NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Andrew Carnegie said in an address here that he hoped to get to heaven through his attempts to be of service to his fellow-men, but that he had his doubts about it. All of the twenty-four members of the board attended, except Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, who was ill.

COLUMBIA IS NEUTRAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Columbian legation here was notified today by its government that the wireless discussion with Great Britain and France is a closed incident. The British and French ministers in Bogota, complained recently to the Columbian government that there existed in the country hidden wireless stations which were keeping the German fleet informed of the movements of allied ships. Great Britain and France, through their ministers in Bogota, have both notified Columbia now, the legation was told, that no neutral acts had been committed by that country. The cable to the legation says:—"The British and French legations have recognized the scrupulous neutrality observed in Columbia in the present emergency. Exact statements in regard to Columbia's neutrality have been cleared away. As regards wireless communications, we observe the same practices as the United States. In regard to coal, we permit steamships to take in the necessary amount to enable them to reach the next foreign port. As Columbia is not bound to the rules of the Hague Convention, which allow a larger quantity of coal, foreign belligerent ships have not been calling at our ports to ask for coal."

FIVE SALVATION ARMY AMBULANCES FOR THE FRONT

TO BE MANNED EXCLUSIVELY BY SALVATIONISTS. Another new departure! And like many others undertaken by the Salvation Army, it is solely in the service of those who are in need, and in the direst need at that. One of the very saddest features of the terrible war in which Britain has found it necessary to engage is that large numbers of soldiers wounded in battle have to lie where they fall, suffering excruciating agony, and oftentimes dying on the spot, not because their wounds are necessarily mortal, but because of insufficient accommodation in the way of ambulance cars to take the wounded men without delay to the hospital base for surgical treatment. So urgent is the need, that the nation has roused itself and declared that when our brave defenders fall at the front they shall at least be promptly removed and receive careful attention in such a humane conception it was to be expected that the Salvation Army would play its part, and already arrangements are well in hand for sharing in this great work of mercy. The General has decided, after consultation with the British Commission, that the Salvation Army contribution to the scheme shall be the immediate provision for service at the front of an Ambulance unit, consisting of five specially-built and properly equipped ambulance motors, which shall constantly operate between the firing line and the bases. There can be no doubt that the General has rightly interpreted the feelings of his officers and soldiers alike in accepting responsibility for this work of mercy, and it is now definitely settled that five ambulances bearing the name of "The Salvation Army," and manned exclusively by Salvationists, will be dispatched with all possible speed to the seat of war to benefit those borne down in battle. From the Hon. Arthur Stanley, M. P., chairman of the executive committee of the British Red Cross Society, under whose protection all the ambulance work will be carried out, has which he says: "I beg, on behalf of the Executive Committee of the British Red Cross Society, to express to you, and through you to the members of the Salvation Army, our most grateful thanks for their most generous gift of five ambulance cars. It is a touching and remarkable proof of the way in which your people seek to help the wounded, and I am quite sure that the inscription on the cars will call up the gratitude not merely of those who see the cars, but of those benefitted by the gift."
