

TO EXTERMINATE WOLVES

The wolves have become so bold and numerous in the Algoma district that a club was organized for the purpose of making a wholesale slaughter of the pests. In the upper photo, members of the club are seen starting out. Below are shown a hunter with his dog during the first day's hunting, and the two Kentucky hounds which were imported for the hunt.

FIRE SERVED MARK TWAIN AS INTRODUCTION TO NEIGHBORS
During his early married life in Buffalo, one Sunday morning, Mark Twain noticed smoke coming out of a window of the house across the street. The owner and his wife, comparatively new-comers, were seated on their porch, evidently unaware of impending danger. The Clemens household had not yet called on them, but Clemens himself now stepped briskly across the street, bowing with leisurely politeness. "My name is Clemens; we ought to have called on you before, and I beg your pardon for intruding now in this informal way, but your house is on fire."—The Mentor.

LAID TO REST.—The funeral of the late Senator Yeo took place on Tuesday at Port Hill and was very largely attended. The services at the house and church were conducted by the Rev. A. S. Traverser, rector of the Episcopal Church, and by Grand Secretary Capt. Ernest Kemp, officiating for the Masonic body. The pall-bearers were members of the Port Hill Lodge. The floral tributes included a wreath from the Senate of Canada.
YOUNG-SWEENEY—A pretty wedding took place Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hanson, 10 Second Street, Rideout, when Agnes Bertrand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Juston Sweeney, of Port Arthur and Perley Clement Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Young, Prince Edward Island, were united in bonds of matrimony. The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of Mr. H. Hanson, while Mrs. Geo. McLennan played the wedding march. Miss Viola Hansen of Keewatin, acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Wm. Pittman as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. H. Pankhurst B. A. assisted by Rev. A. J. Hunter of Teulon, Man., brother-in-law of the groom. The bride's outfit consisted of a poudre blue velvet chine gown, with a black picture hat. She wore a beautiful string of pearls, the gift of the groom and carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore a navy canton crepe gown and black model hat and also carried a spray of white roses. The hostess, Mrs. H. Hanson, was assisted by Mrs. A. J. Hunter, sister of the groom, and wore a crushed satin apricot gown trimmed with ostrich feathers. After the ceremony the forty guests sat down to an informal buffet luncheon, during which a toast was offered to the bridal pair and suitably responded to by the groom. The rooms were appropriately decorated with pink and white carnations and the three tier wedding cake looking an inspiring picture banked in tulle and framed with white streamers suspended from the ceiling. Mr. and Mrs. Young will take up residence in Kenora. The Kenora Miner and News, December 5th, 1924.

MARK TWAIN'S PHYSICIAN WRITES HIS EXPERIENCES
NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Dr. Clarence C. Rice of New York who introduced Mark Twain to H. H. Rogers in 1894, when the fortunes of the writer had failed, and thus got the American humorist back on his feet financially, tells in The Mentor for May of his experiences with Mark Twain as a patient.
According to Dr. Rice, Mark Twain was never seriously ill till his final illness. Dr. Rice writes: "Mark Twain was never ill—just colds I would take his temperature occasionally, but he generally insisted that it was only a bluff and that the thermometer was put in his mouth to keep him from talking. He told me that old yard of the patient who obtained a prescription from his physician and, after looking at the paper, asked how much the medicine would cost. When the doctor told him that it would cost about two dollars, the patient requested his physician to loan him the two. The indignant doctor finally said 'Here are the two dollars; give me the prescription. I want to make an alteration. I'm scratching out the nerve tonic, you won't need that.' Mark Twain observed: 'I have always admired that man. That was a noble piece of graft. I have thought of trying the game on you, but I've never seen the time when I thought you had the two dollars.'"

THE BACKS OF SHEEP CLEAN
Of the most important things in the woolgrower to watch these are "feeding over the back" and Davis, of Ohio, recently that in years past he had made wool to go in the reject because it was dirty. "I never gave it a thought," he said. "When it came time to shear some fodder we just piled it out, and if any were in the way we just dump it on them. It was a case of hurry up and get a shearer. The chaff, dust and dirt fell on the backs of the sheep. Now it was just as easy to shear the sheep from the front, it was something that we had never thought of."

