DANDELIONS WERE GATHERED AT AMOS QUE. IN JANUARY

QUEBEC, Que., March 3 — (By The Canadian Press)—January, 1932 was the most peculiar month that the Province of Quebec has ever experienced from a weather point of view. Though a maximum temperature of 32 degrees below zero was reported in the month, it was so warm on other occasions that aspens and willows were reported budding and dandelions were gathered at Amos, in Abitibi County on January 15. Reports from the same place indicated that farmers had been ploughing, thus establishing a record for Northern Quebec.

PEOPLE FREQUENT LIBRARIES MORE IN DEPRESSION TIMES

MONTREAL, Que., March 4—(By The Canadian Press)—Circulation of books in United States libraries has increased by 10,000,000 and some libraries have advertised standing room only. Miss Josephine Adams, president of the American Library Association, and vice-director of the School of Library Science at Pratt, Brooklyn, stated in a recent visit to McGill. Others, she said, had to limit the time to read so that more people could get a chance to use library facilities. Such a wholesale turning of libraries indicated the coming of a new and greater intellectual renaissance or revival of learning, she thought.

Asked what kind of books unemerged should have placed at their disposal, Miss Rathbone said that librarians had at first thought that they should concentrate on supplying books of the distinctly educational variety but today they are realizing the necessity of robust, entertaining fiction.

"It may not be best policy for a man suffering from the ills of unemployment," she said, "to read at great length concerning the causes of unemployment and thus steep himself in unemployment topics. He may need something to distract his mind and maintain his morale."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. T. W. JACKSON

Passed from this life in the Gale Hospital, Haverhill, Mass., on Feb. 9th, Mrs. T. W. Jackson (nee Philomena M. Steele) aged 36 years. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Steele of Gaspereaux, P. E. I. and when a young girl here was highly thought of. Miss Steele and Mr. Jackson went to Haverhill about thirteen years ago and there Mr. Jackson secured a good position in the Haverhill railway station which he has held ever since. They were married a short time after going there, and took charge of a farm at number one North avenue, on which they were allowed by the owner, enough ground to raise quite a quantity of products for themselves.

She being a smart, industrious woman and with what spare time her husband had to help her at home, they were doing well financially.

As time went by there were four children born to them, which made their earthly ties more binding, and they both looked forward to a happy and prosperous future. Alas how soon their hopes vanished; a few months ago Mrs. Jackson began to fail in health and despite all the best physicians could do she steadily failed.

Finally she went to the Gale Hospital and had an X-ray examination, when they decided an operation was necessary, but first she required a blood transfusion so her husband gave the blood. It was finally deemed necessary to operate although there were poor hopes held out for her recovery.

The operation was then performed on Feb. 4th but with all the best of skill of physicians and nurses she passed away on the 9th at 8 p. m. She received the last rites of her church from the Rev. Father Smith of the Catholic Faith of which she had been a devout member.

Her husband and his sister, Miss Daisy Jackson were beside her and she was able to speak to them till near the last, asking Miss Jackson to care for her children, which she promised to do. Being thus consoled she soon expired, and a loving wife and mother had gone to that great beyond.

On Thursday the 11th, Mr. Jackson and his sister left Haverhill with the remains, arriving in Charlottetown Saturday evening. But for the forethought of two of the deceased's brother, Angus and Howard, they would have been compelled to remain in the city until Monday.

The brothers drove to Vernon River Friday afternoon and Saturday Mr. Joseph Murphy took his horse and sled and with Howard Steele met them in Charlottetown that night, bringing all to Vernon. After a rest at Mr. Murphy's, Angus and Howard with their own horse and sled proceeded with the remains for home accompanied as far as Montague by Mr. Morrissey and Mr. Dunphy.

They arrived home Sunday morning at sun rise, and from then until the funeral took place the large house of her childhood was filled with relatives, old friends and schoolmates of one they loved in life and respected in death.

The casket was a beautiful one and literally banked with flowers presented by friends in and around Haverhill, also fifty mass cards by friends there, with thirty more presented here. Mr. Jackson spoke very highly of the people there for their hospitality in all his trouble.

The funeral took place on Monday morning at 8 o'clock from the home to St. Paul's Church, Sturgeon. Although the day was very cold there were fifty six sleighs in the funeral procession besides a large number of people who met at the church.

The funeral High Mass was celebrated by the Rev. George McDonald who also officiated at the cemetery where the last remains of a loving wife and mother was laid to rest.

The pall bearers were Leo Fay, John Steele, Michael Steele, all of Newport and Maurice Daly, Gus Jamieson of Sturgeon and Aloysius McDonald of Panmure.

She leaves to mourn a kind husband and four children, three boys

IMPRISONED BY MISTRESS IS NOW REWARDED

LONDON, March 4—(By The Canadian Press)—By settlement, Miss Sarah Laura Turner (the maid-servant who claimed she was imprisoned for 13 years by her former mistress, Miss Emma Torr Smith, of Oak Lawn, Beulah Hill, Upper Norwood), is to receive $10,000 and $2,500 costs.

