PATIENT WITH THE LIVING. About our pillowed slumber. Sweet friend, when thou and I are gone Beyond earth's weary labor, When small shall be our need of grace From comrade or from neighbor, Past all the strife, the toil, the care, And done with all the sighings, What tender truth shall we have gained, Alas! by simply dying? Then lips so chary of their praise Will tell our merits over; And eyes too swift our faults to see Shall no defect discover. Then hands that would not lift a stone Where stones were thick to cumber Our steep hill path, will scatter flowers

Sweet friend, perchance both thou and I, Ere love is past forgiving, Should take the earnest lesson home— Be patient with the living. Today's repressed rebuke may save Our blinding tears tomorrow; Then patience, e'en when keenest edge May whet a nameless sorrow.

'Tis easy to be gentle when Death's silence ahazes out clamor, And easy to discern the best of things Through memory's mystic glamor; But wise it were for thee and me, Ere love is past forgiving, To take the tender lesson home— Be patient with the living.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

A GLORIOUS RECORD OF GENIUS

Madam Sarah Bernhardt in "Camille" Rejane in Sans Gene.

If the opportunity presented itself some years ago to see the great and only Sarah Bernhardt at the price charged for an ordinary dramatic entertainment, the populace would stare in open mouth wonder and consider how it would be done. Modern science in its rapid strides, however, makes it possible, and the fact that this wonderful artist will be seen at the People's Theatre tomorrow night, at moderate prices, crowded houses are assured. Now in her 71st year, the Divine Sarah will be seen in all her glorious splendor, enacting her finest role, assisted by her All-Star Company, a marvellous Motion Picture, recording the personality of the Greatest Actors in the world, a production that cost an enormous sum. It is Bernhardt herself that the spectators see. Apparently as young as ever, and full of life and passion and portraying the role of Camille with an intensity of emotion which has never been surpassed, the most famous actress in the world holds all as she would by her living presence. Bernhardt is supported by a group of artists of almost equal renown and the play is presented with wonderful clearness and completeness. It is beautifully staged, every detail fitting the story and the effects being secured which would be impossible through the limitations of an ordinary stage. The pictures also include a presentation of Madame Rejane Sans Gene, Sardou's famous play, by Rejane, an actress who stands next to Bernhardt in fame. The production is a spectacular one, the scenes at the time of the French revolution and afterwards in Napoleon's court, giving the opportunity for some remarkable pictures.

Bernhardt, in Camille, will be shown at the People's Theatre twice on Wednesday night, Rejane twice on Thursday night, absolutely ONLY ONE night for each production, one chance in a life time, don't miss your opportunity. Admission 10c, reserved seats (only a few) 15c.

TWO WIRELESS MEN ON C. N. R. STEAMERS.

Royal Line Will Also Test Use of Searchlight on the Atlantic.

The Canadian Northern Railway has decided to maintain a second wireless operator on the steamers Royal Edward and Royal George, thus obtaining the twenty-four hour service which has been shown so essential by the Titanic disaster. These will be about the first of the medium-sized trans-Atlantic steamers to have two operators, and the innovation will probably be put in effect within a week or two. The company is also arranging to have a searchlight fitted on the Royal Edward for the purpose of making a thorough test of its ability. Some years ago the Caronia, of the Cunard Line, was provided with a searchlight, but for some reason this was very quickly abandoned, and since then no further experiments have been made in the direction. Practically the only ocean-going vessels which carry searchlights to-day are those in the Anglo-Australasian service, which are compelled to have them for use in passing through the Suez Canal.

It is with some pride that the Royal Line officers point to the fact that their steamers have always been equipped with life boat and raft accommodation in excess of the British Board of Trade requirements. In addition to the sixteen standard lifeboats demanded by law, they have a smaller boat, accommodating 16 people, four collapsible boats and several rafts. Thus the Royal Edward and George, which are rated at 12,000 tons, and never carry more than 1,500 people on board, have room for more in their boats than had the Titanic, rated at 45,000 tons and licensed to carry over 4,000 people. The C. N. R. has now ordered additional lifeboats, which will bring their saving capacity up to the full complement of passengers and crew.

Prof. H. T. Barnes, of McGill, who has invented a device called the micro-thermometer, has sailed by the Royal George for the purpose of testing the apparatus. It trails from the ship's tail after the fashion of a patent log, and is expected to report the presence and location of ice within a radius of two miles, by means of a temperature dial in the chart room.
