INSTALMENT 32

"I see," she said slowly. "I see. I had lunched with Oliver, and he had brought me back here afterwards. And from that you thought..." She broke off and after a pause went on:

"But, Jim, whatever the condition of our life together may be I shall not make that sort of fool of your name; our name; you needn't ever fear it. And I'd like you to apologize for suggesting it." She looked at him squarely. There was a gleam of admiration for the spirit of her in his answering look, and without further command, he made the apology she had demanded.

"Thank you," she said. Suddenly she sat down again, rather as if her knees were sinking, and said with an unsteady laugh:

"We seem to have cleared the air of quite a lot of misunderstanding. There's still one thing I don't know, though, and that is why you should mind the idea of my being with Oliver so much as to make you come up here to find out about it?"

It was a moment before he answered; then he said:

"No man wants to have, as you say, that sort of a fool made of his name. That's all." His tone said that he refused to be questioned further, but she disregarded it and asked, with a touch of eagerness:

"Is it? Are you sure? Right in the open, Jim? He was silent a long time, and she saw that his hands were fists; then:

"That's all, I tell you!" he cried, his voice rough and odd.

"Very well," she answered quietly.

When she spoke again it was of the entirely prosaic question of food. The next few moments were given to arranging that dinner should be sent up to her sitting-room.

"And about my room?" he asked. "Are you staying?" she cried. "Oh, I hadn't thought of that!" She looked up at him, her color heightened. Then, quickly: "My suite is only half a suite really. The rest adjoins. You can arrange for that, if you like..."

"Thanks," he said, smiling rather queerly. "Do you know, Lucy, I never expected to be ordered about; given permission to do this or that quite as much as I get it from you. Above all..." he paused, looking down at her.

"You never expected to obey, did you?" she put in, her upraised eyes challenging his.

He laughed. "And do you know why you do it?" she went on. "Because deep down you know I'm right; deep down, you know this revengefulness of yours is hateful, wrong, a waste of everything that's fine in you; and because, Jim, just because there is so much that's fine in you..."

She broke off breathlessly and added:

"Telephone down to the reception clerk about your room."

Over supper he asked her about the papers that were scattered on her writing table, and she told him what they were. He laughed bitterly.

"And though you have read the evidence, you still believe that I am innocent?" he asked.

"More than ever," she assured him. She leaned across the supper table, eagerly. "Jim, the whole case against you rested, really, upon that horrid man, Macklin. His saying that you hadn't mentioned the loss of your wallet."

"How do you know he wasn't only saying what was true?" he put in.

"I do know it, I've seen him, for one thing. Jim. Just that one lie of his turns the whole thing against you, Jim."

"Might not I be the liar?" She shook her head. "Jim, why won't you ever tell me that you didn't do it? Not that I need your assurance, but why don't you give me assurance, but why won't you, Jim?"

He rose suddenly, pushing back his chair and flinging down his table napkin.

"Why won't I?" he asked abruptly, his back towards her. "Do you want to know why?"

"Yes."

He swung round, facing her again. "Because faith... just pure, unquestioning faith, is so... so devilish sweet..." he said, his face working oddly.

She was touched through and through. She rose quickly and went to him; put her hands on his shoulders and looked up into his face.

"Jim... Jim... Is it so sweet? Even from me? Does it help? Make things any easier? Ah, Jim, you've got all my faith... All my love... Can't you let it compensate? Can't you let it heal the wound of those awful years? Jim, there's only that between us now; only—you, yourself; the you that has suffered so, and that feels so bitterly resentful. And that isn't the real you at all. The real you is that man who helped me through the storm; who can be so dear and so gentle. And Jim, who cared enough whether his wife was playing the fool with another man to come up, post haste to find out about it? The man who doesn't love... no other woman..."

"Ah, Jim, dear, there's nothing I wouldn't do... Nothing, if you could only... not fight me anymore... Make me your friend..."

He stood, straight and rigid, the suddenly caught her arm with a strength that was painful, and shook her.

"Don't try it on," he said, through his teeth. "Don't, do you hear? Don't try your woman-power on me... I've warned you that I'm... nothing more exalted than a man... I've warned you, Lucy. Warned you..."

He thrust her suddenly from him; she stumbled back to her chair, covering her face with her hands.

