DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Living With Mother

Elderly Woman Wants To Lead Quiet, Peaceful Life

DEAR MISS DIX: You have said so much about mothers living with their children that I would like to ask you what you would do in my case, where the shoe is on the other foot and my children live with me. I am 66, well-preserved, healthy, active and socially inclined. This is my problem:

For some strange reason, I do not like my daughter's husband. As Emily Post says, it is very difficult to like a man who sits on the middle of his back with his ankle over one knee. But he makes a good living and contributes generously to our expenses. For the first 18 years of their married life they lived to themselves, but they did not own their own home and when that house was sold and they had to move, they moved in on me, against my earnest protests.

The result has been that my daughter runs the house. She and her children monopolize it and I am simply a figurehead in it, as nothing is done the way I like it to be.

EVICT THEM?

I am very unhappy, for at my age I have not many more years to live and I would like to live them according to my own taste. Yet if I should ask my daughter and her family to move out, I should be continually reproaching myself for my selfishness. My other children, also married, except a single daughter who has an apartment by herself and leads her own life, tell me to evict them. How can I, without offending them, have them get a home of their own?

ANSWER: It probably can't be done because none of us like to be told that our room is better than our company and that those with whom we live are anxious to be rid of us. Also, human nature is selfish and doubtless when your daughter and her husband and her brood of children moved in on you, knowing that you did not want them, they figured out how much it would be to their advantage—that your big handsome house, with its many rooms, would give them and their children a better background than they could have elsewhere and not having any rent to pay and simply dividing the food bill would enable them to live much cheaper than they could if they had their own home to support.

Living is harder on the nerves than to have to live in the same house with a person who is allergic to us and whose manners, tastes and habits rub us the wrong way. And, no matter how much anyone loves their grandchildren, their noise, their quarrels, their total disregard of everything but their own pleasure of the moment are hard to stand it. If it possibly can be avoided, it is better to have them go to stand it. If it is possible to have them go to stand it, it is better to have them go to stand it.

So I think that the wise thing for you to do is to sell your big house, which automatically will end the strained situation without your having to tell your daughter you desire to live alone.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I was a widow with a boy six years old when I married my present husband, who adopted my boy. He finds fault with me continually and is always threatening to whip him over every little thing, even how he eats. He is a good child and I can't understand why my husband nags him as he does. I love my husband, but I am thinking of leaving him because of the way he treats my boy, whose only fault is that he is just six years old.

ANSWER: Your husband's conduct is motivated by jealousy. It burns him up to see you pet your child and show how much you love him, but he would be pleased to death by having you make a fuss over the child if he were his. Cruel stepfathers are far more common than cruel stepmothers, so far as my observations go.

If you have to choose between your husband and your child, I think your duty lies with your child because he is dependent upon you, while your husband is not. But if you are going to do it, do it before the child's nature is warped for life by being mistreated when he was a helpless little lad.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

"Not sheep!" Jamie was careful to explain to another small girl, who happened to step on the running board of this family car when it was parked in front of a corner-store, had remarked to him. "I see you've bought two sheep." "Not two sheep," Jamie corrected him "only one sheep and her lamb." I suspect perhaps that Jamie was a little impatient or amazed at the other child's lack of knowledge of a subject that is only commonplace and familiar to him. For as I suppose, he said with a superior smile to his part-time father, "when they mentioned the previous conversation 'him' (thought I) could be two sheep. 'Two' and 'one' were both in the same breath his approval. 'You knew better than I did, didn't you Jamie?' he said. 'Jamie is always right' will please to find any one of the potential attributes of a farmer about our grand-son, young as he is.

Jamie had accompanied the other men of the family to the auction to a sale on a farm at a considerable distance from Alderlea. There had been no sheep in the lot this morning as our intention was to sell the sheep for dinner. Jamie came in about 10 o'clock to the kitchen mirror. There was a second sign to be found also in the lot. Jamie was already in the meal a little while ago. I don't know if later I found it difficult to reconcile Jamie's remark that "we're not so very busy today with the horse they displayed in going after supper to the potato-spraying at the farm, after all, as I tell the Karolyn, and she is 'out' to make reply: ours not to reason why." So it was that after dinner the eggs to stick, and the flavor cannot be compared to that of butter.

WHICH?

"Daddy," asked the small son of business man, "what is this business morality? I hear people talk about it."

"Well, my boy," was the reply, "if a man comes into your shop and pays a ten dollar bill, and as he is leaving you find he has given you by mistake two ten dollar bills, the question is, should you tell your partner?"

LOST CHANCE

The barmaid was a flirt, and when the corporal went out to get a paper she leaned invitingly over the bar with her face close to the private's.

"Now's your chance, darling," she whispered.

The private looked round the room. It was empty.

