What the Fashionables are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

By Annabelle Worthington

The woolen dress has much to say about fashion these days. It seems to be the rule for general day wear. Here is a darling and effective colour combination in deep brown wool crepe with green rever and cuffs. Brown bone buttons accent the side-closing and attractively flared sleeve cuffs.

The wrapped closing at the front combines with the sharp diagonal lines and the vertical line of the plaited skirt inset, to flatter the height of the figure.

It's such a comfortable and smart rig, you'll adore it.

Style No. 596 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36 and 38 inches bust. Size 16 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material with 1/2 yard of 39-inch contrasting.

A mauvy-brown tweed mixture is ultra-smart with plain vivid yellow woolen contrasting.

Black crepe satin with white crepe satin is still another lovely idea for its development.

Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred.)

Price of pattern 15 cents.

Churches Debate Basis For Union

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Representatives of the Anglican and Eastern Churches met at Lambeth Palace on Thursday. Anglicans and representatives of the churches of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem, Greece, Yugo-Slavia, Rumania and Poland will seek a means of uniting their two creeds. It is understood that they will take as a basis for agreement the recent scheme of reunion decided upon by the Anglican and Old Catholic churches. This scheme entails unrestricted inter-communion and re-unites the Church of England to the Archbishop of Utrecht, founded 13 centuries ago by the English missionary bishop, St. Willibrord, and to the churches of Europe and America, which have rallied to it in a stand against the later claims of the papacy.

If, as is expected, the old Catholic and Eastern churches reach an agreement in the near future, then will the reunion of the Catholic church, as distinct from the Roman Catholic church be complete. It will include Catholic churches in all parts of the world, except Rome.

Archbishop's Plan

The Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the English Anglicans, is responsible for the whole scheme. It was he who got the Lambeth conference of 1930 to call the conference of Anglicans and Old Catholics which formulated a scheme of reunion at Bonn, last July. Today's conference is also the outcome of his personal efforts, when he visited the Near East, during his convalescent cruise in J. P. Morgan's yacht last Easter.

Details of the Anglican-Old Catholic reunion scheme, on which the present conference will work, are:

1. Each communion recognizes the catholicity and independence of the other and maintains its own.
2. Each communion agrees to admit members of the other communion to participate in the sacraments.
3. Intercommunion does not require from either communion the acceptance of all doctrinal opinion, sacramental devotion, or liturgical practice characteristic of the other, but implies that each believes the other to hold all the essentials of the Christian faith.

NEIGHBORS TALK

"I am employed in a theatre and it is a problem to make ends meet, as I help support my mother and sister. I like to dress well but haven't very much to spend on clothes. To give the appearance of variety to my slender wardrobe I change the color of a dress or stockings as soon as the things become faded. I always use Diamond Dyes for the work—using them as dyes for dresses and as tints for stockings. I have always gotten such perfect results that our neighbors talk about the great number of new things I have."

"I learned about Diamond Dyes from our wardrobe mistress. She says she has tried all the dyes on the market but none do such splendid work and are so easy to use as Diamond Dyes. I understand they are the world's most popular dyes—and they deserve to be."

Chicken Mousse Salad

- 1-2 cupfuls of cooked chicken.
- 1-2 cupful of whipped cream.
- 1-2 cupfuls hot chicken stock (made from the chicken).
- 1-4 cupful of cold chicken stock.
- 2 level tablespoons granulated gelatine.
- Few drops of onion juice.
- 1-8 teaspoon paprika.
- Dash of cayenne.

Method—Soak the gelatine in the 1-4 cup of cold chicken stock for five minutes. Add to the hot chicken stock and stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Cool and place in the refrigerator until the jelly begins to set, then fold in the cream which has been beaten stiff, add seasonings and the chicken cut into small, neat pieces. Pour into a long bread tin rinsed with cold water and set in refrigerator until solid. Unmold on lettuce leaves, garnish with hard-boiled eggs cut in slices and stuffed olives. To serve, cut in slices and serve with mayonnaise dressing. The chicken stock should be highly seasoned. A little onion, salt, celery tops and chives will improve the flavor if stewed with it. This is delicious for the late supper.

