THE KIRK OF ST. JAMES

Preaching last night from the Kirk pulpit on the text "For who hath despised the day of small things?" (Zechariah 4:10), the Minister, the Rev. T. H. Bussell Somers said in conclusion, "Do you think you are inching along down pigmy paths? Are you sure that some other task at the other side of the world would do far more good? Are you despising the day of small things? Forgive the bluntness when I say you do not know very much about what is small and what is great. Neither do I. There is a world around our world that has its own reckonings.

"Squirrels for nuts contend, and, wrong or right,
For the world's empires kings, ambitious fight.
What odds?—to us 'tis all the self same thing,
A nut, a world, a squirrel, and a king."

But our Lord was content to do little things in a little land, to teach a class of twelve dull pupils, and heal a few folk, and trust a few trustless sinners, and die at last upon what someone has called "a funny little cross". That is what it was—a funny little cross so near to the ground that a sponge on a reed could be pressed to His lips. The Sea of Galilee was eleven miles long. By test of our jumboism His life was hardly worth living. He met nobody of importance. He was never in the news as we reckon news. He lived a little life, and died a little death among small people in a small sphere.

"Little? "What do you think? "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him." Yes, God has the last word—if you dare believe it. So you can go back tomorrow to typing letters or mending the children's clothes. Does it still seem small to you? Remember: there is a world around this world. "Who hath despised the day of small things?"

Delightful Organ Recital Held Here

A very delightful organ recital was given last night in Trinity United Church under the auspices of the Women's Music Club.

The talented recitalist was Mr. Walter MacNutt, organist of Trinity Church, Toronto, and son of Major T. Edgar MacNutt of this City. Mr. MacNutt, who is a member of the Canadian Army is at present stationed at the Basic Training Centre, Beach Grove Inn.

The programme was as follows:

Suite Gothique—I. Choral; II. Minuet Gothique; III. Priere a Notre Dame; IV. Toccata—Boellman.

Minuet from "Berenice"—Handel.

Finale from "Organ Concerto No. 2."—Handel.

Air from "Water Music"—Handel.

Choral Preludes:-

Song 13. (Gibbons)—Vaughan-Williams.

Now thank we all our God—Bach.

Lo, now a Rose is blooming—Brahms.

Jesu, joy of man desiring—Bach.

Air on the "G" string" from Suite in D.—Bach.

Fugue in "E" flat (St. Anne)—Bach.

Requests:-

Londonderry Air.

Improvisation on 'Ye watchers and ye holy ones".

Goin' home.

Take me to a green Isle—Walter MacNutt.

Minuetto antico e Musetta—Pietro Yon.

Adagietto—Bizet.

Finale from "Organ Concerto No. 2"—Mendelssohn.

Mr. MacNutt played all in a most musicianly manner and with great technical precision, as becomes one who is well known as a composer of organ and other music and who was a pupil of Mr. Healey Willan of Toronto.

The numbers were chosen with such taste and discrimination that it is difficult to select any as outstanding, but, to the writer, the air from Handel's Water Music, and all the pieces by Bach were particularly appealing.

Mr. MacNutt's own composition, which is well known as a song, was very lovely and special thanks are due him for playing it. His improvisation on the fine old Church tune "Ye watchers and ye holy ones" was also most impressive.

Mr. MacNutt's technique was brilliantly exemplified in the Finale from Mendelssohn's Organ Concerto No. 2, and in the magnificent Fugue in E flat of Bach's, the theme of which, it may be mentioned, is the same as that of the first line of "St. Anne", the tune to which the hymn "O God, our help in ages past" is usually sung, whence the piece is popularly known as the St. Anne Fugue.

It is most sincerely to be hoped that Mr. MacNutt may very soon be heard again in recital here.

A silver collection was taken which was given to the Red Cross.

New Comedy Due Here Was Brilliant Novel

"The Remarkable Andrew", new Paramount comedy due to-day at the Prince Edward Theatre, advances upon us with many of the tell-tale signs that usually signify something out the ordinary in film entertainment.

The new comedy brings together Brian Donlevy, William Holden and Ellen Drew to act out a story which achieved high popularity when it was a novel by Dalton Trumbo. Indeed, the author himself adapted his own story to the screen. Readers of the book can testify to its refreshingly original turns of plot and its abundantly hilarious comic situations.

William Holden and Ellen Drew should make an extremely engaging romantic couple, Holden with his shy, likeable ways, and Ellen with her saucer eyes and vital personality. There's the makings of a great screen team there. Holden, you'll remember, together with Brian Donlevy and Ray Milland, was a flying ace in "I Wanted Wings," while Ellen Drew was distinguishing herself in comedy and drama in "Our Wife" and "Reaching for the Sun" They're all together now to bring us the sparkling entertainment of "The Remarkable Andrew." The new film concerns the fantastic incidents in a young man's life, when, as a bookkeeper for the purchasing department in his small home town he finds dirty work afoot, and is framed by a ring of corrupt officeholders.

Just when it looks like his romance is going to pot and he's going to jail, out from the spirit world comes that soldier, duelist, fighter for the right and ex-President — General Andrew Jackson, come to save a boy who idolizes his memory. He does save him, too, with the help of some cronies of the other world, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Chief Justice John Marshall, Jesse James and Private Henry Bartholomew Smith of Washington's Continental Army. And General Jackson also gives his young friend plenty of pointers on romance!

Fine actor that he is, Brian Donlevy should really go to town with the characterization of the lusty General Jackson, and Holden and Miss Drew, as the young battling bookkeeper and his girl friend, sound perfectly suited for their roles.

"The Remarkable Andrew" seems like it's loaded with laughs.

Stars' Courage Made Film A Success!

Arthur Askey's latest and funniest starrer, "The Ghost Train" is a masterpiece of thrilling mystery, suspense, and hilarious comedy.

That alone, is sufficient reason why you should go and see it at the Capitol Theatre today.

FINE EXAMPLE

But "The Ghost Train" is much more than a first-rate comedy thriller; it is a fine example of the courage and determination of the actors and crew which worked on the film at Gainsborough's Shepherds Bush Studios.

This picture a spectacular production demanding the shooting of many big scenes in the open air, was made almost entirely during that period of the late summer when the daylight Blitz was at its worst.

Air activity near the studios was at one time very intense, and the difficulties of production to be overcome were numerous. There have been many bombs near the studios and the constant roar of sky-warfare often held up the shooting of scenes in the open.

Walter Forde, the director, the stars, and the whole studio staff can justifiably claim to have well and truly beaten Goering's efforts to stagnate at least one British industry.
