Admiral Robert Protests U.S. Relations Break (Copyright, 1943, By The Associated Press) NEW YORK, May 3 (AP)—Admiral Georges Robert, French naval commander of Martinique, protested tonight that he had sent a note to the State Department protesting the United States' action in breaking off relations with Martinique. He urged that the Department publish the text of his note. Admiral Robert called this information to the attention of the State Department in a letter to the United States' ambassador in Paris, which he said was "a very serious situation of international relations". The American Government decided, in alleging a certain situation of international relations, to conclude that this was a situation of international relations. "I offer nothing else in explanation and refuse, by recalling its usual general, all possibility of a French proposal on my part. I can only take note of such a decision as a measure of protest, which I have done in a note delivered May 1, and therefore I can see only an advantage in the publication of the text in the American press by the State Department."

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan The War Loan meeting at Cardigan last evening was presided over by Senator John A. MacDonald and in a short excellent talk he urged all who could in any way to contribute to the purchase of Victory Bonds to the limit of their capacity. The splendid picture entitled "All These Things" was then shown after which Senator MacDonald introduced Mr. Lincoln Dewar the principal speaker of the evening.

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan (Continued) Mr. Dewar said that while we are all busy with our uniforms yet each individual in this war has one must ever dream of being anything but an inspiration to his valuable work of some kind or other. The Home Front is a very important one and what a crime it would be for someone to let the fighting front because of lack of something that was not done.

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan (Continued) The soldier in action, said Mr. Dewar, has an immediate stimulus to fight as we do not. We must give the European dictators a lesson in toughness that they and their people need. Mr. Dewar referred to the pictures being shown at these meetings by Mr. Rogers of The Travel Bureau and urged the speakers to all the people who saw them. In his closing remarks he said that if a person could not pay the full purchase of bonds now various terms of payment could be arranged and money that would be coming in later could complete the payments.

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan (Continued) Senator MacDonald then called on Mr. MacDonnell Rogers who outlined the object of the campaign which was to have the citizens get together in a community spirit and in a community effort to hear the various speakers and to help the needs of the present Victory Loan campaign and why it is so necessary this campaign be an outstanding success. The large and enthusiastic audiences everywhere is simply another indication of the unwavering devotion and loyalty of our people to their country and to their country and Empire.

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan (Continued) The Russian film entitled "One Day of War" was then shown. The meeting Tuesday night is at 8 o'clock.

War Loan Meeting At Cardigan (Continued) The men serving in the commando training and first-aid courses, and other army and marine schools where they not only get into top physical condition but keep up with modern methods of actual experience that cost many lives during the great blitzes on London, Coventry, Plymouth, Portsmouth and such places. Dolman of Ottawa and J. M. Forget of St. Lambert, Quebec, and firemen Harry Jones of Val-de-Quebec, and Everett Bateman, St. Stephen, N. B.

They're too busy studying while waiting for the drone of Nazi bombers.

Warm Praise For Press Of Canada

MONTREAL, May 3 (CP)—G. Warren Brown, President of Cook-Ivers, Brown & Company, advertising firm, said at the annual meeting here that the press of Canada had won new laurels by its record in this war. "I should like to say a word in particular about the press," said Mr. Brown, delivering his annual report. "Of the three great media of propaganda—the press, the radio and the film—the press today is the only one which provides a forum for relatively free discussion. If advertising in Canada is trusted because of its integrity, the press of Canada has won universal renown. The abuses of the press, prevalent in other countries, are the exception in Canada. By its war record—reliable information, comprehensive gathering, ably edited, sanely presented—the press has won new laurels." He said that without detracting in any way from the roles which other media will play, I am confident that advertising and the press together will render priceless service in affording Canada that middle-of-the-road stability and happiness we all covet in the post-war period.

Many Railways, Roads Center At Mateur

(By The Canadian Press) Mateur, small Tunis and town which United States forces entered today in their drive toward the great naval base of Bizerte, is more important than its size would indicate because of the railroads and highways that centre there. Railroads lead northward from Mateur to Ferryville, the dyabola of the Bizerte naval base. On the southwest they run to the inland town of Nebeur, crossing the vital Tebessa-Jel-Tunis highway. To the east, other rail lines pass through Mateur from the border port of Tabarka to the Tunisian Capital of Tunis and beyond. Both large and small, radiate from Mateur in all directions, with highways connecting it with Bizerte, Tunis and other important coastal and inland points. The town of Mateur and its immediate environs had a pre-war population of about 4,000, one-third of whom were Italians. The old city still is enclosed by the walls of the Roman period.
