Minister Gives Review Of Latest Developments In Fisheries Department

Following is the text of the address delivered by Hon. H. F. G. Bridges, Federal Minister of Fisheries, at the East Coast Fisheries Conference dinner in Charlotte-town on Wednesday evening.

"This year, 1947, will see our east coast fishing industry almost completely back on the basis of free enterprise. Price controls on fish have been mostly removed, and allocation controls on canned and salted fish are being wound up. Special relief demands, like those of UNRRA, are also terminating.

"The industry therefore is about back on a free commercial basis, that operate in the free market. I should like to say a few words on some results of this. In particular I want to state what I believe to be the principle we should follow in the next few years: "we" I mean the industry and the various government departments concerned with fisheries.

Responsibilities Greater:

"Within the fishing industry, our department is now back pretty much to its pre-war powers — the war orders-in-council are being removed. The department's responsibilities are much greater however. One important new responsibility laid on the department is in the Fisheries Prices Support Act.

"It is the Government's intention to set up a Board without undue delay, and as soon as a chairman with the required qualifications is found—which I hope to announce soon—the Board shall be established.

"In the price field, and in the field of production and marketing of fish products, there is need I think for working out new arrangements between government and industry, arrangements which will be flexible and adaptable to the rapidly changing nature of the problems that will face us.

War Mentality

"Although war regulations are ending, the war mentality has not completely vanished. The Federal Government I think, has indicated as promptly as circumstances have permitted, that it wants to remove controls, and this it has been doing for over a year.

"There are however many groups, among them businessmen, that have come to lean on government orders, and others have lost some of their old skill or vigor in merchandising, in going out to find new business.

"Perhaps some of these conditions are to be found in the fishing industry. It is obvious however, whether in government or industry, the war mentality has to be replaced. Management, labour and government have to get down to the business of offering value for costs.

"High wage costs, high management costs, high distribution costs, yes and even high taxes, are always present to those receiving them. But high costs mean high prices. Markets are held only by lowering selling prices to the ultimate consumer.

Reorganization

"In preparation for this, I have devoted attention to the reorganization of the federal department. The field reorganization will be completed this spring, and a new machine will be available to serve the industry and the government. It will not be fully effective immediately, but a basic reorganization is being achieved.

"Thus for example, we have some 60 officers in the east today; we are adding 65 permanent full-time and 24 additional part-time; these men, all veterans, are taking courses now and will be in the field shortly. At the same time, each province is being made a region, with a regional head office; thus today Prince Edward Island has one supervisor; it will have two, with a travelling inspector, and a regional head. N. B. has now 3 supervisors, and will have 5 with also a regional headquarters. N. S. has three and will have 8 under a regional office. There will be one Divisional Headquarters, to which the three regions will report.

"In headquarters a substantial reorganization is also proceeding, which will add to the numbers of senior personnel.

"In short the machinery of the federal department is being geared towards more effective operations, at headquarters, and in the protection and inspection services in the field. It should, once the reorganization is effective, be of increased service to management and to fishermen.

"I am confident that it will increasingly provide the means whereby government as a whole, and industry as a whole, will work together on their common problems. The problems are not the prerogative of any single group; they are common.

"On the one side government should try to provide the climate for growth; on the other industry, and particularly management with its initiative and enterprise, is responsible for the individual acts that produce development. Industry and government together have to work out these means in the very near future."

The Main Question

"This brings me to what I regard as the main question — the relation between government and industry in the next few years. You know that government cannot hand down prosperity like a gift to any of all in Canada which is so much dependent on international trade, and therefore dependent on the actions of foreign governments. What our government can do is to provide the climate that will allow private enterprise to maximize its opportunities.

"The task of government is to try to create conditions that will promote healthy growth, and to remove hindrances to such growth. This being a federal country, a certain minimum of economic cooperation between federal and provincial governments is necessary if government as a whole is to provide a favourable climate for the development of enterprise.

"Likewise on the side of industry, a certain minimum of cooperation between management and labour is necessary if development is to be possible. But the point I want to emphasize most strongly is the need for new types of cooperative policy and action between government and industry.

"Please don't confuse this with "controls"; and if you are wise you won't ask the future to be the same as the 1930's. Neither of these is desirable. But if decent prosperity is to be found, there will have to be new types of relations between government and industry, relations in which both parties understand that they are complementary to each other. If government and industry do not work out new relations, if they act as opposing agencies, there will result an exaggeration of the problems.

