REAL HEROISM

Howcroft, a former member of the British R. A. F., was an observer in France in 1916, but his real flying spirit came into play when the aeroplane crashed to the ground and left him incurably injured with a fractured spine.

For seven years he has lain on a mattress-grave, suffering constant pain and unable even to shake hands with a visitor, yet he has never for a moment lost his valiant cheerfulness and a book of poems dictated to the nurse who looked after him for five years in the London Hospital, is a glorious tribute to the unconquerable heart of the British fighting man. His poetry comes to him as he lies under a window in Liphook, Hampshire through which he can see the Downs and the sunshine and the cloud-caravans passing in the azure plains. He gives us happy songs of haymaking, of old country inns, of children voyaging in dreamland of hounds heard in the distance in the far-listening morn, of the building of the world's peace. His privately-printed poems, "The Songs of a Broken Airmen," have procur'd a few comforts which would otherwise have been beyond his means, and it is sincerely to be hoped that his first published book will have a good sale.

MAGDALEN ISLAND NEWS

The following is a brief account of the death by drowning of two men Ernest Dixon from Entry Island and Wilfred Morrison from Old Harry Island. The men were taking a cow to Entry Island, and when about two miles from their destination, after having gone about thirty miles in safety, the accident occurred which led to their death.

Both bodies were recovered, one being picked up by a young man from Grindstone but no particulars as to how the disaster occurred.

Last winter a young man from the eastern part of the island bought a horse on Entry Island, at the opposite end of the group. This summer he turned the horse out to pasture at East Point, the most easterly part of the island, and it followed the beaches and sandbars from there to Anheba Island—the most westerly part—then across the three mile channel between Sandy Hook and Entry, back to its former home—a distance of sixty five miles or more.

100 PER CENT PREMIUM PAID FOR PAPER MARKS

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—Premiums of 100 per cent were paid freely on the Bourse today for paper marks, which now are so scarce that a man with a checkbook does not hesitate to pay for them at the rate of two for one.

The striking printers who returned to work today, had complicated gravely the moneyless situation by trying to print the account of the Reichsbank's printing presses, which caused the Reichsbank and all the big and little private banks to lock their iron gates of clamoring patrons.

While the currency shortage is not void to humorous phases, it nevertheless is contributing a serious aspect to the nervousness and irritability since it is interfering with the workers and middle classes, who are accustomed to ready cash.

The Prussian Government today was unable to mobilize enough currency to meet its police payroll and the officers now are in much the same plight as tourists who are unable to lay their hands on sufficient currency to pay their hotel bills and railroad fares.

Criqui And Wilde Show Gameness

By HENRY L. FARRILL

(United Press) NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Because there were a few, a very few, examples to prove the point it has been a generally accepted opinion in the United States for a good many years that gameness was not one of the qualities of European fighters.

Through a hard-boiled idea that a fighter is a "dog" who reigns under punishment, Americans after scanning the notation of "retirements" on the records of European fighters, got the idea that there wasn't a real fighting heart on the other side.

When Carpenter was being steamed up as a candidate for the heavyweight championship three years ago, the skeptics pointed out: "He quit every time he had a hard fight."

When a casual mention was made of Joe Beckett and the chances of the British heavyweight champion against Dempsey were called back and forth followed that he was the world's dinging champion, without an argument.

There may be timid hearts among the European boxers. There are bound to be because there are faint-hearted ones among the American fighters. No fighters are available to back up the point that the ratio of backsteppers in the European ring is no greater than it is on this side.

There are two good examples to prove the point that in at least two cases America has no sole rights to game fighting hearts.

No canner, or more stout hearted and willing fighters than Jimmy Wilde and Gene Criqui have ever drawn on gloves.

Whatever suspicion might have been directed at Wilde, the former flyweight champion, were not based on anything that could be found on his record, but upon the general assumption that he was British and could not stand the stuff.

Wilde was the last of the world's champions that England owned, and since he was held up before his fight with Villa as the representative of the whole English class, it only follows that he should have been considered the same after the fight and that he proved himself about the gamest little fellow that was ever beaten up and out of a title.

