Body Of Woman Found In Montreal

MONTREAL, Jan. 1 — (CP) — The body of a middle-aged woman, identified as Mrs. Blanche Cavanagh, 58, was found in a frozen condition in a north-end laneway early today. Police said there were marks of violence about the body but medico-legal experts, following an autopsy, said cause of death was uncertain.

The discovery was made about eight o'clock this morning, in a laneway off Bernard Avenue, between Esplanade and Waverley, the police report said. It was considered possible the woman may have met with an accident while going to or returning from mass, although the homicide squad is checking the possibilities of foul play.

30,000 Koreans In Protest Parade

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 1 — (AP) — Between 20,000 and 30,000 Koreans, demanding "independence now" paraded this Capital City's ice-covered streets New Year's eve in a mass protest against the five-year trusteeship set up by the Moscow pact to govern their country.

The demonstration was orderly in contrast to knife fighting which broke out two days ago.

The newest demonstration appeared to be skillfully directed by a provisional government organization returned recently from exile in Chungking. Club-wielding parade marshals nudged laggards into the line of march and persuasively recruited additional paraders from onlookers.

MANY ATTEND DANCES — One of the most successful dances to be held at The Charlottetown in many years was held on New Year's Eve with the Downtowners' orchestra furnishing the music. Over 500 people enjoyed a chicken dinner, supplied by a staff which, from the cooks to the waitresses, functioned like clockwork. The dance lasted from 10 p.m., Monday night until 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Large crowds also attended the dinner and dance held at the V Club.

HOLIDAY WAS QUIET — The New Year holiday season passed off in the City without any serious accidents of any kind and with the citizens maintaining their usual sobriety Police officials said drunkenness was conspicuous by its absence and there were no fires to mar the holiday happiness of any city dweller! Many crowded the various hotels and dancing places for their New Year's entertainment while others ushered in the New Year by attending the theatre shows which opened at midnight Monday night.

Teachers Appointed For Airport School

Miss Beatrice Cameron of Mount Stewart has been appointed teacher of the school at Maple Hills—the city's emergency housing project at the Charlottetown Airport — it was announced yesterday. She has had eight years teaching experience.

Classes for the upwards of 30 children are expected to open early this month. For the present they will be confined to grades one to eight.

Through the efforts of Councillor T.B. Rogers, the Charlottetown School Board has donated tables and chairs for the new school. The action overcame a serious problem as regulation school desks were not obtainable on the market at present.

At a meeting of citizens of the new community a subsidy was voted for the new school to assist in paying a teacher and to provide for schoolroom equipment. The citizens are not property holders and special action was necessary on their part to provide sufficient funds to carry on the school.

Recreational activities got underway last night with a New Year's dance. George Chappell and his "Maple Hellions" dished out the rhythm while the community ladies served refreshments—sandwiches, cake and tea. While the dance was strictly a community affair each citizen was able to extend an invitation to one guest couple.

The sports committee, under Petty Officer Sterling Squarebriggs, has already a gymnasium underway for the 'teen agers. Sleigh rides and skiers are manifest everywhere. The skating fraternity, both young and old, has been dogging rink manager Vic Douse daily for ice.

Bishop Boyle Speaks At Rotary

Comparing the unnatural capitalist economy of scarcity with that of the unnatural totalitarian economy of abundance, His Excellency, the Most Reverend James Boyle, Bishop of Charlottetown, told the members of the local Rotary Club Monday that both systems were injurious to the people of the world and that the causes for the existence of such systems would have to be removed before any lasting peace could be expected.

His Excellency commented on pre-war conditions in Canada where there had been hunger in the midst of plenty and where thousands of people had been living, and still continue to live, in improper houses while there is plenty of the building material necessary to provide every citizen with decent living accommodations.

Labour, His Excellency said, had emerged from the world conflict in a much better position to demand more of the profits of industry, and His Excellency thought Labour's strength would result in definite changes in all economic systems so that there might be a more equitable distribution of the world's goods and services. There was always the danger, however, His Excellency warned, of Labour going too far in its demands, especially in those industrial areas where all Labour's benefits had been granted as a result of organized strikes conflict.

A true peace cannot be established by a formal declaration that hostilities have ceased His Excellency said. So long as there is internal strife, misunderstandings, and conflicts between classes, there is no peace, he added. Only some form of co-operation between the classes will remove the causes of irritation which when allowed to develop, flame into conflict. Whatever solution may be arrived at for an enduring peace for all the peoples of the world, God will have to be the cornerstone upon which the foundation is built, His Excellency concluded.

Abandon Hope Of Saving 24 Miners

PINEVILLE, Ky., Jan. 1 — (AP) —Rescue work has been replaced by relief work in this southeastern mining community where an explosion last Wednesday killed 24 of the 31 men trapped in the number one pit of the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company.

All hope of saving any more of the men was abandoned Monday and orders issued to seal the still-burning mine tomorrow.

The executive board of District 19, United Mine Workers, met at Middlesboro today "to create means to take care of the widows and orphans of the victims." District president A. V. Vales said, "we want to take care of them not only now but in the future."

Harry Thomas, head of the State Department of Mines and Minerals, announced that the increasing dangers to which scores of rescue workers were exposed made it inadvisable to continue recovery efforts.

Seven of the nine men found alive in the mine continued to respond to treatment at Pineville Community Hospital. Two of the nine died, one before he could be taken from the mine and the other in a hospital here. Two other bodies were found deep inside the pit and were brought out. Another body was sighted but could not be reached.

Fires still burned at the point of deepest penetration and threw off explosive gases in such volume that a new blast was feared. Carbon monoxide fumes imposed another barrier to rescue efforts. Some workers were overcome but were revived underground.