He stood, looking down at her hands clenched, breathing quick. If he expected an outburst of indignation from her he was disappointed; for when she raised her face again, looked at him, her eyes were calm, and all she said very quietly was:

"I was a long time before either I could or would have moved presently and flung, himself, moodily into a deep chair, silence still reigned. Then a servant came for the supper things; cleared them and left a tray, laden with the paraphernalia of coffee. She rose then and stood beside the table, manipulating the percolator. A moment later she carried a cup of coffee to him, holding the sugar bowl in the other hand.

"Coffee, Jim?"

He took it without looking up, and without thanks. She popped a little nub of sugar into the cup, smiling down at his bent head.

"See, it's four of these ridiculous little lumps, isn't it?" she said. There was a curious, carressing note in her voice; a note that seemed almost maternal in its sweetness. He nodded, still without speaking. She popped in three more pieces.

"Sugar-baby," she said softly. He made a sound something between a laugh and a grunt.

"Garter?" she asked. "I've got one," he said shortly. "I'll smoke if I want to."

She turned and set down the sugar bowl; turned back, and he found that she was presenting a lighted match.

"I'll smoke if I..." he began again, but she broke in:

"It's a pity not to smoke, when you're absolutely dying to, just because you're sulky and perverse. And it's a pity to waste a perfectly good match... Quick, Jim, I'll burn my fingers..."

"Burn them, then," he broke out nervily.

COULDN'T COMB HAIR

Crippled by Rheumatism

"I had been suffering with rheumatism for about 2 years, and about this time last year was laid up for 10 weeks. My hands and arms and knees were the worst affected. I could not get about at all. I could not wash my face or comb my hair. All this had to be done for me. At the beginning of this year I started taking Kruschen Salts every morning and I am pleased to say I am quite well now and able to see to my home and can go out in all kinds of weather without it affecting me."

"Mrs. P. K. Rheumatism is associated with an excess of Uric Acid in the system. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have as to render it capable of being easily washed out of the system. Other ingredients of Kruschen assist nature to flush out the bowels and prevent food fermentation taking place in the intestine, and thereby check the formation not only of uric acid but of other impurities which poison the blood and pave the way to ill-health.

EYES TESTED AND GLASSES FITTED E. W. TAYLOR J. S. TAYLOR Optometrists 142 Richmond Street 499-2-4-1st-51.

To The Electors Of The City of Charlottetown.

It is to turn a deaf ear to the very many individual citizens from all parts of the city who have spoken to me, and to a largely signed requisition of others of my fellow citizens, requesting that I should offer as a candidate for the Mayorship, I have decided to comply with their wishes.

The financial condition of the city causes much anxiety. If its credit is to be saved from destructive impairment, the city's financial budget must be made to balance. I am in hopes, however, that by the adoption of methods of economy and the elimination of all waste, it will be unnecessary to impose any addition to the existing rate of taxation.

All shams and pretences must be put an end to. All valid civic by-laws and all laws for the protection of life and property should be rigidly enforced. All classes must be treated fairly but favoritism should be abolished. If there be favors to spare, these should be given to the most needy and not, as in the recent past, to the least needy. I shall use my best endeavors to accomplish all these ends.

I respectfully ask the citizens for their support and confidence. A house to house canvass is impossible as well as undesirable. The intelligence of our citizens is quite high enough to enable them to decide whom to vote for without undergoing the indignity of being coerced, urged or badgered. In any case, come out and vote. If according to your best judgment you can't vote for me, vote against me. I would rather be defeated by voters willing to fulfill the highest duty of citizenship than by the stay away conduct of laggards who have not yet learned to place a real value on the high privilege of the franchise.

I have the honor to be, etc., W. S. STEWART. 384-1-30-51-51.

Tells Dyspeptics What to Eat

Starch does not digest. It is a well known fact that some foods have a strong tendency to produce excessive stomach acidity and consequent indigestion. By omitting from daily meals those foods that experience proves do not agree and limiting the diet to certain tasteful, unspicing foods, stomach troubles may in many instances, be slowly overcome. Nine times in ten, however, indigestion, gas, etc., are due to excessive acidity and the premature souring of food in the stomach. Keep the stomach clean and sweet by feeding it on this extra acid and then suffering can eat the foods they like best and as much as they want in reason and have no stomach trouble at all.

Thousands of people do this daily by merely taking after every meal a little Bisurated Magnesia, which can be had at any good drug store in either powder or tablet form. Bisurated Magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acids, stops food fermentation and meals digest as naturally and painlessly as in the stomach of a healthy child. Stomach comfort means a lot and most folks like good things to eat. Enjoy them both by making Bisurated Magnesia your daily after-eating protection.