Miss Turner had claimed damages in the King's Bench Division for alleged false imprisonment and reasonable remuneration for her services between July 1916, and November, 1929. It was two years ago, following an illness, that Miss Torr or finally found herself away from Oak Lawn, alone, and dazed by the world, she went to the Rev. H. E. Sexton. The vicar listened to her story in amazement, made inquiries and took up her case. He found her work as a domestic help and investigated the legal side of her case.

Interviewed, she said: "Everything seems so strange. Your world is not my world. I have never been to a theatre or a cinema. I did not know what wireless was when I first heard it recently. What do I do now apart from work? I read. I love literature, and particularly poetry. I learned a lot of verse as a child, and during the past 13 years, when I had nothing to read and nothing to occupy my time, I used to repeat it over and over again to myself."

ANCIENT CASTLE NOW UP TO DATE

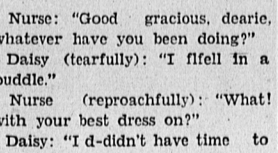

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 4 (By The Canadian Press)—The beautiful castle of Marnau, left by the late Swedish Queen Victoria as a gift to her grandson Prince Lennart, son of Prince William, is being supplied with a number of ultra modern contrivances by the young Prince, who is very fond of mechanics and inventions. He recently married a commoner.

The features include an automatic telephone system connecting his castle with the homes of his dependents and a highly ingenious burglar and fire alarm system, which permits the master of the castle to control every window and entrance to his home and also to safeguard himself against fire indicated by a rising temperature in any of the rooms. The slightest irregularity in any one of these respects results in a light appearing on a special chart made of glass and located in the studio. Simultaneously the whole exterior of the castle is lit up making a possible burglar all too visible. The Prince has also installed a powerful radio-equipment with a loud-speaking arrangement enabling him to relay programmes to his tenants. Being extremely fond of plays and theatricals the Prince has constructed a highly mechanized stage fitted with convenience for every kind of film projection. An 18-hole golf course and a tennis court complete the delightfully modern equipment of the ancient castle of Marnau.

 Daisy (tearfully): "I fell in a puddle."

Nurse (reproachfully): "What! with your best dress on?"
 Daisy: "I d-didn't have time to change."

SLAVERY INDEED
 "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." (V. 34) All sin binds one down. A bad habit is a fetter upon the soul. The prophet of Mecca knew this, and so wine is proscribed by the Koran, because of the moral evil so often connected with it. In all parts of the Mohammedan world as yet uncorrupted by western habits. Moslems are teetotallers. At a recent luncheon in the private home of a celebrated English family in London, but one guest declined all intoxicating beverages at the table, and he was a Mohammedan of about twenty-five years, from Egypt. Says MacKie, "Orientals are not inclined to intemperance. Under the influence of wine they are easily tempted into quarrelling and crime. It is regarded by them as a shameful vice and is of rare occurrence. When it does occur, it is kept out of sight (compare I Thess. 5: 7). The Arabs in their proverbs, indeed, speak of wine as expelling reason and putting in its place remorse."

Yield to NERVILINE

Those who have tested out numerous liniments will agree that where something is needed to dislodge a deep-seated, more or less chronic condition, nothing compares with NERVILINE.

Try NERVILINE for Stiffness

Miss B. Witherell, of 30 Bloor Street West, Toronto, points the way to health for many a poor sufferer. "I want to tell you," states Miss Witherell, "how I have benefited by NERVILINE. As I am an athlete, I suffer from sprains and muscular soreness of the limbs. I have found after an application of NERVILINE upon retiring my limbs feel as good as new."—Miss B. Witherell.

Liquor Enslaves

Alcohol is no respecter of persons. It trips both high and low, young and old, men and women. In one evening a passenger on a street car going downtown saw an unemployed laborer talk foolishly the whole journey to a baby across the aisle. He was in his cups and irresponsible. Later in the evening, returning in an uptown car, this passenger saw a superbly dressed, distinguished-looking man sitting

W. C. T. U. Notes

The life of a drinking man is apt to be divided into two chapters of a very tragic serial, in the first of which he could have left off if he would, and in the second he would have left off if he could.

—Frances E. Willard.

DON'T DRINK TONIGHT

I left my mother at the door
 My sister by her side
 Their clasped hands and loving looks
 Forbade their doubts to hide.
 I left and met with comrades gay
 When the moon brought out her light
 And my loving mother whispered to me,
 "Don't drink, my boy, tonight!"

Long years have rolled away since then
 My jetty curls are gray,
 But oh, those words are with me yet
 And will not pass away.
 I see my mother's loving face
 With goodness radiant bright
 And hear the words rise on my ear,
 "Don't drink, my boy, tonight!"

