THE MORNING GUARDIAN

TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1899.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The news of severe fighting comes from the Philippines. The Filipinos are showing themselves to be quite as formidable as the Spanish in their warfare and the effort to subject them bids fair to be more costly and prolonged than the conquest of the Spanish West Indies. The Filipinos have acquired the art of intrenching themselves, and they show that they can fight resolutely and with deadly effect. As they retire inland the vessels of Dewey's fleet can render no assistance to the United States land forces.

The news of the latest battle is the more discouraging, coming as it does after the report that Aguinaldo and his men were disposed to treat for peace. If the war is continued, the rainy season and the hot weather of the advancing summer must prove as fatal to the American forces as the bullets of the enemy.

As we view it the Filipinos are sadly misguided and had much better submit. The government which the United States would give them would be vastly better than any that they could establish for themselves. It would bring in its train peace, order, equal rights, commerce and civilization, as was promised by the commissioners sent to the Islands. The difficulty is to make the Filipinos believe all this. American shells and bullets do not speak to them in the language of peace and friendship. They are even more deadly than the missiles of the Spaniards were in years part.

There seems to be no help for it. The United States government must go on and whip the natives into subjection, and peace can only follow in the wake of victory. The American people realise this as other nations do.

Too much boastfulness in the hour of victory ill becomes a great party, and it might be well for the Liberal leaders to take a lesson from Kipling's Recessional, and not indulge their "wild tongues" in—

Such language as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the law.

"Sincerity," who has our deepest sympathy, writes to the Examiner as follows:—

"$480 20 in one item for wine glasses for Rideau Hall. The old ones must have been all broken or stolen—and the GUARDIAN opens not its mouth, but occupied his entire attention over a small bonded warehouse in P. E. I. We would like to know the difference of value in the yearly consumption of liquors from this $480 worth of wine glasses and that used by temperate King's County."

THE GUARDIAN has not yet received the Auditor General's report in which the expanditure at Rideau Hall is detailed and hence has been in no position to deal with the official facts in that regard. But why does "Sincerity" want to cloak the Scrimgeour warehouse? He calls it "a small bonded warehouse." Is it any excuse for the transaction that the warehouse is small? The warehouse is at least as big as Scrimgeour's cellar, if the law has been carried cut. It is big enough to have been made the subject of discussion in both houses of parliament as well as in scores of newspapers. It is, in fact a great big scandal. And the attempt to make another wrong serve as a cloak to hide this one savors more of insincerity than of sincerity.

IN THE SENATE.

Senator Ferguson on Cold Storage.

OTTAWA, April 22.—Senator Ferguson asked of the government whether the steamers Lake Winnipeg and Gaspesia, which made calls at Charlottetown, P. E. I., in the autumn of 1898, were fitted with cold storage facilities, and if so, what was the cost to Canada and the subsidy given? He pointed out that the calling of these steamers at the Island has been a great boon to the people.

Hon. David Mills said that there were ice cold storage facilities on the Lake Winnipeg, the government's share of the cost of installation being $426. On the Gaspesia there was also a cold storage chamber supplied by the owners. The subsidy was $2,000 a trip for the two trips of the Lake Winnipeg, and $1,000 for one trip of the Gaspesia.

CURRENT EVENTS

On Thursday, the 27th inst, the Competition for the GUARDIAN prizes will be held. To all teachers who have made application the questions will be mailed so that the teacher will have them in time for the pupils to write the examination that day. Teachers are requested to give the questions in the morning, as the first exercise of the day. After the examination has been written the teacher will forward the papers immediately to THE GUARDIAN office accompanied by the following certificate:

I certify that the accompanying papers have been written by bona fide pupils of——— ——— School. That the pupils did not have any idea of what the questions were before they wrote the examination; that the examinations were written under my supervision and that no assistance was given to the pupils while writing, nor were they allowed any opportunity to get aid.

———— Teacher.
