WELCOME

The Guardian extends a hearty welcome to the teachers and student teachers now resident in our city and to be with us for the next few weeks. This is our holiday season, when those of our citizens who can, leave their work and take to the shores, the country, the fishing streams, anywhere where there is nothing to do, and when those who cannot, wish they could. We trust that our visitors will find time in the midst of their arduous duties to enjoy at least a little of the out-of-door life and that the out-of-doors will be on its best behaviour while they are here. We know that our citizens will do their part to make the stay of our visitors a pleasant one.

A NEW HOPE

We note by our exchanges that Mrs. J. A. Wilson of Ottawa, "Convener of the Household Economic Committee of the National Council of Women," recently visited Halifax for the laudable purpose of arresting, and possibly lowering, the high cost of living. In an address before a convention of similarly well-intentioned women she advised them to co-operate with the producer in eliminating at least some of the profits of the middleman which, she claimed, forced up the price of food. In support of this advice she quoted Principal Cumming of the Agricultural College, Truro, as stating that the farmers in his vicinity received four cents a quart for their milk while the citizen of Halifax was paying nine cents for the same commodity; also that those same farmers complained that they could find no market for their produce while the citizens of Halifax were paying exorbitant prices for these products. Apart from these we do not gather from our exchanges that Mrs. Wilson gave any specific recipe for the reduction of the cost of living. There is no doubt that very much of the cost of living accumulates on that middle ground between the producer and the consumer; that the ever increasing army of middlemen who exact their toll from the price paid by the ultimate consumer has very much to do with this complex problem. Yet the elimination of the middleman, which is the real problem, has not yet been provided for. Between the producer and ultimate consumer there is a zone which must be exploited by experienced business men. These men must have their toll; it is the legitimate wage for legitimate work and there is nothing to show that they are more voracious or more exacting than either the producer or the consumer. A characteristic of these latter days of ours is that every man—and possibly every woman—wants to exact the highest possible price for everything he has to sell, and the lowest for everything he buys. This characteristic has been developed until it has become a religion, and we are living in a religious age. Extortionate exactions of this kind at both ends of the bargain have more to do with the high cost of living than any thing else that has so far been discovered, tariffs, middlemen and all included. To a mere man, however, the fact that a woman has tackled the problem is a hopeful one. He believes there is much that a woman can do in the matter of reducing the cost of living; indeed he believes that the main body of this modern incubus, this high cost of living, is to be found in the realm over which women specially hold sway. We realize that this is dangerous ground but we realize also that until the problem is taken hold of by the women it will not be solved. It is a hopeful symptom, therefore, that they are entering the field.

THE MANITOBA ELECTIONS

The provincial elections in Manitoba will be held on Friday of this week and as far as it is possible to judge at this distance, says an exchange, there is little or no serious thought that the Roblin Government will be turned out. In the last general election in that province on June 7th, 1910, the Roblin Government was returned with a standing of twenty-eight to thirteen and this was not materially changed in the four years which have since elapsed. Redistribution has given to Manitoba half a dozen additional seats but there is every reason to believe that the new seats will return supporters of the present administration. Premier Roblin has had a successful term as Manitoba's chief administrator. That province is rapidly developing its resources and in all departments of its endeavor the Government has been working with the best interests of the people always before it as an ideal to be followed. There are no charges against the administration, no questions of paramount importance which might have the effect of stampeding the people to a new leader, and the Conservative party is more popular today in Manitoba than at any time in the history of that province. The administration has been clean and capable and the only question the people will be asked to decide by their ballots is whether they will or will not endorse decent government and general prosperity.

The result in Ontario was frankly a surprise to all concerned. Manitoba may provide a similar experience, but a reasonable view seems to be that Mr. Roblin will gain rather than lose seats.

NOTES

The white and Indian fishermen of the Fraser River are appealing to the governments of the Dominion and British Columbia to pass restrictive legislation with respect to the Japanese, who are securing control of the fisheries in question. The Oriental immigration issue is developing and increasing in importance in Canada, and it will require wise statesmanship to settle it satisfactorily.

"Young gentlemen of excellent connections, appearance and savoir-faire desires a secretaryship to some nobleman, financier or gentleman of leisure. He is versatile and possesses knowledge of the world. Congenial companion, fond of open-air life, good natured and willing to travel." This advertisement recently appeared in the London Times. Whether he got the job, or if it was to his liking, we have no means of knowing but it was probably some kind of a job like that that those Englishmen who have been sending home letters knocking Canada expected to find here.

To a mere man, however, the fact that a woman has tackled the problem is a hopeful one. He believes there is much that a woman can do in the matter of reducing the cost of living; indeed he believes that the main body of this modern incubus, this high cost of living, is to be found in the realm over which women specially hold sway. We realize that this is dangerous ground but we realize also that until the problem is taken hold of by the women it will not be solved. It is a hopeful symptom, therefore, that they are entering the field.

STRIKE ON AT WOOLWICH.
LONDON, July 4.—Because a man was dismissed for refusing to erect a machine on a concrete bed laid by non-union workmen, 1,500 men at Woolwich Arsenal have struck and threaten to call out 10,000 others.

ALDERSHOT FORCE HELD FOR IRELAND.
LONDON, July 3.—It is stated says a special cable from London, to that confidential orders have been received by Lieutenant-General Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-chief at Aldershot, to hold certain troops in readiness to move out of camp at short notice. Particularly indicated are the Cavalry Brigade, composed of the Second Dragoon Guards, the Fifth Dragoon Guards, and the Eleventh Hussars, and the Second Infantry Division.

It is understood that the North of Ireland in their destination, but the troops will only be moved in the last necessity. They will be marched as for regular campaign, though there is no present intention to call up reserves.

Inquiries at Aldershot camp show that there will be no protest among the officers if they are sent to Ulster to keep the peace, but that a very different situation will arise if they are called upon to attack the Ulster volunteers or to endeavor to enforce any general disarmament. This work, it is contended, is rightly that of the police not the military.

"Preparations of an important character are being made with the greatest secrecy." This Aldershot news reads ominously when taken in conjunction with the fact that Ireland, North, South and West, is practically standing to arms. Nevertheless Ministerialists still talk as though peace was in sight. The July Chronicle boldly asserts that civil war is off the stage, for a settlement in November well within sight.

"It is a settlement which will not really satisfy anybody. It will be a makeshift arrangement, a merely temporary, only tolerable as an escape from worse evils; but for the time it will suffice.

This hopeful view arises because the Unionists in the House of Lords yesterday presented practically a united front for passing the second reading of the Home Rule amending Bill, not that they believe in its efficacy, but in order to stave off civil war.

Nobody seems to want the amending Bill except to keep the Nationalists and Orangemen quiet until some sort of compromise is effected. Some talk of statutory Commission, others of a national convention.
