(By Thornton W. Burgess)

THE PRICE OF GREED

No matter what you think or say, Greed has a price you'll have to pay.

—Old Mother Nature, Chatterer the Red Squirrel is greedy. Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel is greedy. Greed runs in the Squirrel family. They don't call it greed. No, sir, they don't call it greed. They call it thrift. It is a thrill to begin with, but just as sweet milk kept too long becomes sour, so thrift carried too far becomes greed. A thrill is what it is no matter what it may be called. It is not changed by a change of name.

Enough is all that any one needs but all too many folks seem not to know this. Chatterer is one of these. He had enough nuts and acorns and seeds and dried muskrats stored away to last him all winter no matter how hard and long it might be. He had plenty and to spare, but he wanted more. One storehouse wasn't yet full. He wanted it full although that would be more than he needed and he knew it. He wouldn't be satisfied until it was full and probably not then. Greedy folks never are satisfied. The more they have the more they want. It was that when he found a certain oak tree whose sweet acorns had not been harvested he wanted every one of them. When his cousin, Happy Jack arrived Chatterer tried to drive him away.

Now Happy Jack is just as greedy as Chatterer. He had no storehouse like those of his small cousin. He doesn't believe in putting all his treasures in one or two places. He is like the pirates of old who believed that the best way to hide their treasures was to bury them. That is just what he does with his treasures, the nuts and acorns and other things on which he will live through the winter. But unlike the pirates he doesn't believe in burying all in one place. No sir! That would be no better than hiding them in a storehouse like one of Chatterer's. So he scatters them here and there, some hidden under matted leaves on the ground, some buried in little pits he digs in the earth, some tucked into holes and crevices. How he can remember where he has hidden them I don't know, but he seems to think he can. Anyway he

He had heard them and had come to see what was going on.

It wasn't long before there was a regular nutting party under that oak tree and a neighboring beech tree. Buster Bear was there. Lightfoot the Deer, Mrs. Lightfoot and the twins were there. Thunder the Grouse, Mrs. Grouse and several young Grouse, now as big as their parents, were there. The two cousins were so busy quarreling up in the tree that for a while they didn't notice what was going on below. When they did, most of those sweet acorns and little, sweet three-sided beechnuts on the ground had been found and eaten. By this time few if any were left in the trees. Such as had been there had been knocked down during the efforts of the two cousins to drive each other from the tree. If they were to get any of those acorns they must get them on the ground. They stopped their quarrel and started for the ground. It was too late. Reddy Fox was down there. He had heard them and had come to see what was going on. He wasn't interested in acorns but he was interested in Squirrels. They stayed in the tree by the time Reddy gave up and left the other nutting party. The acorns and nuts were gone, too. Greed doesn't pay.

A TWO-EDGED WEAPON

Shut-out bids or raises have more than one virtue. Indeed, they may fall utterly in their prime objective and yet succeed magnificently in another way. Consider this not untypical case:

West, dealer.
 Both sides vulnerable.

♠ 9 4
 ♥ J 9 8 2
 ♦ A 10 5
 ♣ A 6

♠ K Q 10
 ♥ 8 5
 ♦ A K 6
 ♣ J 9 7 4 3

♠ A J 8 6
 ♥ Q 10 7 3
 ♦ 9 8 7 4 2
 ♣ 8

The bidding:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ Double 4 ♠ 5 ♠
 2 ♠ Pass Pass Pass Pass

The five-club contract was defeated four tricks 1100 points, which was excellent compensation to East-West for the game they could have made. At first glance it may seem that they could have made a slam in spades, but it is questionable that twelve tricks would have resulted from normal play, since West would have had to guess the heart position.

The virtue of East's leap to four spades was the psychological effect this bid had on South. He, like so many other players, was of the type that hates to be shut out. Obviously, his five-club bid was a wild "stab", but since this particular South was an experienced player, with a "far-better-than-average" reputation, it can be assumed that many other players in his position would fall into the same trap.

Thus, as may be seen, a pre-emptive bid or raise is really a two-edged weapon. It may shut out the opponents successfully, or—and sometimes this is even better—it may bring them into an auction with a desperation bid that can be severely punished. This is not to excuse the sort of bid that South made, but merely to point out the double advantage of preempting when the conditions suggest this sort of strategy.
