The Unwilling Adventuress

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

THE WAY OUT.

Doris was lying on the chaise longue on her balcony, with a writing pad in her lap. A sheet of paper was spread before her. She was trying arduously to compose a letter to her Aunt Elsie.

Day after day and week after week during her sojourn on the Riviera, she had been endeavoring to write that letter and as yet the sheet of note paper was blank.

From Camilla herself, there had been no word to Doris. Camilla was just beginning to realize how careful Camilla was where her own safety was concerned. And yet, she was beginning to exonerate Camilla from all blame. She had already decided that Jack Hartley was a villain whose unwelcome attentions had forced Camilla to the drastic and dangerous scheme of luring him into a trip abroad, of getting him actually aboard an ocean liner, under the pretense of eloping with him.

A pebble from the garden suddenly skinned across the unmarked page in Doris' lap. A guarded silence said: "May I talk to you alone for a few minutes? Will you admit me to your fortress?"

She leaned over the rail to perceive young Hartley looking up at her from a clump of rhododendrons. When she let him into her airy little sitting room, he glanced about.

"The are no maids around?" She shook her head. He lit a cigarette and began to walk up and down the floor. "I have news for you. The hour of freedom is soon to sound!" She stared at him incredulously. "Fact," he reiterated. "The family's about to move on. Uncle Howard's dissatisfied with Cannes and is off to Aix Les Bains for the cure. Dad's decided to accompany him since the season's over here. You and I are left out gracefully. We'll be off to Paris—and, then—the end of this beastly mess."

"Doris did a little prouette for pure satisfaction. Didn't she always land on her feet, she asked herself gleefully? "You do seem overjoyed," he remarked. "Naturally. Aren't you?" she demanded crisply. "You bet your sweet life I am!" she declared fervently. "I've gone over these past weeks. It's been like living over a volcano, never knowing when the beastly thing was going to blow up. Only last night I ran across a chap who had just arrived from New York. He dined with him the night before I sailed and I never whispered a word about getting myself married before the boat left the next morning. Naturally he thinks it's odd and as he's an inquisitive sort of chap, he's bound to scout around asking embarrassing questions that might arouse suspicion. We're well out of it if we can get off to Paris next week."

"Paris!" breathed Doris rapidly thrilled, half frightened at the prospect. He hesitated a moment then came to a stop directly in front of her. "You'd better make up your mind what you want to do after that. I dare say you'd better take the first boat to America."

"How can I have no money?" He shrugged. "Don't worry about that. The greatest pleasure of my life will be to secure your passage and place it in your little white hand." And then, contritely: "I beg your pardon, I didn't mean to be rude, really."

"Don't be a little idiot! I shall most certainly look after you until you are restored to the bosom of your family. I dare say it's all my fault, anyway," he was continuing magnanimously in view of his imminent release from responsibility, when Doris disconcerted him by saying hastily: "I've had the time of my life. Freedom from practice and everything. I wouldn't have had it happen differently for the world."

He gave it up with a shrug. "But, of course," Doris went on thoughtfully, "it couldn't have lasted much longer, because your Aunt Ada was beginning to make remarks—I think she's seen us at parties and she noticed we weren't exactly well, devotedly."

"You mean," corrected Hartley, "she's seen you with your faithful following of every tamer cat on the Riviera—not to mention your elderly admirer who worships daily from afar. Poor Aunt Ada with her romantic principles. She told me yesterday that with you and me as specimens, she didn't wonder that modern marriage was a failure."

"Well, it's all over now!" said Doris practically. "Yes, it's all over now!" he repeated—and sighed. (To be continued.)

Gleanings From Tryon And Vicinity

North Tryon school has been closed for short time on account of an epidemic of mumps. We understand school has again re-opened and that the malady has been stamped out.

Mrs. Edward Boswell and her daughter, Miss Elsie of Victoria, left quite lately for California, U. S. A., where they intend spending the winter months.

Mr. Brenton Howatt of Tryon, who has recently returned from "The Land of Uncle Sam," was taken to the P. E. Island Hospital at Charlottetown on Monday of this week. Mr. Howatt many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Dr. Bell of Cape Traverse, left on Monday to pay a flying visit to Summerside, returning home Tuesday.

Winter has brought with it many joyous festivities, among those worthy of particular mention was a pre-nuptial shower held on last Saturday evening by the many friends of Miss Lillian McLean of John Myers were visitors in the city on Monday.

Passengers on the Western train from Summerside, received a bad scare on Monday, when a double header with a small plow, which was used for clearing the track after a den was had shaking up at den via Summerside. She was reported having been on a turning from Summerside to Charlottetown. The afternoon Express was ahead of her and putting off freight at Fretown, when the accident occurred. The snow plow hitting the rear coach of the Express and practically demolishing it without injuring any one only giving them a bad shaking up and a good scare from which fortunately all have recovered.

