AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Feb. 29.—Phar Lap, Australia's champion thoroughbred, who is exercising here daily for the $50,000 Agua Caliente handicap, is highly regarded by Francis A. Nelson, Canadian Racing Association steward, who also acts in that capacity here. "Phar Lap is all that a champion should be in appearance — a giant full of quality, as well as power. He has never missed a meal in his life. He can run on dirt tracks and our way around, in spite of the 'specialists' and 'experts' who are discounting his chances," Nelson stated. "If nothing happens to him it would look like a center in the big race (the Agua Caliente Handicap) or any other. We don't have horses on which the handicapper puts 150 pounds in a country of great horses and people bet on him despite such weight. That's my view of it."

Silver Fox Captured By Impromptu Hunters After Chase Over Roof

LONDON, Ont., March 1.—Experienced hunters consider themselves fortunate when they manage to capture a silver-black fox in its native haunts of the hills and forests, but that one should be taken alive in the heart of a busy city is almost unbelievable. But that is what happened yesterday, and C. D. Clement, manager of a local chick hatchery, and James Bell, 270 Mount Pleasant avenue, were the men favored by Lady Luck. Reynard was first seen on Bathurst street by Bell. He gave chase and the fox nimbly leaped to the roof of the City Gas Company sheds, which run along the south side of the street directly opposite the hatchery. The fox trotted all over the roof of the building looking for an avenue of escape, and Mr. Clement joined Bell in the chase. Clement climbed to the roof and began to close in on the fox. Releasing the immediate necessity of going some place, the frightened animal jumped down into the Gas Company yards, a drop of 12 feet. Whether the animal is one that has escaped from a district fox farm or whether it is one from the backwoods which became bewildered in the big city is not known.

High Cost of Learning Solved. BASKATOON, Sask., Feb. 29.—(By The Canadian Press)—University of Saskatchewan students have shown themselves this year even more proficient in the dual-arts of reducing the cost of living and at the same time keeping a keen eye open for the chance of earning the odd dollar to help pay their way. Many of the students come from farm homes and the most popular method of reducing the food bill is to get a periodical consignment from home. One group of four boys each arranged to get a box from home once a month and when visited, the larder was well filled. Beef, pork, eggs and boiled puddings which could be heated on short notice, were among the commodities. Things regarded as luxuries in the city come in with these shipments. When sweet table cream brings only 15 cents for the pound of butter-fat, the son at the university should get some of it. Even students who have not farm homes to fall back upon find that it pays to keep in touch with the farm as a source of food. One Agro student, evidently a man of his hands, recently killed a pig for a farmer near Sutherland, receiving a goodly portion of it in payment for his services—a great help to the bachelor menu.

Girl students "batch" as well as men and a considerable number of girls are clubbing together to do light-housekeeping. One adventurous pair rented a small shack, eight feet by ten away out on the prairie beyond the city limits. They tramp across the snowdrifts each morning for half past eight classes. In their search for chances to earn actual money students entertain many callings. One Agro took a contract to run a hot dog stand in the rink. He found it not very profitable and decidedly hard on the digestion. Sometimes there were not enough dogs to satisfy the customers. At others there were a lot left over that he had to eat. Snobbishness is not a fault of the students, observers agree. The boys who are waiting on the table in the dining hall are doing other useful work to earn their way to a degree, are frequently honored by their fellow students when offices of distinction are to be awarded.

Sir Malcolm Wants Even Greater Speed. DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 29 (A.P.)—More than thirty years behind the wheel of a racing car at full throttle, on the roaring roads of three continents, seemingly to have stimulated the appetite of Sir Malcolm Campbell for more speed. The British driver's latest and greatest achievements here have not satisfied him by a long shot, even though they included a new mile record of nearly 254 miles per hour and four other notable world records. He calls back to England with his Bluebird II, the end of this week, supreme as the speed king on land, the only man ever to pilot an automobile over Daytona Beach's famous measured mile at an average two-way speed of better than four miles per minute. But he won't be satisfied, he said, until he does this "speck of space" at the rate of five miles per minute or 300 miles per hour. This would mean exactly 12 seconds for the mile, if you can grasp the idea which seems all quite simple, a matter of "luck" and conditions and Sir Malcolm.

He probably will have to build another machine if he does it. He has already spent more than $100,000 on the Bluebird but the best that he likely can ever get out of this car, under perfect conditions, is somewhere between 270 and 280 miles per hour. What does the driver think about such speeds?

Nothing much except to keep a firm hold on the wheel, his eyes glued to the marker flags along the course and his foot on the floor. The chances for scrutiny of the scenery are minimized. "I've got to keep my eyes straight ahead," explained Sir Malcolm. "It would be fatal to turn my head to either side, although I can glance down a moment to see what my water gauge or tachometer is registering."

"In Germany's foreign policy his reliance on his advisers had brought disaster. In reality it was not he who ruled Germany, but the decision of the nation, represented by its spokesmen."
