Seven Sailed For Pleasure

By Graham Yorks

"Ah," said the Captain, with an expressive smile. "And now for the talk. Can you, by the way, tell me anything of our friend Mr. Greatrix, where he came from and how Sir Timothy got to know him?"

The girl shook her dark head. "I'm afraid I can't. You see, the usual procedure is for Sir Timothy to give me a list of names and addresses for the invitations. I've no notion who the people are when I send out the letters, and I certainly don't know how he came to be acquainted with them. But why do you ask?"

"You will pardon an old man, Miss Winstanley, if I don't answer that question. You see, as the Captain of the Lapwing and especially under the present circumstances I feel that I ought to know something of the people for whom I am responsible. That's all."

I can appreciate your responsibility, Captain Ventris, but I don't see what good it would do you to know very much about any of us, especially if we can't get away from here."

Ventris studied the white ash crimping on the end of his cigar. "Maybe you're right, Miss Winstanley, but if by any chance you should remember anything at all about you may have heard about Greatrix, I should be eternally thankful."

"I suppose I ought to be getting back to my patient, Captain," she suggested, crushing out the stub of her cigarette into the little silver bowl on the Captain's table. Captain Ventris looked casually at the watch on his wrist.

"I'm sure he will be all right, Miss Winstanley. More than that I'm certain he will be. Won't you take compassion on an old man and come for a stroll along the main deck with me. Hyton won't mind," he added, "besides, he's most likely asleep."

The girl hesitated. Then she said, "Why yes, I will."

Two Are Heard Plotting

But Stephen Hyton was most certainly not asleep. He had dozed off a little after the steward had brought him a light meal of steamed chicken and ice-water. The atmosphere of the room appeared particularly oppressive. He longed to be out on the deck above under the stars.

And why not? Myra Winstanley would be annoyed with him he knew that, but it was unlikely that Myra would bother disturbing him much before it was time to retire for the night herself.

He scrambled from his bunk and stood swaying for a moment clutching the side of the cabin for support. Slowly his head cleared. He felt it would be better in the cool night air outside. With difficulty he pushed his arms into the sleeves of his dressing gown and lit tened at the door. No sound came to his ears, and he guessed that the others must be away at the far end of the yacht.

He climbed slowly and not without a sensation of dizziness up the ladder leading to the bridge deck. He felt he would be safer there—that there was little likelihood of any of either guests or crew disturbing or discovering him.

Stephen stretched himself; flung back his shoulders; breathed deeply of the warm scented air with the flavour of night. He felt better already. He wanted to sing—why he had not the remotest notion. But a sound caught his quick ears, and he froze into immobility.

At first it was indistinct, like the soft lapping of the ocean against the Lapwing's white hull. Then he found it was a voice, he moved nearer. It seemed to be coming from the direction of one of the starboard lifeboats. Cautiously he edged his way nearer. Hyton stiffened as he recognized the voices—there were two of them now—as those of Greatrix and Mrs. de Boynville.

VICTORIA THE VILLAGE BY THE SEA

The regular monthly meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the W. M. S. Victoria, met at the home of Mrs. Norman Boulter on Friday evening, June 6th, with eleven members answering the roll call. The meeting was carried out as outlined in the Missionary Monthly, under the leadership of Mrs. Keith Myers, President, who opened the meeting by reading a prayer. The Scripture passages given were read by Mrs. Evan Wright and the hymn, Rise Up O Men of God was sung. An interesting chapter from the study book "The significance of the church in India" was given by Miss Florence Inman. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and several letters of correspondence read and commented upon. A discussion took place about getting a box of warm clothing also different useful articles ready for Labrador and it was decided that such member bring whatever they could to the next meeting and packing and shipping would be further discussed. Several other topics of importance also came up for discussion. The collection amounted to eighty five cents and a donation of fifty cents was gratefully received. Two new members were welcomed to the Society. The singing of Bless Be The Tie That Binds and repeating the Mispah Benediction in unison brought the meeting to a close. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Bertha MacQuarrie assisted by Mrs. Bertha MacQuarrie. Next place of meeting to be at the home of Mrs. Dan MacLeod.

