The 7 DIALS MYSTERY

By Agatha Christie

CONTINUED
BILL'S VIEWPOINT

Bundle left the room hurriedly, Jimmy close behind her. "What etchings?" she asked, as the drawing-room door closed behind her. "No etchings," said Jimmy. "I'd got to say something to get hold of you. Come on, Bill is waiting for us in the library. There's nobody there." Bill was striding up and down the library, clearly in a very perturbed state of mind.

"Look here," he burst out, "I don't like this." "Don't like what?" "You being mixed up in this. Ten to one there's going to be a rough house and then—"

He looked at her with a kind of pathetic dismay that gave Bundle a warm and comfortable feeling. "She ought to be kept out of it, oughtn't she, Jimmy?" He appealed to the other. "I've told her so," said Jimmy. "Dash it all, Bundle, I mean—some one might get hurt."

Bundle turned around to Jimmy. "How much have you told him?" "Oh! everything." "I haven't got the hand of it all yet," confessed Bill. "You in that place in Seven Dials and all that." He looked at her unhappily. "I say Bundle, I wish you wouldn't."

"Wouldn't what?" "Get mixed up in these sorts of things." "Why not?" said Bundle. "They're exciting." "Oh, yes—exciting. But they may be damnably dangerous. Look at poor old Ronny."

"Yes," said Bundle. "If it hadn't been for your friend Ronny I don't suppose I should ever have got what you call 'mixed up' in this thing. But I am. And it's no earthly use your bleating about it." "I know you're the most frightful sport, Bundle, but—"

"Cut out the compliments. Let's make plans." To her relief, Bill reacted favorably to the suggestion. "You're right about the formula," he said. "Eberhard's got some sort of formula with him, or rather Sir Oswald has. The stuff has been tested out at his works—very secretly and all that. Eberhard has been down there with him. They're all in the study now—what you might call coming down to brass tacks."

PLAN TO WATCH
"How long is Sir Stanley Digby staying," asked Jimmy. "Going back to town tomorrow." "H'm," said Jimmy. "Then one thing's quite clear, if, as I suppose, Sir Stanley will be taking the formula with him, any funny business there's going to be will be tonight."

"I suppose it will." "Not a doubt of it. That narrows the thing down very comfortably. But the bright lads will have to be their very brightest. We must come down to details. First of all, where will the sacred formula be tonight? Will Eberhard have it, or Sir Oswald Coote?"

"Neither. I understand it's to be handed over to the Air Minister this evening, for him to take to town tomorrow. In that case O'Rourke will have it. Sure to."

Very Fine Farm and Comfortable House FOR SALE

Owing to ill health I offer for sale my splendid farm of 93 acres of fertile land, well sheltered and watered with large barns and commodious dwelling, having pressed water system in both. The stables are concrete, while the buildings are all in first class repair. The farm is near the city and all important places, and should prove an excellent investment to any one who appreciates an up-to-date farm with all modern conveniences and comforts. It will repay any progressive farmer to come and inspect the completeness of the equipment.
