—An ancient calling is again very much alive. The armorer's work turning out armor for fighting men; and in a most distinguished case the chief armorer of the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts, New York Daniel Tachaux, has been working for modern warriors with the very hammers and anvils that once were used in armoring their medieval fore-runners. To be sure, armor nowadays is not so cumbersome that when the wearer is upset he has to lie flat on his back until somebody kindly stands behind him again; but it has turned out that, for practical purposes, modern design adds nothing to the protective detail of the separate pieces of old-time armor.

—Russia under the Bolsheviks becomes more and more swamped with its steady depreciating currency of ruble notes printed in quantity and issued without the financial guarantee of a trustworthy treasury. The system, it appears, is part and parcel of Lenin's determination to make money valueless as a medium of exchange, and so introduce the Bolshevik idea that whatever a person needs shall be paid for in work. One form of work, in short, is to be bartered for another form of work, but quite naturally people who have hitherto bought things with money still cling to the notion that money is valuable. And so the printing presses are kept busy, printing ever more and more ruble notes; and day by day the ruble notes become more and more like pieces of waste paper. Eventually, thinks Mr. Lenin, people will be convinced that money is worthless, and everybody will agree to the cumbersome method of buying one product of labor with another product of labor. Already, so he is reported to have said, with considerable satisfaction, the hundred-ruble note is "almost valueless."

—The feeling of the meeting was strongly against Mr. Warburton's suggestion and some resentment was shown against the economy that would lower the standard of the country schools.

—Capt. E. Victor McMillan, M.C., a brother of the Liberal-Conservative candidate, spoke strongly in favor of the present Government, which stood by the soldiers all through the war, and was now giving every aid possible to the returned men. He made a strong plea to his soldier comrades to stand by the Conserva-

Admiral Kolchak's Hope for Russia

(Special to The Guardian.) OMSK, July 15.—Admiral Kolchak, the head of all Russian government, has replied to the message from General Denikine, the anti-Bolshevik leader in Southern Russia, in which the southern leader pledged his support of the Omsk government. In his telegram Admiral Kolchak said, "I am deeply touched by the patriotic decision dictated by your high ideals of duty to the country. In the period of the disintegrating, general depression and pessimism you were one of the first to raise the standard of a united, resurrected Russia. By your decision at the present moment you give the country another example of a soldier and a citizen who considers above all the happiness of his country and her historical future. God help you in your service to Russia."

Alien Investigation Board Finishes Work

(Special to The Guardian.) WINNIPEG, July 15.—It was announced that Judge R. H. Myers has recommended to the provincial government that the alien investigation board conclude its labors at the end of this month. The board has been in existence five months, and has investigated 4,365 aliens and granted cards to 3,375. The other 396 applicants were refused on various grounds, some of which were of a technical or temporary character and others because the board considered the individuals not desirable citizens. About 115 persons who presented themselves at the offices of the board were handed over to the Northwest Mounted Police as draft evaders, and deserters, for failing to report to the police.

Great Gold Find In Manitoba

(Special to The Guardian.) LE PAS, Man., July 15.—Measuring twenty feet wide and five thousand feet in length, a solid dyke of quartz containing gold has been found at Copperlake, north of here, by J. P. Gordon, ex-chief engineer of the Hudson Bay Railway. Mr. Gordon states that the values are uniform throughout and average between nine and fourteen dollars to the ton. Incoming prospectors confirm the report of the discovery and a mild rush has already begun. The scene of the strike, Copperlake, is east of Helm Flon copper mines, and it is also the scene of the finding of fish fossils a short time ago.

FLOWERS (Elegiac Metre.)

Blue is the bold bugloss, blue petals the succory showers; Blue is the pride of the hedge, alkane, April's delight; Blue with the sky's own blue myosotises, memory's flowers, Blue upon earth's brown breast plumpberries, ever alight, Purple the all foxgloves, sweet comfrey that fatten the cattle, Coehles above green corn nodding and nodding again, Purple the lush loose- strife, false nightshade, merry red-rattle, Purple the gay woundworts gaze over their grassy domain, Scarlet the poppy, that stares at the sun's full splendor unshinking! Countless the colors besides—summer's emblossomed array— Yellow and orange and gold, mauve, violet, rising or sinking Each in its tone, with the tints blended and melting away! God set a bow in the sky, which shines with a heavenly splendor; Number its hues, if thou canst; name its emblazoned attire, God set a bow apart, which shines with a majesty tender; Praise it, who can, as it meet— beauty that matches desire. —J. A. Fort in The Spectator

LUSITANIA

Portugal was formerly known as Lusitania. The present name is derived from Porto Callo, the ancient name of the town now known to us as Aporto.

ARMOR AGAIN IN USE

An ancient calling is again very much alive. The armorer's work turning out armor for fighting men; and in a most distinguished case the chief armorer of the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts, New York Daniel Tachaux, has been working for modern warriors with the very hammers and anvils that once were used in armoring their medieval fore-runners.