Punched dizzy by Pancho Villa, floundering around the ring out of his head, he was carried on only by the urge of a game heart.

Wilde was praised as much for his gameness in defeat as Villa was for his part in victory.

Boxing is a cold-hearted sport. There are limits to sentiment in the ring and out of the ring, and the boundaries are drawn very close. It is the duty of a fighter to think of himself first always and it is a dictate of good judgment on the part of a writer to leave the heart out of his copy even when it hurts.

No unkind remark was ever said than remarks made before the Criqui-Dundee fight, that the Frenchman was not game. Criqui had proved what kind of a heart beats under his breast under the most severe test that has ever been imposed on a fighter. He kept his bayonet in his hand in a trench at Verdun when a shell had shot away his jaw.

But the quality of gameness varies under different conditions. A football player, hardened to brutal punishment on the gridiron might falter in the ring. The stoutest heart in the ring might waver in a pitching box, with the bases filled and one run needed to beat him.

So what Criqui did at the front was passed over and he was judged by a few entries made years ago in his ring record that indicated he wasn't there when the going was rough.

Even Johnny Dundee, who turned literary a few days before the

To Teach Thrift In All Chicago Public Schools

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—(United Press.)—Thrift has taken its place beside the three Rs.

When Chicago school children answer the first bell of the fall term on September 4 they will find a course in "How to Save" ranked in importance with reading, writing and arithmetic.

The course, which aims to be suggestive, allowing teachers to adapt it to their particular needs, was prepared by Peter A. Morton, superintendent of schools, after a series of conferences with local bankers.

"Save your pennies" will be drilled into the minds of all pupils from the first to the eighth grades. Pamphlets will serve as texts and will supplement discussions in class, while also being used in reading and arithmetic classes.

During arithmetic periods, interest and wage problems will be worked out to show the result of thrift.

First grade pupils are to get their first ideas of saving from reading "The Little Red Hen." Lessons in thrift will be drawn from the tale of "The Ant and the Grasshopper" for the second graders.

By the time the pupil has reached the eighth grade he will be solving problems dealing with compound interest or stock and bond investments.

Proverbs and maxims, according to Superintendent Mortenson, are important factors in impressing the young mind with ideas of saving. Some of the choice ones which the children will learn during the next school year are:

"Take care of your nickels and in time they will take care of you."
"Light purse, heavy heart."
"The penny spent never returns."
"An empty sack cannot stand up right."

"The Wigley building was built by a man who sold gum."
"Economy makes happy homes and sound nations."
"A penny saved is a penny earned."

Bankers who are co-operating with the schools plan to open special windows in their institutions where savings of children may be deposited.

SWISS WOMEN ASKED TO AID WIDOWS OF INDIA

GENEVA, Aug. 13.—There are twenty-five millions of Hindu widows in India who owing to their religion, can never remarry. Miss Isobel Frosham of the Church of England Missionary Society told her hearers at a lecture in Geneva.

Of this total, 174,000 widows are under the age of nine, and both old and young widows, especially the latter, are as a rule very badly treated by their relatives, who believe that in former lives their misdeeds must have been great to be thus punished in this life.

When ill, these unfortunate widows are not allowed to be attended by a male doctor. Miss Frosham therefore appealed to the Swiss Women's Committee to send volunteer workers to India to look after this sorely tried class of native women.

fight and had his views printed in a New York newspaper, recounted the reasons for which he felt sure of winning the championship, and among several he mentioned that his opponent was not game.

After Criqui had stood up for fifteen rounds under punishment that was almost agonizing to the spectators; after he had kept plodding in, his eyes partially closed, his mouth gushing a torrent of crimson, his lips cut and swollen and his shattered jaw sagging, Criqui smiled a twisted smile and went through it to lose his title, Dundee remarked:

"I would give anything to take back what I said about his gameness."

Dundee need worry little. What he said, what critics had said and what the record book shows are all now obliterated by the gallant, dying stand made by that heroic little Frenchman.