ELECTION CARD

TO THE ELECTORS OF WARD FOUR

I respectfully ask the support of those who feel that I am capable of representing them in Ward four and the city in general.

FRANK S. CURRIE. 532-2-5-5

To The Electors Of Ward Three

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have been requested by many of the voters in this ward to nominate for City Councillor. In placing my name in nomination I wish to work for the best interests of the city, watching out for economy in all departments. I am a business man, carrying on business in Ward Three, also a property holder. As a member of the City Fire Department for many years, I have endeavored to give my best services to the city.

Thanking the many electors for their courtesies and asking for your support at the polls on Wednesday, the tenth instant, I remain, Yours respectfully, FRED H. TRAINOR.

499-2-4-1st-51.

ELECTION CARD

Electors Ward 3. Ladies & Gentlemen:—

Having been waited upon by a large number of Electors of the Ward, including many of the leading business men of the City, I have placed my name in nomination as Councillor.

All my life I have been associated with business and finance and therefore believe I am qualified to attend to the affairs of the City in such a manner as to give the Citizens satisfactory service.

Thanking you in anticipation of your kind support. I am, Respectfully Yours, B. C. VanDerstine. 504-2-4-5-6-8-9-51

ELECTION CARD

To the Electors of Ward 4, Ladies & Gentlemen:

Having had the honor of representing you for the past four years at the Council Board, I have again nominated to contest this Ward at the forthcoming election. As your representative I have always endeavored to serve you to the best of my ability; and feel I have assisted in accomplishing many things of benefit to the Ward and the City.

One matter which has received my earnest attention has been the Electric Light question, and during the tenure of the incoming Council this important matter will be dealt with in a renewal or alteration of the contract in the interests of the citizens. The securing of the very best possible contract—particularly the reduction of the Service Charge and the Power Rates—will be strongly urged by me.

General and Special Civic interests will receive my most careful attention. Strict economy consistent with efficient service and the safeguarding of workmen's interests will ever guide me.

Thanking you for your anticipated support, I am, Respectfully yours, B. R. HOLMAN. 497-2-4-1st-31

To The Electors of Ward Four

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I am in the field as a candidate for Councillor for Ward 4. If you elect me, I shall endeavor to prove worthy of your confidence and promise my support to every measure tending to advance the best interests of this city, including (1) The holding of an external audit; (2) A contract between the city and the electric light company whereby our citizens will have lower rates and a substantial reduction in the service charges.

As it will be impossible for me to conduct a personal canvass I take this means of soliciting your votes and support. Respectfully yours, R. BYRON BROWN.

ELECTION CARD

TO THE ELECTORS OF WARD FIVE:

Ladies & Gentlemen: It is my privilege once again to offer my services to Ward Five and the citizens in general as Councillor.

Having been one of your representatives for the past six years in the City Council, I have endeavored to give you the best services within my power. Everything in connection with the betterment of the City consistent with our revenue will receive my hearty approval. It is not my intention to make a personal canvass; my record is before you and I take this opportunity of soliciting your support on election day. Thanking you for your support in the past and anticipating a continuance of same on February 10th.

Respectfully yours, SAMUEL KENNEDY. 520-2-5-51.

THE POTATO SITUATION

It was a disappointment to the potato growers and dealers of Prince Edward Island, when the press announced that Hon. John Gilmour, Minister of Agriculture of Great Britain did not raise the embargo to admit Canadian potatoes. Every person interested in potatoes realizes that there is a large surplus of potatoes in Canada, as well as in United States, and it is doubtful if a market can be found for all the marketable potatoes.

It is unwise to suppose that all the potatoes in Prince Edward Island can be shipped in a short time. It will take weeks and months to dispose of them in an ordinary way, and we feel that it is better to keep them later on.

We can find a market for a limited quantity of good sound potatoes, and we are prepared to co-operate with the farmers, especially in the district of Charlottetown, where we have warehouse facilities for packing the stock carefully, and are prepared to supply labor, and sell the potatoes to the best advantage for a very small commission.

If you are interested, drop in and we will talk the matter over. J. LESTER DOUGLAS, P. E. I. 559-2-6-31. 31 Queen Street, Charlottetown, P. E. I.
