INTERVENTION

Solutions
Several solutions of the situation were discussed.
One group held the belief that an out-and-out military government should be set up. While this group contended such a move would tend to bring the situation under control, a number held it would not be satisfactory to the United States.
Another group pointed to Mario G. Menocal, former President, as a leader who might be strong enough to bring order out of chaos. The younger revolutionaries were understood, however, to oppose him, although the veteran statesmen had considerable support among army and navy officers who were removed from their commands in the latest revolutionary coup.

Would Take Office
Friends of De Cespedes declared he is willing to return to the Presidency if a popular demand is made. The former Executive, son of the Island's first revolutionary president, has been resting at his home, receiving only the closest of friends.
Guillermo Belt, one of the former Cabinet members whose support was sought today by the new regime, declared in this connection "as far as I am concerned, De Cespedes is still President."
Belt was Secretary of Public Instruction under De Cespedes. All Government circles again expressed confidence order could be maintained.

Air Squadron Ready
MARINE BARRACKS, Quantico, Va., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—More khaki-clad marines, this time a United States aircraft squadron, were told today to get everything ready to take off toward Cuba on a moment's notice.
Twelve observation ships and necessary auxiliary planes from Brown Field here were ordered checked up, their guns and bomb racks mounted. Pilots were ordered to pack their belongings.
Yesterday the seventh regiment, composed of two battalions of riflemen and machine gunners, was assembled here for possible use in the Island Republic.
Members of the aircraft squadron said they had been "standing by" for three weeks, but the order caused intense activity at the hangars. The designated pilots were elated at the possibility of foreign service.

NRA TURNS ATTENTION TO COAL CODE

(By James P. Selva, Associated Press Staff Writer)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Dislodgement of the bituminous coal code and the accompanying labor contracts for non-union mines from the ledge of controversy on which they have been for weeks, was expected hourly tonight by Hugh S. Johnson.
With President Roosevelt personally directing the tedious negotiations through their latter stages, Johnson had a code ready to clamp on the long-troubled industry as soon as the contracts spelling general unionization for the soft coal fields are completed.
Johnson hopes that by midnight Saturday this job will have been finished and he will be able to turn to other pressing matters which have been forced into the background by the coal dispute.
Among them are the questions of controlling rapidly rising prices, of checking on the actual efforts of employers to create new jobs and the many-sided problem of extending credit to businesses which lack finances to carry on the recovery undertaking of higher wages and increased employment.

Heralding the beginning of the stiffened movement for price control, the Consumers' Advisory Board of the Recovery Administration today demanded that "as a part of the hearings on codes, representatives of the industries affected should be called upon to give such cost and price information as may be necessary as a benchmark in the checking of price increases under the code."
While Johnson was completing the code, heads of the United Mine Workers of America and a committee of Appalachian commercial operators tolled over the technical provisions of their labor contracts. They expected to have the contracts ready for presidential approval along with industry's code.

SON OF A SOLDIER
Born in 1862, son of a soldier and grandson of a distinguished statesman, Grey at one time seemed destined to live the life of a country gentleman. In 1882 he succeeded to his grandfather's baronetcy and from 1885 to 1916 he represented the Berwick-on-Tweed division in the House of Commons. He was foreign under-secretary from 1892 to 1895. In December, 1905, he became Foreign Secretary in the new Liberal cabinet of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, but he did not take office without a great deal of hesitation.
Once in office, Sir Edward was beset by difficulties. In 1906 Germany and France were at odds over Morocco; France asked whether British support would be forthcoming in the event of war. Sir Edward could promise nothing not backed by public opinion, but he agreed to conversations between British and French naval and military experts and the support accorded the French in the Algeiras conference strengthened the Anglo-French entente.

VISCOUNT GREY OF FALLODON PASSES

Veteran British Statesman, Britain's Foreign Secretary in 1914, Dies at 71.

CHRISTON BANK, England, Sept. 7.—Viscount Grey of Falloдон, former Secretary of Foreign Affairs and one-time British Ambassador to Washington, died today at the age of 71.

The veteran statesman had been ill more than a week from a malady, the exact nature of which was not disclosed, but was thought to have resulted from high blood pressure.

Death came at 6:05 a.m. The Viscount had been in a coma since Monday, when he suffered a relapse.

Calm and inflexible, high-minded and courteous to the utmost, Sir Edward Grey was the right man in the right spot when the British Foreign Office in 1914 was confronted with its gravest problem. He died Viscount Grey of Falloдон, but as Sir Edward Grey, a great Foreign Secretary, he will live in history.

No other man served so long as His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs as did Sir Edward Grey—11 years. No other foreign secretary had such a weight of decision thrust upon him. Through all the tense years, fraught with crisis, that preceded the British declaration of war Aug. 4, 1914, Sir Edward was undisturbed, but not untroubled; he had the mighty force of British public opinion behind him as few men have had, and he reached his decisions with calm, clear strength that commanded the world's respect.

On Monday, Aug. 3, 1914, Germany had declared war on France and was about to invade Belgium, making of her promise to Great Britain a "scrap of paper." The cabinet of Herbert Asquith rallied to Sir Edward; the Opposition through the Canadian, Andrew Bonar Law, tendered its support. Sir Edward in parliament that day appealed for full support for a policy of action. Unconditional neutrality for Great Britain was out of the question through her commitment to France and her consideration for Belgium. The Government had driven for peace to the last moment; the forces of the Crown were never more efficient, he calmly pointed out.
The speech decided a wavering public opinion. On the next day the Foreign Secretary demanded Germany respect Belgium's neutrality. Germany refused, and England went to war, Sir Edward drafting the declaration.