In the future, when Americans want to question the gameness of European fighters, it is too bad that every fan in the country could not have a picture of that game Frenchman, battered and bleeding, but swinging wildly in the fifteenth round in a desperate effort to win and contrast it with the picture of that huge bulk of a Jess Willard, a former heavyweight champion, squatting on his huge haunches with one hand on the ropes and taking, almost with a sigh of satisfaction, the referee's count of ten over him.

"IT IS BETTER TO LIVE."

I have sometimes felt that the burden of life was too heavy to bear;
And have longed to lie down at the noon-tide,
And rest and forget all my care;
But over my heart comes a longing,
Remoted again and again,
It is better to live and to suffer,
Than to die to get rid of the pain.

There is rest in the darkness of dying
And an end to the weary despair;
The grave holds sure peace and calm silence.
No sorrow or pain can be there;
But perhaps in the struggle of living
Is a soul that has need of my care,
Some heart may be bearing a burden
That my hand my lighten or share.

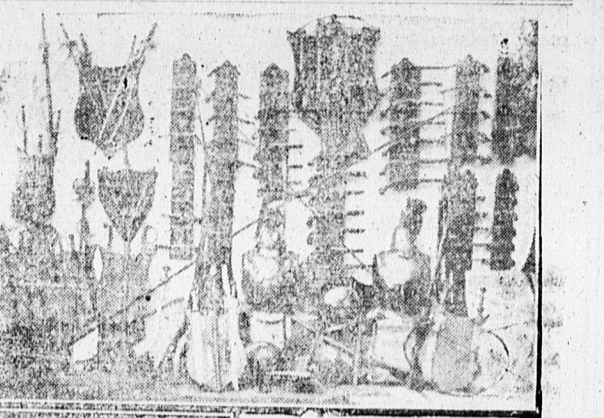

Twould be easy to say "I am weary,"
And lie down and give up the strife;
To suffer no more with the heart-ache
And "sorrow" I met in this life;
But perhaps from my sorrow-swept heart strings,
A melody sweet may be wrung,
And my lips when they drank deep of suffering,
The tenderest songs may have sung.

'Tis so hard to be patient with living,
When all this world is awry,
So wearisome waiting for pleasure,
That will only come after we die;
But even thro' all my complainings,
I can hear the undying refrain:
It is better to live and to suffer,
Than to die, to get rid of the pain.

I will live and be strong and will suffer,
If need be, until I find rest;
When life and its trials are over,
Though never my life should be best.
Though always the sun should be darkened,
By the clouds that hung over my way,
I will trust that the light will be clearer,
When at last I awake in the day.

LOVE IN PENNSYLVANIA SCORNS A ROYAL DECREE

BUCKLEAREST, Aug. 13.—Queen Marie tells a delightful story about her youngest daughter, Princess Ileana, when in which an American doughboy living in Pennsylvania figures.

The former Yankee soldier, who had served on the western front in France, returned to his father's farm in a little town near Philadelphia, where he saw photographs of the little princess with her pet dog in the American Sunday pictorial supplements. Enamoured of her smile and girlish beauty, the doughboy wrote the princess asking her to correspond with him, and saying if she would become his girl he would "never take any other girl to the movies."

The princess, who is just past 14 and surpassingly pretty, replied to the Yankee soldier boy, enclosing her photograph and saying she had heard a lot about the gallantry of the American soldiers and would be delighted to hear from him again. The doughboy replied expressing his renewed admiration for Europe's prettiest princess, and a wish to see her in real life. Ileana was about to acknowledge his letter when her mother, Queen Marie discovered the correspondence and cautioned her that she must not raise false hopes in the heart of her youthful admirer. She ceased her letters carefully, but the letters from the doughboy have continued to this day.

In relating the story the queen took occasion to say that the frequent reports about the engagement of Ileana to King Boris of Bulgaria were silly fabrications, and she cited the doughboy story as illustrating the childlike simplicity of Ileana and her unpreparedness for marriage.
