SMUGGLER'S CAVE WITH SKELETON

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, N. S., June 19--An amazing discovery was made at Grompton, which has revived a score of half-forgotten traditions concerning smugglers and pirates said to have flourished in this neighborhood a century and more ago.

After walking through the tunnel more than 200 yards the workmen came to a large door built of heavy oak and fitted into an opening which had been cut out of the solid rock of the cliffside.

Within the oak door several iron pots were found which apparently had bound hogheads long since crumbled to dust. In addition, several old firearms were discovered, among them a large and heavy sword bearing the date 1798.

SHAUGHNESSY DIDN'T LIKE THE PROGRAM

HALIFAX, N. S., June 19--The views of the Halifax board of trade and of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy as to the best way for him to spend two or three hours in Halifax do not coincide. This was shown today in a telegram from the president of the C. P. R. The board of trade proposed taking Sir Thomas for a luncheon at the harbor, giving him a luncheon at the Halifax Club and holding a reception.

Writing from Kentville this morning to the secretary of the board of trade Sir Thomas cut out this programme, and said he would proceed from the railway station at 10 o'clock to the Victoria General Hospital where he would call on Premier Murray, then going to the city hall to see Mayor Chisholm, after which he would meet the business men of the city at the board of trade rooms, and leaving at 3.30 for Montreal.

The president of the C. P. R. went over the D. A. R. system today, leaving Yarmouth at 9 o'clock to-night for Windsor, which will be reached at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning. At 8 a.m. the special will start for Halifax today.

In the third they got four and repeated the dose in the fourth giving them a lead of eight to the Abbies one.

Sound, On March 3rd, 1863, he went into action with the monitors Passaic and Patapsco against Fort Mifflin. Commander Downes in reporting the engagement speaks in warmest praise of the coolness and bravery of his men who performed their duties promptly and quietly.

In June of the same year the Nahant captured the famous Confederate ironclad Atlanta. This engagement was of short duration and few shots were fired. On July 10th and 11th the Nahant again went into action with the ironclads against Fort Sumpter. The Weehawken got aground and Mr. Moar was one of two to volunteer to carry a line from the Nahant to her and did so in the midst of a terrific hail of shot and shell.

For this heroic deed he was recommended for promotion to the rank of acting ensign by Admiral Dahlgren. The Nahant was sent to guard Stono River and continued in this duty until late in 1863. Mr. Moar was put aboard the Circassian and sent to Boston and was there honorably discharged, his term of enlistment being over. Mr. Moar is a member of the Union Veterans' Union and the above interesting facts are taken from his certificate of record issued by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Historical and Benevolent Society of Washington, D. C.

BRINGING UP PARENTS

The raising of parents in these days is justly regarded with considerable apprehension by the extreme young. To take a brand new set of parents, who are without any previous experience, and with naturally perverse tendencies, and bring them up in the way they should go is no easy job. Parents are self-willed, obstinate, and invariably selfish; they want their own way, and if they don't get it they are apt to make trouble. The first thing that should be done is to show them once for all that you are master. Do not discuss the really serious things of life with your parents. It gives them a false idea of their importance. Be careful of the company they keep. Blame it on a higher power.--From you see them playing bridge with life.