ADOCTOR'S ESTIMATE OF MILK
By Dr. Henry L. K. Shaw
Recently President, American Child Hygiene Association and Consultant, Division of Maternity, Infancy and Child Hygiene, in the New York State Department of Health.
Milk is an essential article of diet. It contains all the materials necessary for the support of life. Milk, however, is one of the most difficult foods to produce and distribute with safety to the consumer. It is often a vehicle for the transmission of tuberculosis and infectious diseases, and is responsible for more sickness than almost any other food. For this reason public-health authorities enact ordinances to safeguard the various steps in the production, transportation and distribution of milk from the cow to the consumer.
To produce clean milk, the farmer must have healthy cows, clean milkers and sanitary utensils. The dealer on his part must deliver milk promptly, pasteurized and properly cooled. The consumer also shares in the responsibility, for the milk, as soon as it is delivered, must be kept clean, cold and covered. It is a sad truth that very often the care of milk in the home is the weakest link in the chain of events from milking to drinking.
Milk is not alone our best food, but it is also our cheapest food—any good druggist and use it like even at the price of the highest cold cream.

grades. Only the best and highest grade of bottled milk should be used for feeding babies, young children and invalids. The best is none too good.
Leading authorities claim that milk is as important a food for adults as it is for children. A quart of milk or its equivalent in other products should be the daily portion of every person in this country. This quart includes the cream contained in butter, used on cereals and in coffee, the milk contained in cheese, gravies and desserts, or taken as a beverage.
Pure, safe and clean milk will prevent much unnecessary sickness. It should be available in proper quality and quantity in every community of the United States. Consumers can not be too insistent in their demand for milk of the very best grade.
most entirely in Ireland, Belgium and Northern France. This method consists of immersing the flax in water that is free from mineral matter and allowing it to remain there until the woody core can be easily separated from the rest of the plant. This process is more rapid in its action than dew retting and, therefore, requires more attention. Flax which has been carefully water-retted commands a higher price than dew retting. Retted flax, adding the juices of one lemon and one orange. Make a sirup with one and a half cups of sugar and one cupful of water; when cool, stir the fruit pulps into this. Dilute with half a cupful or so of water or pine-apple juice, if at hand. Turn into a two-quart freezer and partly freeze. Then stir in one stiffly beaten egg white and continue the freezing. If a fine grained shert is wished, add a cupful of water to the pulps, and strain the fruits from the pulps, using only the juice. Rhubarb batter - pudding. Cut into short lengths enough red rhubarb to make one pint, add one cupful of plumped raisins, one cupful of sugar, and a quarter of a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg or ground cinnamon. Mix fruit, sugar and spices together and place them in a buttered baking dish. Make a batter, using half a cupful of milk, two eggs, one tablespoonful of melted butter or margarin, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one and a half cupfuls of flour. Mix in the usual way and pour this over the fruit mixture; bake at 375 degrees Fahrenheit for one hour. Serve with an orange or lemon sauce. To plump raisins, use the seedless variety, wash them, place them in a wire strainer over a steaming teakettle lid. Let them steam until they are plump.

RETING FLAX
(Experimental Farms Note.)
Retting is the first step in the process of separating the fibre from the woody portion of the flax plant. Two methods of retting are in common use—water and dew retting. The latter is the one most generally employed in Canada. It consists of spreading the flax straw thinly and uniformly in straight rows upon a pasture field. A short thin mat of grass is preferred. When spreading, care should be taken to keep the stems of the flax as nearly parallel as possible.
As this method of retting depends upon the temperature and humidity of the air, the time necessary to complete the process varies in some seasons from four to six weeks. During that time the flax should be turned once or twice so as to secure a uniform ret. This operation can readily be done by placing a long light pole underneath part of the row and throwing it over so that the side of the flax next to the ground is left exposed to the sun.
When the flax is sufficiently retted by this method, it should be of a dark grey colour, and if two or three plants are taken and rubbed between the fingers, it will be found that the woody part of the plant has decayed and is easily separated from the fibrous portion, which is still strong.
As soon as the retting is completed, a dry day should be chosen to lift the flax from the spread field. Tie it in convenient sized bundles and haul it to the flax mill for the next operation.
Water retting is employed at the skin clear and smooth.