Oatmeal Cookies

- 1 cup shortening.
- 1 cup sugar.
- 2 eggs.
- 2-1-2 cups oatmeal.
- 2-1-2 cups flour.
- 1-4 teaspoon salt.
- 4 tablespoons sweet or sour milk.
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg.
- 1 teaspoon soda.
- 1-2 cup chopped nuts.
- 1-2 cup raisins.

Cream the shortening and the sugar. Add the eggs and beat. Add the oatmeal and mix all together. Sift the flour, cinnamon, soda, salt and nutmeg together and add alternately to the creamed mixture with milk. Roll out on a floured board as thin as can be handled, cut in the shapes you desire and bake in a moderately-heated oven. These cookies keep well and improve with age.

A sportsman, who was a very bad shot but very free with his tips, was one day accompanied by a keeper who was anxious to keep on good terms with him. Soon after they were posted a rabbit appeared about ten yards in front of them. Bang, bang! went the sportsman's gun, but the rabbit darted away. "Did I hit it?" asked the sportsman. "Well, sir," replied the keeper thoughtfully, "I couldn't exactly say you hit 'im, but I never seed a rabbit wuss scared!"

Wise Couple Who Have Found Happiness in Living — Can a Man Be Happily Married to a Girl With a Past? — Benedict Versus Bachelor's Wooing

Dear Miss Dix—My wife and I have been happily married for twenty odd years. We have worked hard and economized and have a nice home and a nice little income, but not enough to live on the interest should my earning power cease. So we continue to live modestly and save so that we will have enough to be comfortable on when we are old and mostly spend our evenings at home reading or listening to the radio or going for a ride, and we are happy and contented. But our friends criticize us, call us tightwads and say we should go out more, dress better, get a finer car and spend what we make or ourselves, as we have no children. Are we right or are our friends right? Should we do as they say or as we are doing?

TWO HAPPY SOULS.

Answer:

If you have found the road to happiness why not follow it on to the end instead of striking off on an unknown path that may possibly lead you to misery and disaster?

In the days when I was a reporter I interviewed the great actress, Mary Anderson. I said to her that it was recognized by all who knew her that she was the happiest and most contented person that any of us knew, and I asked her what was the secret of her happiness.

"The secret of happiness," she replied, "is to find out what you want to do and then to have the courage to do it. In my case I desired a quiet, domestic life in the country, far from the madding crowd. So I had the courage to leave the stage at the very height of my success and I have had the courage to refuse to go back, no matter how much money or how great opportunities were offered me, and I have had the courage to turn my back on London society and go and live in the country, where I see few people except my own family. Thus I have been happy. I knew what I desired and I took it."

I believe that a more reliable recipe for attaining happiness was never given than this. At any rate I am sure that we can never find happiness in following other people's rules, for what we enjoy is purely a matter of taste and the thing one person likes to do bores another to tears. I, for instance, have to summon all of the heroism I possess to refrain from shrieking in agony when I have to listen to jazz, yet there are millions of people who pay out money for this form of torture. I adore automobiles, yet I have friends who never put their foot in a car if they can help it.

So each of us to our taste, and there is no disputing about it, and if you and your wife have found the way of life you like, stick to it and let your friends go theirs. Trying to keep up with your neighbors and acquaintances wrecks more people than any other one thing.

And don't worry about your friends calling you tightwads because you are living within your income and laying up something for a rainy day. Those who spend all they make as they go along, having a good time, will come borrowing of you sooner or later, and their old age will be a miserable and a dependent one.

When you and your wife get into the 60s you will be sitting pretty on Easy Street. You will have your own home, your settled income and you will be a man of influence in the community. But your spendthrift neighbors will be hunting for a cheaper apartment somewhere on Poverty Flat or living with their children; they will be down-and-outers with nothing but extravagant habits that they cannot gratify and the bitter knowledge that they have been fools.

