Tom Mix And
"Tony" At Capitol

Score another bullseye for that marksman of top-notch pictures, Mr. Tom Mix.

"The Texas Bad Man" thundered its way out of Universal City in a maze of blood-rousing thrills to set off a miniature tornado of action on the Capitol screen yesterday and the two-listed Texas cowboy was in the midst of all the shootin' and was furnishing the lion's share of the excitement.

If there were any unbelieving Mix patrons in the screen world before "The Texas Bad Man," there will unquestionably be none after they view it.

Mix plays a stalwart Texas Ranger in the disguise of a nasty, bold bandit—all to round up a gang of desperate crooks—and what a round-up it is!

There is shooting, riding and general excitement galore, and Tom Mix carries off his honors like the great picture star he is. The country unquestionably needs more Tom Mix in addition to meeting the well-known emergency of a good five-cent cigar.

Beautiful Lucille Powers is entirely adequate as the heroine. Willard Robertson gives a finished performance as the dual-natured crook and Fred Kohler leaves nothing to be desired as the vicious villain.

THIRD DEGREE IN GLASGOW

Charged with third-degree methods Sergeant Robert Thomson and Constables James Fraser and John Agnew have been placed on trial in Glasgow, Scotland. They are said to have been abusive to James McCumiskey, whom they suspected of stealing money and papers.
While interrogating him, it is alleged, they hit him in the face and head and "with a strap or some other instrument seized him by the throat and compressed it, to his severe injury, with intent to extort a confession."

IN MEMORIAM

MARSHALL JAMES MATHESON

There passed from this life to his eternal home, on September 26th, 1932, Marshall J. Matheson, Springfield, P. E. I., after a very brief illness. He entered the P. E. I. Hospital a few weeks previous and every hope was held for his complete recovery, but alarming symptoms developed and despite best medical care and attention his gentle spirit passed on at the early age of 24 years six months.

Of a splendid physique and robust constitution the announcement of his death in the full vigor of manhood came as a shock to his relatives and friends and cast a gloom over the entire community.

He was born at Springfield, P.E.I. the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs.
Angus Matheson, received his education at the district school and P. W. College, and for a number of years he taught school successfully in the surrounding districts, later taking up farming with his father at Springfield.

He was of a singularly happy disposition, generous, loyal to his friends and a keen lover of clean and manly sports, a prominent figure at our athletic gatherings and always a very successful competitor.

He took an active interest in the social and religious life of the community, a member of the Presbyterian Church and the Order of the Sons of Temperance.

He leaves to mourn besides his sorrowing parents the following brothers and sisters:—Daniel J., Regina, Sask.; Joseph, Emerald; Nelson, Springfield; Christie, Mrs.
Bowness, Florida and Lillian at home.

The funeral which was held from his father's residence on Sept. 28th was largely attended. Service was conducted by the Rev. Carlyle Webster, Zion Presbyterian Church, Charlottetown, assisted by Rev. Dr.
Kier Thompson and Rev. R. H.
Stavert and Rev. Thomas Palethorpe after which followed by a long procession he was tenderly laid to rest in Summerfield Cemetery, Rev. Mr. Webster officiated at the grave.

The following were the pall bearers:—John A. MacLeod, Daniel MacLeod, Sutherland MacKay, John Hickox, Roy Morrison, Reginald Haslam.

bore silent tribute to a loved one gone. Pillow, The family, Wreath, Secret of Evolution

And Heridity
Is Disclosed

PASADENA, Calif., Nov 3—Studies of the internal structure of chromosomes, those slender threads of life that house the secrets of evolution and heredity, have been disclosed here by Berwind P. Kaufman, National Research Fellow in Biology on leave from the University of Alabama.

Kaufman said experimental work at the Kerckhoff Biological Laboratories here on the basic cell life of the drosophila melanogaster, or vinegar fly, combined with his study of plant cell life, convince him that the internal structure of chromosomes is coil-like, these minute organisms visible in powerful microscopes, being spiral forms, rather than of a banded structure.

This study is of profound importance to biologists, for these chromosomes are the moving apartment houses in which dwell the genes, these units of heredity and evolution wherein nature has locked the secret of life itself.

Genes have never been seen, they being such tiny particles, several hundred or more being contained in the chromosomes that measures about a hundred thousandths of an inch. Chromosomes vary in size, but not in proportion to the living structure which they make up.

For instance, Kaufman pointed out, the X and Y chromosomes that determine sex in humans are only half as large as the similar chromosomes in flies, while the chromosomes in grasshoppers are much larger than in flies.

Every species of plant and animal life has a definite number of chromosomes, humans having 48, flies eight and some microscopic water animals have much larger numbers.

As far as research work has gone each gene appears to be beyond the highest power of microscopes, but rough calculations in genetics suggest they are not smaller than the largest known organic molecules. A fixed number of genes is believed to exist in linear order in each chromosome.

Kaufman explained that for this reason experimental analysis of the internal structure of chromosomes is of real importance to genetic research workers.

HE TRAVELS 7,000,000 MILES When Julius Brittlebank, of Charleston, S. C., arrived in London, recently he had completed more than 1,000,000 miles in his travels over the globe. He was on his thirteenth world tour, but it is far from his last, he said. Brittle-bank began his globe-trotting 24 years ago, when he was 50, and he declares that traveling is responsible for his perfect health. "The more I see of the world," he said, "the more I become convinced that opportunities still exist for young