"Against this background, I shall speak more specifically about the fishing industry.

"I have mentioned that government should try to provide a favourable climate. We are attempting that in a general way as well as in ways that affect the fishing industry specifically.

Employment Levels

"For Canada as a whole, and for the eastern fishery, if we can maintain high levels of employment and of international trade, many of our problems are thereby removed. Much effort has been given to these domestic and international problems.

"Thus for example Canada has contributed fully to every international arrangement that might facilitate the restoration of international trade; we have contributed generously to UNRRA, to FAO, to the present International Trade Organization, to the World Bank and Monetary Fund.

"Beyond that we have extended international credits to needy countries. In short the government have done about all that can be done towards turning trade into a steady market for our goods. These matters take up much of a federal Minister's time.

"You appreciate that these domestic and international conditions ultimately determine the levels of consumers' income and therefore the amount of food they buy. If these conditions fall, the markets for fish dwindle, and no matter how well we administer the fisheries in the province, it will be of little value if world conditions deteriorate.

Dealings Slow On N. Y. Exchange

NEW YORK, April 6 — (AP)—
The stock market emerged Saturday from a generally losing week with mild irregularity persisting and dealings the slowest in nearly three years.

Professionals accounted for virtually all of the meagre volume. Boardrooms were almost deserted by customers who elected to stretch the Good Friday holiday into a long week-end. Trends were indefinite from the start and leaders well jumbled at the close. Transfers of 270,000 shares were a low since July 29, 1944.

Among the day's gallopers Bethlehem was up 5-8 at 91, Goodrich 3-4 at 64 1-4, American Telephone 1-2 at 165 1-2 and American Can at 93. Improved were U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, Southern Railway Chesapeake and Ohio, N. Y. Central, Anaconda, North American, Standard Oil (NJ) and United Aircraft.

U. S. Gypsum yielded 1-2 at 100, Goodyear 3-4 at 54 1-2, Sears Roebuck 5-8 at 35 3-8 and J. I. Case 1-2 at 36. Minor declines were recorded for Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Western Union "A", Southern Pacific, Great Northern Railway, General Electric, Du Pont, Kennecott and Philip Morris.

Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagram each closed off 1-4 among Canadian issues while Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines were unchanged.

American Airlines was the most active stock on the big board during the week and was up 1-4 at 11. American Woolen, the second liveliest performer, was off 6 1-4 points at 34 1-4, reflecting doubts regarding mill suspensions and other factors in this industry.

Experimental Farm News

(Experimental Farm News)

The importance of hay and pasture in Eastern Canada is clearly shown by the total acreage occupied by these crops. There are close to 10 million acres under hay and around 14 million acres under pasture, but only 1-2 million acres are sown to cereal grain. It is not surprising, therefore, that more and more attention is being given to the methods of improving these crops says P. S. Nowosad, Forage Plants Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Sowing the most suitable seed for the particular purpose under existing environmental conditions is an important step in the improvement of the production of hay and pastures.

The selection of a seed mixture for hay or hay-pasture will depend largely on the length of time the field is to remain seeded down. For example, some farmers follow a definite crop rotation, where the mixtures of grasses and legumes are used for one or two crops of hay before the field is used for pasture for one or two years. In such cases hay-pasture mixtures would be recommended and would be somewhat different from the mixtures which are intended for a long-term pasture only, where no hay crops are to be taken.

It should be borne in mind, however, that no one mixture can be recommended to suit all purposes and under all conditions of soil, climate, etc. The following mixture may be regarded as a general basic recommendation for hay or hay-pasture (short-term) where alfalfa can be grown successfully: Timothy 6, alfalfa 6, red clover 6 and alsike 2 pounds per acre. Where alfalfa is not adapted due to soil acidity or inadequate drainage then the following may be regarded as a general recommendation for hay or hay-pasture: Timothy 8, red clover 8, and alsike 3 pounds per acre.

The family of Claude Roussel, 12-year-old Lachine schoolboy who picked out the ticket that won $40,000.00 in the Irish sweepstakes, register the joyous excitement caused by the good news. Surrounding Claude, left to right, are: Max Roussel, firm-minded father of the little family who is determined the money will be used for the benefit of them all; Jeanine, pretty 15-year-old daughter, and Mrs. Roussel, Claude's mother who has bought a sweepstakes ticket every year for the past 17 years decided this year that "for luck" he would let his son pick out and sign for the ticket. His gesture paid off in no uncertain terms.
