TURBINE STEAMSHIPS
HARVARD & YALE

framed mirrors adorn each apartment. On the upper deck is the men's cafe and smoking room. This is trimmed in Flemish oak, the walls being decorated with Dutch friezes.

The passenger who has never traveled on the turbine type of steamship will marvel greatly at the smooth running, steadiness and entire lack of vibration on the Yale and Harvard. As proof of the remarkable smooth running of these steamships it may be noted that the photograph presented here were taken while the Yale was moving at the rate of twenty-four miles an hour.

The designs of the Yale and Harvard were made by Andrew Fletcher, President of the W. & A. Fletcher Co., contracting builders. The hulls of the vessel were built at Roach's shipyard, at Chester Pa., the machinery was built by W. & A. Fletcher Co.; Chas M. Englis, of Brooklyn designed and built the wood trim. The general dimensions of the Harvard as well as of her sister ship, the Yale, are as follows:

Length over all	407 feet
Breadth over guards	61 feet
Draft of water, loaded	16 feet
Accommodations for passengers	800
Express freight capacity	100 tons
Motive power triple-screw Parsons Steam Turbine	10,000 h p

The route followed by the vessels is by way of Long Island Sound and thence out upon the Atlantic Ocean through Vineyard Sound, near the southern extremity of Cape Cod; then through Nantucket Sound out on the Atlantic Ocean, around Cape Cod and on to Boston.

IT IMPARTS STRENGTH

Just think of the enormous strengthening power Ferrozone possesses—consider what it did for H V Potter, well known in Kingston. "I was subject to spells of dizziness. For eight months I had intense pain in my right side between the shoulders. I was almost incurable with weakness and lack of vigor. Often I scarcely ate any breakfast and felt miserable all day. Nervous easily excited, trouble with heart weakness, I was in bad shape. Ferrozone restored and nourished me back to health in short order." Whatever your weakness may be Ferrozone will cure.