Many people live to regret not having saved their money when they were young and laid up something for their old age, but no old person ever regrets having a bank account and being independent.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a man of 29, very much in love with a woman of 27. She would make me an ideal wife. She is domestic, thrifty, quite pretty, has a sweet disposition and I know she loves me with all her heart. But she has a past and I can't decide whether or not I should marry her knowing this. Some days I think I can't live without her. The next day I think I should break off with her because although she is everything I would want in a wife and no matter what I have been or done I feel that the girl I marry should come to me clean. What shall I do about it?

UNDECIDED.

Answer:

It all depends upon how really broadminded and just you are, and when I say this I am thinking of the girl's happiness just as much as I am thinking of yours.

If you are fair enough to think that you have no right to ask more of a girl than you give then go along and marry her, for doubtless her past is just as spotless as yours. But if you are one of those who think that no matter what you have been and done your wife must have a clean slate, then I should certainly advise you not to marry her.

This question of whether a man shall marry a girl with a past comes up continually in this column. Not a day but that some man writes me, as you have done, that he has fallen in love with some woman who has stepped off the straight and narrow path and muddled her skirts, and he wants to know whether he shall marry her or not. Nearly always she has most of the desirable qualities for a wife—she is gay and good-natured and easygoing and affectionate and generous and sympathetic and very feminine and attractive to men. The very traits of character that were her undoing; the softness that made her too easy; the warm-heartedness that made her love too much without counting the cost are the traits that a man desires most in a wife.

But against her there is her past. There is the blot that can never be erased. There is the fear that the woman who has sinned once will sin again. There is the social taboo of the Magdalene and the dread of what people will say if they ever find out the kind of woman he has married. There is the deadly jealousy of the other men who have been in her life.

All of these things have to be taken into consideration and they do not make for happiness in marriage, which is hazardous at best and becomes almost a foolhardy risk when the bride is handicapped by a past record.

Of course, before marriage, the man promises to forgive and forget, but forgetting is not within his power, and no matter how discreetly the wife conducts herself or how true and faithful she is, the husband rarely trusts her. He always thinks that the woman who had not the strength of character to resist temptation one time will yield to it again.

There are, of course, exceptions to this rule. There are men who are broadminded enough and big-souled enough to accept the same standard of virtue for men and women and to ask no more of their wives than they give; who realize that very often a girl has sinned through the very best that is in her and that she has washed out her wrong with tears of repentance and that just because she has been burned by the flame of passion she is doubly sure never to risk playing with fire again.

When a man like that marries a woman with a past, very often the

COCOANUT CAKES

Grate fresh cocoanut to make 1 1/2 cups. To this fresh cocoanut add 1/2 tablespoon of corn syrup, seven tablespoons of sugar, and cook the top of a double boiler until the mixture clings to the spoon. A whites of egg, and cook until mixture feels sticky when tried between fingers. Spread in a wet pan over with a wet paper and let cool then chill by setting pan on ice in refrigerator. Shape into balls, first dipping the hands in cold water. For ten cakes use one and one-half tablespoons of mixture for each. Heat a tin sheet slightly and rub over with white wax paraffin or olive oil. Set the balls on the sheet and bake in a slow oven about twenty minutes.

A Morning Smile

Passenger—"No, thanks; I'll get off myself."

Peanut Cookies

One-quarter cup butter, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup flour, 2 even tablespoons baking powder, 3-4 cup peanuts. Cream butter and sugar, add well-beaten egg, flour and baking powder sifted together; lastly add peanuts cut or chopped into small pieces. Drop on tins to bake in moderate oven. One quart of peanuts sufficient for this recipe.

union is one of peculiar happiness and tenderness. But it all depends on the man, for no husbands are more wretched than those who marry a girl with a past and then suspect her and no women are so miserable as those who are married to men who continually reproach them with their past.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Why are married men always telling a girl that they love her and how they would like to marry her if they were free and wanting to get her, whereas single men do nothing of the sort? I know plenty of single men, but not one of them has ever told me he loved me or wanted to marry me, and even when they kiss you it is just a peck on the cheek and run.

A. A.

Answer:

The answer to that is easy. It is because the married men are safe. They are protected by the fact that they have wives and don't have to marry you. They don't have to make good on their love-making. But a single man does. That's why he is shy.