"So it is," he remarked — and promptly drained the corporal's glass.

bat's wing. I thought as a night creature came out of the darkness a few across my line of vision. The night was bereft of bird-calls. All was silent except for the sleepy ripple of the water escaping at a waste-gate on the dam. I lullaby to soothe a fretful child to sleep it played — a precious song waited up to me on the wings of the twilight. I came away from the fascination of watching the night settle down when Pardi's excited yelp and the friendly clanking of harness told me the men were returning from the work at Rob's. There before I heard James say: "There'll be rain before morning!" And Jock's: "I'll be a great relief if there is." Then I lit the lamp. A stream of light from the doorway gives a welcome to folks homing that means more to them than words.

Until tomorrow. Diary.

Q. Should a guest shake hands with the host and hostess when leaving after an informal dinner?

A. Each guest should shake hands with the hostess, and usually with the host, and should make some expression of appreciation.

Q. Should a man always raise his hat when speaking to a man who is accompanying a woman?

A. Yes, always.

Q. Should a young man arrange for his bride-to-be to meet his parents before the engagement is announced?

A. Yes, unless his parents live a long distance away.

"Remember the time I tried to sell you a hot dog?" Gill asked. He and Anne had spent their first two weeks on Marty's island at that time. It was late afternoon and Gill was rowing; Anne, leaning on the gunwale, was looking at him. She had a gleam in her eye, and she was smiling. "You're beginning to love me a little? We've got on so famously these two weeks, haven't we, honey? We've been pretty happy—at least I have, having you mostly to myself. You've been terribly sweet. Oh, shouldn't I ask that, dear? I didn't mean to, but I couldn't help myself. I am a lunatic when I look at you!"

—THE WOMAN'S REALM—

DAYDREAM

Restless as my feet today For some green hill far away: Rippling brook or mountain dell; Scents of wood fire; magic spell. Drowsy heat and soft cowbell; Dappled sun through leafy bower; Forget all else but just this hour: Sleep on, my soul, beside the stream, Till you awaken from your dream. —O. P. C. Downman most parts of the northeast for homemakers to begin putting up peaches, it's none too early to make plans for your peach canning at home or at your community canning center.

Since we're in the midst of Home Food Preservation Week, it might be well to blueprint all your canning schedules right through the summer and fall. At the moment though, let's think of today's menu.

At dinner tonight play the spotlight on a vegetable and let the supporting cast include creamed broccoli, boiled potatoes and crisp, crunchy cole slaw. For the dessert, fudge use any hard roll or bread you may have a bread pudding with raisins. Bring the curtains down on tonight's meal with coffee for the adults and milk for the children.

For a cool, refreshing mid-day repast have fruit salad. Combine chilled watermelon cubes, cantaloupe balls, chunks of apples and pears and grapefruit sections, and serve them with a bed of lettuce leaves. Bake up a batch of corn muffins, and serve them oven-warm with butter. Have shimmering orange flavored jelly for dessert, and give the grown-ups iced-tea, and the youngsters chocolate milk.

Practical Welcome

Something more tangible than a "hello" and a handshake is Merriam's method of welcoming war brides who have come from overseas to make their homes here. Instead the Ladies Auxiliary, Canadian Legion, greets each new arrival with a shower of household articles.

So far the organization has held six showers for six brides, and there are 12 more in the offing for these yet to come from overseas. Every bride receives $50. worth of household merchandise. The bill is footed by the 80 or members of the Auxiliary, each of whom contributes 25 cents a week toward the gifts.

Every one now believes that there is a man an arm and a leg, ruling characteristic essence, spirit, which is himself. This spirit dull or bright, petty or grand, pure or foul, looks out of the eyes, sounds in the voice, and appears in the manners of each individual. It is this we call personality.—Chas. W. Elliot.

We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life.—Edwin Markham.

CRISP LEMON-OAT COOKIES

This crisp cookie, with its definite fresh flavor of lemon, won high praise at our table for the Homecrafters who had developed it. She used a 2 1/2-inch cutter to shape her cookies and the yield was three dozen.

1 cup once-sifted pastry flour or 3/4 cup once-sifted hard-wheat flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
2 tablespoons shortening
1/2 cup brown sugar, lightly packed
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.
Measure and sift together twice, the flour, baking powder and salt; mix in the rolled oats.

Cream the shortening and gradually blend in the brown sugar; add the well-beaten egg, a little at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix in lemon rind.

Add the flour mixture to the creamed mixture, about a third at a time, combining well after each addition.

Cover and let stand for about half an hour.

Turn out on a lightly floured canvas or baking board and roll to about 1/8-inch thickness. Cut into shapes, using a floured cookie cutter.

Arrange on a greased baking sheet.

Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 12 to 15 minutes.

How Can I!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. What is a substitute for castor oil?

A. Prune juice is a good substitute for castor oil. Soak the prunes over night. Stew them in the water they are soaked in and place them with a fork to let out the juice when they are tender. Do not sweeten.

Q. How can I remove ice-cream stains from linen?

A. By soaking the stains as soon as possible in Javelle water and then pouring boiling water through them.

Q. How can I prevent perspiring feet?

A. Put a small portion of household ammonia and the same amount of vinegar in a foot bath.