Mrs. Borden Myers returned home on Monday from Charlottetown. He intends spending the winter months in Hampton.

Mr. Charles Howard is the purchaser of a new sleigh, which he bought from Mr. H. A. McPherson, local blacksmith, sleigh builder and general repairer of all things.

The good people of North Tryon have erected an up-to-date rink and likely will give a good account of themselves this winter.

The S. S. Harland arrived at Victoria on last Thursday. She was reported having been on a turning from Summerside to Charlottetown. The afternoon Express was ahead of her and putting off freight at Fretown, when the accident occurred. The snow plow hitting the rear coach of the Express and practically demolishing it without injuring any one only giving them a bad shaking up and a good scare from which fortunately all have recovered.

The infant baby of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell of North Tryon has been ill with pneumonia quite recently. The little one has improved at date of writing.

It was found necessary to call the advice of a physician, when Miss Beulah Robinson of Augustine Cove took seriously ill last week. Her condition is much improved now.

Captain Allan of "The Victor W. T." left Victoria harbor on Thursday last week for Pictou, Nova Scotia, loaded with produce for Edward Boswell.

The Captain of "The Edward S. Fair" Mr. Don Ferguson, who weathered the severe storm of a few days ago and took refuge in Charlottetown arrived at Victoria on Monday last in row of "The Brant" having lost her fore sail in the terrific gale. The Edward S. Fair was loaded with a cargo of coal, which was indeed welcome at Victoria, as some people were almost at an end of their supply.

Citizens of Augustine Cove were much shocked to learn that Frank Dixon is obliged to leave shortly after the Xmas season has ended to undergo an operation at Halifax, Nova Scotia. The sincere wishes of her friends are that she will recover soon, and have the same vigorous health as formerly.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS JOHN McALEER.

The death occurred at her home, 133 Kent St. on Sunday evening, Dec. 5th, of Mrs John McAleer, aged 63 years. The deceased was fortified by the Sacrament of the Catholic Church, was the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Connors, of Queens Point, Grand Tracade, and had resided in Charlottetown previous to, and since her marriage to John McAleer, carriage builder of this city, who survives her, together with their son Jack McAleer, clerk with the Imperial Oil Ltd.

About two years ago the late Mrs McAleer underwent a critical operation in the Charlottetown Hospital, and it was soon found that her disease was incurable, and that it was only a matter of time when it would develop fatally. On convalescing somewhat, she returned to her home where she was most tenderly cared for by her only sister, Mrs Joseph O'Reilly of this city, and devotedly attended upon by her son and husband.

Everything humanly possible was done to alleviate her suffering, and her heart and hands could do. Her physician was in constant attendance and did all that medical skill could prolog her life. But it was in his loving kindness called her to a glorious reward of a charitable and Christian life. During life she was ever a devoted and zealous worker in behalf of the church, the welfare of the Catholic institutions and the manifold charitable appeals of the community. Capable and efficient, she was ever ready to help, not only in a material way, but gave that best of gifts, unstinted service for the good of others. Her deeds of disinterested charity are written in the Book of Life and the Great Master has promised that "as long as ye did it to the least of these, my children, ye did it unto me."

The late Mrs McAleer was most unassuming and retiring in her disposition but was a most loyal and devoted friend and counsellor. Her death is an irreparable loss to her relatives, and the sympathy of the entire community was shown in the beautiful floral tributes and the numerous Mass Cards and Spiritual Bouquets received as evidence of the esteem and affection with which she was regarded.

For many years the late Mrs McAleer was Vice President of the St Charles Auxiliary Society of the Charlottetown Hospital, and was the most untiring and keener worker in that organization. Her resignation of that office was accepted, when falling health and strength forced her to become inactive. But to the last she maintained the same loyal unflinching interest in the work and the success of the Society, and among the members she will be ever held in grateful and brotherly memory.

Mrs McAleer survived also by one brother, Mr Charles Connors of San Francisco, Cal. Services were held in St. Dunstan's Cathedral, on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 8th at 8 o'clock, at which all that remained of a loving and devoted wife and mother, a true and faithful sister and friend, was laid to rest in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

The burial services at the church and grave were conducted by Rev. Father P. Walsh and the pall bearers were: G. H. G. Murphy, G. J. MacNeil, last of her daughter, Frank McDonald, Allan Forsythe, W. E. Reardon, E. F. Acorn.

"We have loved her in life, let us not forget her in death."