My mother now is resting sweet
 In the graveyard on the hill,
 But mother's words come back to me
 And haunt my memory still.
 I've often passed the cup,
 Oh, then my heart was right,
 Because I heeded the warning words,
 "Don't drink, my boy, tonight!"

I've now passed down the road of life,
 And soon my race is run;
 A mother's warning listened to
 An immortal crown has won.
 Oh, mothers with your blessed smile,
 Look on your boys so bright,
 And say, as you alone can say,
 "Don't drink, my boy, tonight!"

These words will prove a warning when
 In the thronging path of life
 The boy is in the tempter's wiles
 And yielding in the strife,
 These words will stop the morning cup
 And the revelry at night,
 By whispering back a mother's voice—
 "Don't drink, my boy, tonight!"

A NOVELIST ON TEMPERANCE

The cause of Temperance is recruiting new advocates all the time. The following is from Mr. Arnold Bennett, the novelist:—

"I look among my acquaintances in various spheres on business, literature, the stage, bar, politics, and I see everywhere men whose lives are obviously clouded and their careers imperilled by continued indulgence in alcohol, and I would say further that the decent majority of people who drink anything at all would be far more interesting companions, more lovable helpmates, more efficient citizens, if they cut down their consumption by one-half. The majority of them would gladly do this, but cannot of their own accord; they simply can't. Are the majority of drinkers slaves to alcohol in the sense that it controls them more than they can control it? They are."

Teacher: What is the Yellow Peril Johnnie?
 John: A banana skin on the pavement, miss.

A little country fellow had had his first experience of a lift, and on returning home his father asked him what it was like.
 "It was so funny, paw," he said, "we went into a little house and the upstairs came down."

CHICAGO, Ills., Mar. 4.—One of Canada's leading physicians, Dr. Crawford C. McCullough of Ft. William, Ontario, will be the official representative of Rotary International at the Pacific Rotary Conference in Honolulu June 12-14.

Dr. McCullough has taken a prominent part in Rotary for many years. He was international president in 1921-22, and has since been chairman of many important committees.

This will be the fourth such conference organized by the Rotarians of all countries bordering on the Pacific Ocean, and Dr. McCullough will be a principal speaker. The purpose of these gatherings is to lay the foundation for the development of a better international understanding between the peoples of the countries touching the Pacific.

Dr. McCullough is a native of Gananogue. He has had extensive experience in European and North American clinics and is a recognized authority on diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. During the war he formed a food production and conservation association whose regulations were subsequently adapted by the Food Control Department of the Dominion Government at Ottawa.

The tragedy of the liquor habit is that it enslaves. Men boast of their liberty to take a drink if they want it only to find in later life that they constantly want it, and are not satisfied without it. In the end it is moral slavery.

Truly did Jesus say: "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." Many allow alcohol to become their master.

From this degraded slavery Christ can free men. "If the Son therefore makes you free, ye shall be free indeed."

UNFAILING FIDELITY

Even your best friend, in the stress of his own affairs, may blamelessly fail in some measure in his discharge of the duty you imposed upon him. The fidelity of a trust company, named executor in your will, is unfailing since it brings undivided and wholehearted interest to its self-assumed task.

ENGLISH ACTRESS PUZZLED BY QUEER BROADWAY CUSTOMS

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 4.—Because she doesn't collect old hats, has never been in the fish business, doesn't drape her dressing table with good luck charms and hasn't a pet monkey, Diana Wynyard wonders whether she can be a "howling success."

The stately, 25-year-old Londoner came to Broadway from Piccadilly ten weeks ago. The critics said plenty of nice things about her show. But Miss Wynyard voiced a few doubts as she wiped off her makeup today.

"I'm just a normal girl," she sobbed in her best dramatic manner. "I haven't an eccentricity to my name. I'm not a bit superstitious. I never do crazy things. So what are my chances?"

"You expect your theatre people to be different; you want them to be glamorous creatures, unlike anyone else. Ed Mynn always wears two white carnations. Somebody else rides elephants in her spare time. This star drinks her cocktails—I mean her fingerale—out of a slipper. And where does that leave me?"

As she talked Miss Wynyard kept her eyes closed or addressed her observations to her own image in a mirror surrounded by congratulatory cablegrams.

"Your funny language is wonderful—so invigorating, but oh, so perplexing! The maid at my hotel the first day asked me if she could clean the parlor. I didn't know what the word meant, so I said: 'Eh-uh-eh?' Now she thinks I'm deaf and writes out all her questions."

"Someone asked me if I would like some flapjacks. I thought maybe they were something to wear, so I said I had plenty of clothes, thank you."

"Another person said he was going somewhere on a trolley. I thought he was crazy. In England it's the thing they haul luggage on. A boy from Philadelphia was telling me about scrapple. I thought it was some kind of a fight."

"But the other day I went into a drapers—a drapers—well, what you call a woman's shop—and asked for some silk panties, instead of knickers as I would have said in London. "So you see, I'm learning. But I can't figure out any way to get eccentric, and that worries me."
