the small group that collects the $600 fund which maintains her and her work each year.

The report was made public by Lawrence Chamberlain, investment broker, as chairman of the Rose Livingston prudential committee, which privately undertook years ago under this name to support Miss Livingston's work.

The report is a summary of 24 cases uncovered and brought to conviction through the public authorities by Miss Livingston during 1932 in accordance with her practice of sleeping during the day and wandering all night through restaurants, speakeasies and furnished rooming houses in Chinatown, Greenwich Village and the navy yard district, watching for misled girls for whom she may provide a way out of despair and seeking punishment for persons who exploit them.

Her activities last year resulted in 22 convictions for such men and the rescue of sixteen girls, mostly under age. This is the work for which the National Institute of Social Sciences gave her a gold medal in 1929. She is known—and is proud of the title—as "The Angel of Chinatown."
