Bristol and Vicinity

Friends will learn with regret of the passing of Mr. Art Aldershaw at his home in Morell early Saturday after a long illness which lasted two years. His family lived in the hope he would recover and at times he seemed to be so much better, but recently this hope faded as he grew steadily worse. He knew and talked with everyone until the last. Frequent visits by his pastor Rev. Father McKenna gave him strength and courage. Besides his widow he leaves several sons and two daughters. Four of the sons are serving in the armed forces with a fifth ready to leave but held back by his father's serious illness.

Mrs. W. A. O'Brien arrived from the city on the late bus on Saturday night to attend the funeral of her uncle Mr. Art Aldershaw.

Quite a number of cars were in the ditch in this vicinity Saturday as the road was in a very slippery condition. The car was driven by head-on was owned by Hon. William Hughes, Souris. Two trucks and several men got the car on the road again.

A number of the teachers from the schools in this vicinity were in the city on Saturday going their Christmas shopping.

Friends here of Mr. Jack Williams, who was travelling in forces for F. Holman Ltd. will be pleased to hear he has entered the armed services. Jack will be missed by his many friends and customers.

His friends regret the passing of Mr. Ingle's Gallant, at his home in Nufrage. Mr. Gallant had been employed for some time but his death came unexpected on Tuesday of last week. He was well known here where he resided for several years before moving to Nufrage Harbor. He was employed by Mr. H. H. Cox, for several years first at Morell, and for the last number of years before moving to Nufrage. He was a very kind and generous man. Besides his widow he leaves two daughters, Hilda and Kathleen, also one son.

Word has been received by his parents from Pte. Joe MacDonald, stating he has arrived in Newfoundland. Joe is one of the three sons of Mr. and Mrs. William MacDonald, serving in the army having enlisted at the start of the war.

All the by-roads here are close to cars since the storm last week but the paved highway has been ploughed. Several farmers are taking opportunity of the excellent sleigh roads to get wood hauled.

Mrs. George Deveaux, and family have moved to the city to reside for the winter months at least.

Gerald McAdam, R.O.N., is spending his leave at his home here.

Rev. Phalen McKenna, has received word from the firm of R. T. Holman Ltd., that the furnace in the Church of the Little Flower school, has been repaired. The furnace, which was repaired two months ago, will be repaired this week as the foundry are now able to supply the necessary parts. This will come as good news to the congregation who have been without furnace heat all fall.

A wedding of interest took place at St. Andrew's R. C. Church last week when Cecilia McAdam, daughter of Mrs. John McAdam, became a bride to Joseph M. MacDonald, of Bristol. Miss McAdam, who resided in the United States for some years formerly resided at Savage Harbor. The happy couple will reside at Mr. MacDonald's old home in the St. Peter's lake district where his aged father and uncle still reside.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. James Blaxland, who this fall have celebrated their forty-seventh wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Blaxland, who are both in excellent health, have given six sons to the armed forces and now live alone in the village. They walk to church service at the United Church here every Sunday about a mile and a half distant, and attend all social gatherings. Hats off to this fine old couple as no finer ever lived in our midst.

New Book Gives Graphic Report Of Tank Battle

BY SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Dec. 7 — (CP) — If you think back over the millions of words you have read about warfare since the autumn of 1939, it is doubtful if a single stirring account of a tank battle can be recalled.

While war correspondents have been able to fly in operational aircraft, land from the sea with assault troops, go on convoy duty with corvettes and into battle in battle-ships, there isn't enough room in a tank for passengers. So the stories usually have been second-hand affairs.

That is why Russell Hill's new book, Desert Conquest (Ryerson Press) is worth while if only for the excellent first person report of a battle reprinted from an English Army newspaper at Alamain just before the last great push. The battle account was written by a commander who served in the tank which took part in the smashing of Rommel's last attempt to crack the Alamain line. It is an exciting, human story of a small hot battle written by one of those rare warriors who also have power of literary expression.

The rest of the book is a well-written account of the war in the desert from the disastrous early summer of 1942 to the victorious spring of 1943. It is a personal account, with occasional flights into broad strategy.

Hill is a 24-year-old war correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune who served in Berlin before covering the Balkan campaigns and then the Middle East and North Africa.

It sticks pretty well to straightforward presentation of what he saw — Cairo swarming with officers of all nations, including R.C.A.F. and R.C.N. men, the difficulties of keeping up a fast-moving desert army, how it feels to fly with a bomber on a harbor raid, and how the calm British Tommies put battle on a fast-moving vehicle to "brew up" water for tea.

He has an oblique criticism of the United States method of presenting great numbers of campaign ribbons to men who never had seen action, something the veterans of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. with their dusty, solitary D.F.C.s and D.F.M.s smile about often in London. He says the tank is declining in importance because of the anti-tank gun. And after watching people who have suffered under German oppression he suggests they should be allowed to take their revenge "while their anger is still hot," and before the hoped outlines of the peace are planned.

Held In Franco For Three Years

LONDON Dec. 7 — (CP) — Parisian creation 1943 — blue slacks, a top garment made from a French slip, a French blouse and pasted a tartan skirt, a Gingham hat, made from the rest of the tartan skirt, and a roomy overcoat.

That's the Paris wardrobe of 21-year-old Dorothy Rolfe brought back to England with her when repatriated recently.

Miss Rolfe had spent nearly three years in Vittel prison camp near Paris where clothes were caught as catch can. The grey-haired woman had only the few things she could snatch when she was arrested in December, 1940, to last during her imprisonment.

The first three months of her confinement were spent in filthy military barracks where the women were afraid to undress. In April, 1941, she was moved to Vittel and quartered in a dainty luxury hotel with occasional leave in Paris.

Miss Rolfe describes the French as cheery and optimistic, confident that the war will soon be over.

"WRITE A SMILE INTO YOUR LETTERS"

Come you mothers, wives and sweethearts. Who have loved ones off the deep. Write them not your tears and sorrows. Write them not with eyes that weep.

Tell them not that you're unhappy. Or that life is hard to bear. Write a smile into your letters. To brighten dark days over there.

Tell them not of family sickness. Sorrows, downfalls, tears or pain. Write instead how much you love them. That their flight is not in vain.

Write a father of his children. Not of whooping cough or colds. But of childish smiles and laughter. Health and happiness untold.

Do not dot your 'i's with teardrops. Do not cross your 'i's with pain. Use a smile, a ray of sunshine. Make his waiting not in vain.