The Busy Bee Mission Band, Victoria, met for their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon, June 10th, one week later than usual on account of the very rainy weather. The meeting was under the direction of the new leader, Mrs. Allison Lea. Master Robert Wright, President was in the chair and the meeting opened with the Call to Worship. Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth. For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. The hymn God sees the little sparrow fall was sung and the passage of scripture dealing with how Christ calmed the storm tossed waters was read and questions asked on it by the leader. Ready answers were given showing marked interest. The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. The roll call was answered ed by seventeen members. The name of one new member was added to the list. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. It was decided to collect cards and send to one of our missionaries who has made an appeal for them, the preparation and sending of them to be attended to later. Miss Florence Inman then gave in simplified words a very interesting chapter from the study book on "Finding a new home" which proved very interesting to the children and all present. After the singing of the hymn Onward Christian Soldiers all joined in repeating the Mispah Benediction which brought the meeting to a close. A very lovely treat was then passed around by Miss Mae Cameron which was much enjoyed by all.

Several of the citizens of Victoria attended the play "Anne of Green Gables" held in Crapaud Hall and came home loud in their praises of the splendid portrayal of the characters made dear to the hearts of Prince Edward Islanders here and everywhere through the writings of our beloved authoress, Lucy Maud Montgomery.

Mr. Thomas Cameron, Victoria celebrated his 86th birthday on Tuesday, June 10th. Mr. Cameron is still enjoying excellent health. Able to be about the duties of his well kept home every day and greatly interested in world affairs of all that pertains to the good of the community in general. A visit to this home is a real pleasure indeed to say the least for here with his amiable life long partner, Mrs. Cameron, who is just a very little behind him in years, young and old alike receive a most cordial welcome and after a visit with this happy couple one is bound to come away feeling the benefits of such a visit. Their friends wish for Mr. Cameron many more happy birthdays.

Mr. Stanley Stewart, Victoria, has again opened up his crab-packing plant and employs a number of hands in the afternoons to help get ready this very delicious seafood for the process of packing. Mr. Stewart keeps a scrupulously clean Government inspected factory that would be worth anyone's while to visit and get a little insight into what is going on in the line of industry in this Village By the Sea.

Tourists from U. S. A. and other parts are already putting in their appearance in Victoria and expressing themselves as well pleased with the beauty of our Island notwithstanding the lateness of the season which has retarded growth and the budding of trees and shrubbery. —V.

AVONLEA W. I.

The regular May meeting of Avonlea W. I. met at Green Gables, the President presided and the meeting opened with the Ode followed by the creed repeated in unison. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved and the roll call responded to by 13 members naming their favorite color, several visitors were also present. School and sick committee reported. Cavendish school needs paper towels. The new committees are as follows: Rustico sick re-appointed Mrs. Lorne Houston and Mrs. T. L. MacNeill, Rustico and Mrs. Robert Stevenson and Mrs. Robert Woolner. Cavendish school, Mrs. Jeremiah Simpson and Mrs. Ira MacCoubrey. Cavendish sick, Mrs. Fenner Stewart and Miss Helen Green. The cancer fund was discussed and it was decided the teachers of both districts with the help of the school children would collect for same. A letter was read by Mrs. Jeremiah Simpson from Mr. E. A. Smith, Supt. of National Park regarding Green Gables as a museum, as the Government has intimated their intention of eventually turning Green Gables into a museum. The Institutes and other parties interested are asked to co-operate in securing a sample of the most ancient clothing, furniture and equipment, etc. used by the pioneers of the Island that future generations may have a chance to observe how their forefathers lived.

Prince Edward Island has no public museum at present and a start of this kind may eventually be followed by others which would add much to the enjoyment of visitors to the Island. A committee appointed to be responsible for this collection included Mr. Smith of the National Park, Miss Mary Macdonald of W. L. Charlottetown, and Mrs. Jeremiah Simpson, Cavendish. This matter will be more fully discussed at the convention and as much publicity as possible be given to it as it is the wish of the parties concerned that the collection be representative of all parts of the Island. It is regretted that collectors of antiques are carrying away so many precious relics that should be retained as the rightful property of the Island. The government is prepared to pay moderate sum for such antiques.

The meeting closed with the serving of lunch and singing God Save the King. Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. R. G. Fleming. Roll call "What I Would Like to Learn in Handicraft Work." Collection $170.