CANADA'S SHARE OF GERMAN REPARATIONS

(Special to the Guardian) OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—The division of German reparations awarded in the Canadian Claimant Bill probably will take place in the new year. At the present time $2,500,000 lies in the treasury having been received from Germany under the Dawes Plan. Canada's claim was much higher than this and it is said that by the acceptance of the Dawes Plan the Dominion lost over $5,000,000 leaving a much smaller sum to be divided among the civilian war sufferers. These claimants have no legal rights to this money, there having been no provision whatever in the reparations agreement for the reimbursement of civilian sufferers. The Canadian government however, decided that any money received by the Dominion under the Dawes Plan might well be earmarked for division among the civilian sufferers. The Friel Commission was appointed to hear these claims and Commissioner Friel's report is expected to be completed shortly. The sum being limited, the full amount will not be paid on any claim in any case, and the payments may be still further reduced by the entry of claims by the British Empire Steel Corporation for ships sunk by the Germans. This big claim, even prorata, would make a sad toll in the fund and the small claimants, some of whom are still distressed as a result of their losses, will get a still smaller share.

WILLIAM D. McEWEN. There passed away at his home in St. Peter's Harbor, on November 15th, Mr. William D. McEwen, a 76-year resident of that place. Mr. McEwen was widely known and uniformly respected, and his death at the comparatively early age of fifty-five years is deeply regretted by the whole community. He leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter to mourn their irreparable loss. Mr. McEwen was greatly missed, not only in his home by his family, but by his hosts of friends as well. His kindly genial disposition, friendliness and ready wit was him popular everywhere. Throughout his illness he was frequently visited by Rev. Mr. Charman, of Mt. Stewart, who also conducted his funeral service on Nov. 28. He died trusting in the merits of a crucified Redeemer and with the full assurance of a glorious immortality. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints.

Thousands at Funeral of J. C. Douglas

GLACE BAY, N. S., Dec. 15.—John C. Douglas's last appearance in Glace Bay yesterday afternoon was marked by a gathering which rivalled the greatest meetings of a colorful political career, brought to a tragic close last Friday in Montreal. Thousands assembled at the Knox United Church here to pay a last tribute to the impressive career conducted by Rev. S. J. Boyce, pastor of the Epworth United Church, assisted by Rev. A. M. McLeod, of the Knox United Church, and by Rev. Dr. A. S. Rogers, of Sydney.

Moslems Aroused by Egyptian Modernists

CAIRO, Dec. 15.—Egypt has its own fundamentalist-modernist fair in the case of Dr. Taha Hussein, professor of Arabic Literature in the State university, accused of defaming the Moslem religion. Dr. Hussein, a blind scholar and poet, has appeared before the Cairo courts for investigation of the charges which resulted from publication of a book in which he stated that the various Moslem traditions as well as the text of the Koran could only be interpreted figuratively, the weight of evidence being overwhelmingly against literal acceptance.

Priests Suppress Book

Among the traditions announced in the book, entitled "Pre-Islamic Poetry," is the visit of Abraham, Mecca and the origin of the famous Black Stone venerated by Moslems. The book, published last year, caused the high priests to make a stir about what they called an "outrage" to Islam, and they demanded the immediate dismissal of Dr. Hussein from his professorial post. They failed to bring about his dismissal but they succeeded in having the whole edition of the book brought up and the type destroyed. Members of the family of one of the defending lawyers have sent a statement to the press disowning their relative on the grounds that the family cannot recognize a man who undertakes the defense of an infidel.

Law Protects Religions The Egyptian constitution asserts the right to liberty of opinion and its free expression "within the limits of the law." The law provides penalties against defamation of any religion, whether Moslem, Christian Jewish or any other, for the reason that in a cosmopolitan country like Egypt attacks on the religious views of others are liable to lead to breach of the public peace. If Dr. Hussein is held for trial, he courts will be called upon to decide whether assertions such as he made constitute an "attack" on the Moslem faith, such as the law intended to punish.

Little Sands and Vicinity

Mr Chester A. MacLean, Little Sands, has returned home from Borden where he has spent the past four months. Messrs Archie MacLean, Little Sands, and Lauchlin Stewart, High Bank, have gone to the New Brunswick lumber woods. Miss Sarah A. MacCallum of Thistleland, has taken up her residence with Captain Angus Blue, where she will spend the winter. The many friends of Mrs. C. H. MacNeil are pleased to see her here again after a severe attack of lumbago.

Mr Hugh MacNeil has recently erected a most up-to-date fox ranch. Mr. D. A. Blue has returned from Boston and will spend the winter at his old home in Little Sands. Mr. George Blue spent the week-end the guest of his uncle, Mr. John D. MacLean, Little Sands. Miss Sophia Munn, Little Sands is spending the winter months at the home of Mr. Hugh McNeil. Mr. D. Mac N. Smith, Grand Coulee, Sask, has returned to his old home in Little Sands, where he will spend the winter. While speaking in glowing terms of the west, Mr. Smith will think that no spot on earth can compare with the "Garden of the Gulf."

Mr. Malcolm MacNeil, Little Sands, and Mr. Norman Stewart, High Bank, recently paid a visit to Murray River. The teachers and pupils of High Bank and Little Sands schools are busily engaged in preparing Christmas concerts, which they intend to hold in their respective schools. Mr. Willard Crossman, Hopfield, spent the week end the guest of Mr. John E. MacDonald, Little Sands.
