RACING DRIVER

By Alexander Campbell

A brisk handshake, and he was gone.

Professor Ellington seated himself on the chair the doctor had vacated. His black-haired hands rested on his knees, half concealed by his huge shirt cuffs. The torn pocket of his old jacket hung down unregarded.

"My name's Carter," began Frank. "I'm terribly indebted to you."

"Don't say a word about it, my boy," commanded the professor. "But tell me—just how much you can get out of that bus."

"Bus? Oh, the car! Well, on the road, about 100 or a bit over. But on the track—"

"Oh," said the professor, interested. "You race, eh?"

Now the name of Frank Carter, in England at the time, was at least as well known as the name of the newest film idol. In France, and in Italy, he had made back two records for Britain. But Frank was neither hurt nor astonished. After all, he had never heard of Professor Ellington, who was a much more important figure than Frank Carter—though his speed fans would not have admitted it.

"Yes," he said simply. "I earn my living that way."

"Well, I envy you," said the professor violently. "I like a bit of speed myself. Been had up before the heat twice," he added with childish glee. "And you don't leave to waste half your time and energy trying to knock some sense into the mousy skulls of a pack of old fogies and Gladstonian has been!"

He pointed a long finger. "You stick to your race, track. Steer clear of highbrows. If you bungle your job it may cost you your life. You've got to keep alert. But in my department a fuddling old nincompoop like that fellow Jackson—"

The professor's discourse on the drawbacks of an academic career were cut short by the entrance of his daughter. She was followed by Tomkins, carrying a tray.

"Well, well!" said the professor. He rose. Here's your dinner. I've got to dash off now. I'm writing an article 'Fuddling old nincompoop' he repeated scornfully. "I must remember that. Though they'll probably cut it out. I added regretfully. 'Course them! Well, I'll leave you in Dorothy's hands. Don't let her bully you. Trick she picked up from young Rupert. Have a good dinner, G'bye."

He was gone.

Tomkins arranged a bed table. Deposited on it a plate of soup. And departed.

"How are you?" asked Dorothy. "Fine thanks."

He wanted to ask a question, but didn't know how.

"This is terribly good of you," he said instead. "Of you and your make simple salads taste superior!

Hot Potato Salad with Frankfurters

Fry 4 slices bacon until crisp. Dice. Saute 1 medium onion, finely chopped and 6 frankfurters, thinly sliced. Combine with bacon, 6 medium boiled potatoes, cut in 1/2" cubes, 1/2 cup Heinz Distilled White Vinegar, 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt and dash pepper. Cook over low heat, stirring gently, until thoroughly heated. Serve on lettuce. Serves 6.

For salad insurance choose the best vinegar you can buy, just as you choose the best fruits and vegetables. That's the way to protect and enhance flavour.

Still, he reflected, as he musedly sipped his soup, she hadn't needed to be so chilly about announcing it. Her manner had said very plainly "Hands Off", which would have been all very well if he had even the most tentative of advances. Instead, he had merely remarked how nice it would be to have pleasant company on the voyage, and she had instantly frozen up.

Well—civility, that was the thing. Good politeness. Small talk. But he couldn't hold directing the small talk into one particular channel.

"Has your fiance been long in Africa?" he asked.

She removed the empty soup plate and replaced it with one containing an invalid's portion of fish swamped in white sauce.

"Two years," she said.

So they had been parted for two years. It must be the genuine thing, then. A pretty girl like this was not going to be wanting in admirers willing and eager to prove the truth of the old adage that absence makes the heart grow fonder of somebody else.

Ray Milland winner of the Academy Award for the best male performance of 1944, made the 48th star in his line of earlier screen roles as a dashing Naval lieutenant in Paramount's comedy-romance, "The Well Groomed Bride," which arrives today at the Prince Edward Theatre. Olivia Dehavilland, resuming her career after a two year absence from the screen, and Sonny Tufts to share with him in what is reported to be a fast-moving, hilarious page.

The picture is according to all reports, a riotous account of the antics of Ray, Olivia and Sonny as they scramble for possession of the last remaining two-quart bottle of champagne in San Francisco, which Milland has strict orders to bring to his captain for the christening of a ship. Milland stops at nothing to get it, and after a series of scenes rich with laughs, succeeds in winning both the champagne and Olivia.

Heading the supporting cast is the ever-popular James Gleason, cast as Milland's stern superior officer, Constance Dowling, beautiful and blonde, helps Milland win Olivia and winds up with what she wants—Sonny Tufts.

The Magic Mark OF YOUTH ON WHEELS

C.C.M. — "The Magic Mark of Youth on Wheels" spells good fun, good exercise and good health for Canadians from coast to coast.

This great satisfaction that is meted out to Canadians on wheeled vehicles bearing "The Magic Mark" — C.C.M. — is no bit of chance. It is, rather, the result of nearly 50 years of experience in designing and manufacturing the very best possible type of juvenile vehicles and bicycles. From the time little "toddlers" are lovingly placed on their first C.C.M. — Joy-Rider — all through their lives until, as grows men and women, they ride bicycles to work and play, they know they can get the most pleasure, the longest life, and the best performance from vehicles bearing "The Magic Mark of Youth on Wheels" — C.C.M. When you buy the juvenile vehicles and bicycles illustrated below, make certain to look for this famous C.C.M. trade mark.

Only C.C.M. Products can be rightly fully referred to as Joy-Riders, Joy-cycles and Bike Wagons. These are registered trade names.

Did you ever want to be an ENGINE DRIVER?

At some time nearly every boy has wanted to be an engine driver. He sees himself climbing into the "cab", taking the throttle and sending the mighty train dashing along the rails.

Old-timers can still recall the "puffing, hissing" and wood-burning engines. Others remember the great day in '85 when Canadian Pacific spanned the continent and steel was joined at Craigellachie.

Today we take the speed, safety and efficiency of our mighty railroads for granted. We are apt to forget how such the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways did to open up Canada for settlement and to being hundreds of thousands of sturdy industrious people from Great Britain and Europe to help people this Dominion — particularly the Canadian West.

In this Seventy-Fifth Anniversary Year, Confederation Life recalls the pleasant business relations it has enjoyed with Canada's railroad workers, generations of whom have been insured with the Company.

The Officers, directors and office and field staff of Confederation Life Association gladly pay tribute to Canada's railway employees, so many of whom enjoy the security provided by Confederation Life policies.
