POTATO CROP ESTIMATE

The estimated potato crop for Prince Edward Island this year, according to the federal Department of Agriculture, is seventy-five per cent of the 1921 crop, or 4,474,500 bushels. This is intimated in a late press despatch from Ottawa, interviewed yesterday by The Guardian. Superintendent J. A. Clark of the Dominion Experimental Station said that this was probably as accurate an estimate as could be made at the present time. He had himself seen some promising crops which might be expected to give a better yield than in 1921 but from conversation with many other farmers he would certainly expect a lower general crop. Any estimate, however, even the most carefully compiled, can at this early date only be approximate. The Nova Scotia potato crop, according to the same despatch, is estimated as highly as 110 per cent above last year, or 7,055,400 bushels; with apples 80 per cent of 1921 or about 1,628,800 barrels. The New Brunswick potato crop falls lowest of all in the Maritime Provinces in the government estimate, being only 60 per cent of last year, or 9,715,200 bushels; with apples 25 per cent in excess of 1921, or 41,250 barrels.

AT DALHOUSIE

The confidence that the registration at Dalhousie University would be more heavy than last year, although last year's registration constituted a record, has already been realized and Professor Murray Macnellan, who had this strenuous business in charge, was throughout the day, one city very busiest men in the city, says the Halifax Mail. When the regular registration period closed last evening it was found that as against 625 students enrolled at the end of the second day last year, there were this year 688. Indications are that by the time the work is finished, and all the students have arrived, the figures will reach between 750 and 800. Among those in attendance from P. E. I. are Messrs R. D. Williams, Charlottetown; W. B. Carby, Wellington; C. L. Jenkins, Charlottetown.

A Summerside Man Writes of Old Times

Mr. Watson F. Clark in "The Maple Leaf" Tells all About Summerside's First Brass Band.

Continued.)

In the September issue of The Maple Leaf, (Oakland, Cal.), appears a very interesting article by Mr. Watson F. Clark, a former Islander and now of Moncton, on "Old Days in Summerside." The "Reminiscences" of Mr. Clark refer to the old days before prohibition and special mention is made of the Summerside's first band, or was at least a prolograph taken in 1882 by Clark and Bowness, cuts of the late Father Doyle the late Robert S. Bowness, and the author himself accompany the article which is one of the features of the issue.

Mr. Clark in his interesting write-up, a portion of which was published in yesterday's Guardian, says of Summerside's first brass band: "It was about 1876, that Summerside's first band became a reality, but only for a short time, for, as with most bands, the novelty wore off. But in this case it is not to be wondered at, having such horns to blow as the following: 'Mr. James Morrison, since deceased, raised by popular subscription on a sum sufficient to buy a set of brass instruments, sent for them and organized a band, I cannot recall the names of the members, but I will never forget those instruments—no, sir!

They were German Silver, rotary valves, bell out, or over the shoulder; the bass was about five feet long. Well, after practicing a while, the band made its first appearance; afterwards played at one or two picnics, then laid their little horns away and said good-bye band—for a time at least, and the instruments were stored away in H. A. Compton's Furniture Ware Rooms, away up stairs for a long, long time.

"Sometime in the early eighties, Tomm Huestis happened to be up in the top story of the ware rooms and, noticing the horns, he induced Compton to start the old band up; so he told Tom to gather a crowd, and he did, in Compton and Webber's store, when The Summerside Band was formed. You were there, Mr. Editor—will you ever forget it? I won't anyway. I'll never forget the look of those horns after their rest. The catgut, all eaten off the valves, by mice, the German Silver out of sight under a coating of verdigris—it was some discouraging sight, but after Tom Huestis worked at them and got them polished up, and poor "Shot" Bowness hammered the dents out and fixed the valves, they looked fairly decent, but could they be played upon? That remained to be proven.

It was proven later, and the band was organized and the following named persons took a horn, cornet or drum: "Thomas B. Huestis, 1st E. flat cornet; George Huestis, 2nd do; W. A. Huestis, 2nd do; R. S. Bowness, 1st Alto Horn; Watson F. Clark, 2nd do; William A. Dawson, 1st Tenor; W. N. Huestis, 2nd do; Jefferson Jones, trombone; W. S. Bowness, baritone; H. A. Compton, bass; M. A. McInnis, bass drum; R. Hutchings (?), snare drum; Montague Huestis, cymbals, and further, deponent saith not.

"If there were others, I cannot now remember them, perhaps you, Mr. Editor, can think of others; if you can name them, then add them as an instrument if there were any left. There were others who joined later, but that was after the band had appeared on several times, played, and afterwards reached home unmolested. They then felt it safe to join, and did. Tom Huestis was elected leader, but later he handed the job over to Kelly—no, A. McLellan, who succeeded in turning out a pretty good band, considering the worn-out instruments we had to play with. Anyway, we got engagements. Our first one to play in was the skating rink, and that was some stunt, too; it was the coldest place I ever spent two hours a week in during my lifetime, and on a real frosty night those horns would freeze up. Then Compton, R. S. Bowness, yours truly and some others, would pause to make a few remarks, not permissible in select company, then try to thaw out our horns over the stove. Oh, it was some penance, believe me. Of course, the drum didn't freeze, so the drummer smiled. Yes, those were moments when one longed to be all by himself! Oh, those were some of our happy days, but why continue? The band lived to become one of the town's institutions, but as with other bands, it had to undergo numerous changes, owing to circumstances over which there was no control.

"Our leader, A. A. McLellan, left to study medicine and was succeeded by Tom Huestis, who later went to the U. S., where he now lives. Then "Shot" Bowness became leader for a time, when finally he went to Moncton, so that settled it. The Summerside Band ceased to exist after a struggle of a few years.

It had, at one time, a membership of 20, but at its passing only a few of its original members remained, 359, a considerable decline from the 1882 band, and today only three of them are on P. E. Island, H. A. Compton and W. N. Huestis in Summerside and W. A. Huestis in Charlottetown.