Among all nations there was frank recognition that leadership was to come from that loosely-knit yet closely-knit commonwealth of nations known as the British Empire.
Mr. Bennett urged Canadian producers to take advantage of the market offered by Great Britain—"the greatest single buying market in the world."

DEMOCRACY ON TRIAL
NEWMARKET, Ont., Sept. 7.—(C.P.)—Democracy is on trial as never before since it became a form of Government, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett declared here this afternoon.
Defects of democracy, he said, were well known as were its dangers and steps that should be taken to overcome them.
"I suppose you realize," he continued, "the counting of heads is resorted to, to determine vital issues in a democracy where counting of heads would not be utilized for any other purpose. In agriculture, in almost every activity in which man engages, merit is determined by scientific process. For government by democracy he who can count the most heads in his favor is the man to whom the most merit goes."
"Do you ever think what that means? As you have a majority of people untrained, the fate of nations is in the hands of untrained people. The result is appalling to think of."
"I need not recall to you the evolution of the franchise. Property was the early criterion of the right to vote."
"Then the holding of a lease became the factor."
"Then the agitation went further. It demanded that women should have a vote. That added hundreds of thousands to the electorate without training in problems with which they had to deal. That is how it came to be a mere counting of heads."
Education Only Hope
Men, he said, has always been acting in that.

Transportation Problem Stressed By Prime Minister

Canadian Producers Urged By Premier Bennett To Take Advantage Of British Markets.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS, Toronto, Sept. 7.—(C.P.)—Adjustment of the world's productive power, Premier R. B. Bennett told a large crowd on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds today, stood out as one of the most important objectives of the London Economic Conference. He was confident the various phases of the problem would be solved.

Speaking from the band stand in the centre of Exhibition Park to a gathering that crowded on all sides, the Prime Minister spoke optimistically. He believed the world was moving forward, toward the end of the depression. Canada, he said he was told abroad, was in better condition to grasp a return of business normality than any other country.

RAILROAD PROBLEM
A few minutes before he faced the outdoor audience, Mr. Bennett briefly addressed the Directors' luncheon of the C. N. E. Today is Railway and Transportation Day at the big fair and the Premier referred to Canada's railroad problem as "by all odds the most difficult of our domestic problems."
The great problem of the people, he said was transportation. Business must consider the effects of the railway situation and the people generally were exhorted to study it. Electors were held responsible by Mr. Bennett for the state of the railways—"and the electors must find the way out."

WELCOMED BY STUDENTS
The Prime Minister was welcomed by throngs of students at the gate of Pickering College, where the school sessions are being held. J. Earl Lawson, Toronto member of Parliament and Chairman of the School, extended a formal welcome. Once within, however, the school reasserted its prevailing informality.
The defects of democracy, Mr. Bennett said, are well known and it is realized what its dangers are and the steps that should be taken to overcome them.
"I suppose you realize the counting of heads is resorted to determine vital issues in a democracy, where counting heads would not be utilized for any other purpose. In agriculture, in almost every activity in which man engages, merit is determined by scientific process. For government by democracy he who can count the most heads in his favor is the man to whom the most merit goes."

mission, even criticizing them by name in Hansard, they will soon wreak it. Such personal attacks on members of a Commission are unheard of in England. You can easily part with radio, anytime you wish, but if you do, you will find it hard to get it back."
WHEAT PROBLEM
Mr. Bennett declared the problem of wheat acreage curtailment was no present problem at all since Canada's quota under export arrangements in the recently concluded International Wheat Agreement is almost exactly her natural average for the last ten years.
In reply to a question on Unemployment Insurance he said unanimous consent to amendment of the British North America Act, permitting Dominion legislation for amendment of the Act failed, he declared, unemployment insurance could be set up in those provinces which agreed to have it.
The Prime Minister said that though democracies have fallen in recent years in Germany, Italy and Egypt: "we see that man has not been able to evolve a better system than democracy for the good of the country."

Another Popular Bargain Trip To Boston By Rail
(Special to the Guardian)
MONCTON, N. B., Sept. 7.—Another of the popular bargain trip coach excursions all rail, from the Maritime Provinces to Boston will be operated over the Canadian National Railways and connecting lines on Friday, Sept. 22nd next, stated R. J. S. Weatherston, General Freight and Passenger Agent here. As in previous coach excursions tickets will be good in day coaches only, no baggage will be checked and children of five and under twelve years of age will be carried at half fare.
The fares are exceedingly low and it is expected that many in the Maritimes will take advantage of the opportunity to visit relatives in an endeavor to share in the Government of his country, and property restriction on the exercise of his franchise had been altered.
"Now there is the story shortly put. Some of you may recall the correspondence between Cardinal Newman and the poet Tennyson. You will recall that Newman pointed out the power vested in a great mass that had not the proper sense of responsibility. What is our answer, the answer of the 20th century. We say the only hope lies in education, in informal democracy. "Gentlemen you could render no greater service to your country than to bring home to you fellow men their responsibilities and duties. I know of no more solemn thought than the thought that is in that."
