GEORGE ARLISS

The LAST Gentleman

ARLISS in a role you'll love as much as he loved playing it! From his portrayal of Nathan Rothschild he turns to Cabot Barr, who tried so hard to be "the meanest man in the world," and found himself... the most beloved!

George Arliss At Prince Edward

"The Last Gentleman," George Arliss' second film under his new starring contract with 20th Century Pictures, came to the Prince Edward Theatre last night and proved perhaps the most delightful and certainly the most unusual comedy the talkies have produced. A far cry from "The House of Rothschild," this whimsical comedy is, by virtue of its very contrast, a fitting successor to the powerful dramatic vehicle.

As Cabot Barr, a wealthy, tractable, family-proud old New Englander, who calls together his relatives in the vague hope of finding a worthy heir, Arliss offers another of his rich and perfect portraits.

Immediately the members of the family are assembled under his roof, he proceeds to insult and humiliate them and accuse them of being after his money, for the mere childish glee of seeing them squirm.

Among those present are Edna May Oliver, as his sniffling but likable daughter, and Frank Albertson as Allan, her adopted son; Janet Beecher as the widow of Cabot's late son and Charlotte (Alice in Wonderland) Henry as her young daughter, Marjorie; and Donald Meek as Judd, Cabot's only living son, a thorough-going scoundrel who has been secretly recording his father's eccentricities in the hope of proving him insane and inheriting his estate.

In the course of the story, Cabot develops a genuine affection for young Marjorie (although he hates females) and plans to promote a romance between her and Allan, and make them his heirs.

The shock of his son's treachery in bringing an alienist to examine him breaks off Cabot's heart and health beyond repair; but the film ends on a cheery note and one which offers something altogether unique and refreshing in screen delectation, which it would be unfair to divulge here.

The story, which Leonard Praskin adapted from a play by Katharine Clugston, is rich in humor and a distinct departure from the usual film story. The capable jobs turned in by Sidney Lanfield, who handled the megaphone in association with Maude T. Howell, and every member of the cast, combine to make "The Last Gentleman" entertainment that will delight the heart of every member of every family in town—from the kiddies to Grandama and Grandad.

CO-EDS SPEND $3.25 A MONTH ON COSMETICS

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3.—University of British Columbia Co-Eds spend an average of $3.25 monthly to keep their faces in repair, a questionnaire reveals. And one of the 1,730 students eats kippered herring for breakfast, but what that has to do with cosmetic prices has not been ascertained.

"Student Tour" Bubbles With Mirth And Melody At The Capitol

Sparkling with mirth and bubbling with melody, "Student Tour" opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth have the comedy leads in this "different" musical comedy, and the romantic story is in the capable hands of two brilliant newcomers, Maxine Doyle and Phil Regan.

The picture fairly scintillates with the spirit of youth. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer seems to have reached out into the by-ways of Hollywood for its most promising young talent, and there are at least half a dozen ravishing beauties in the cast who should go far in their screen work.

New musical numbers by Brown and Freed are scattered through the engaging story. One of these, the "Carlo," a new dance rhythm, bids fair to revolutionize ballroom dancing and said to be the most important evolution in popular music in twenty years. Other song hits include "From Now On" and "A New Moon is Iver My Shoulder," both best-sellers.

"Student Tour" deals with the adventures—most hilarious and romantic—of a group of college boys and girls who embark on a world cruise chaperoned by Butterworth, an absent-minded professor, and Durante, an athletic trainer. They visit China, Java, the T'ai Mahai Monte Carlo and other picturesque spots, and manage to get into funny difficulties nearly everywhere.

Appeal to The Christian People of Canada

(CHRISTMAS, 1934)

The Social Service Council of Canada.

The Advent season reminds us that even as the ancient world was of necessity first prepared for the coming of the Christ-child, so all Christians must, by lives of watchfulness and prayer, make ready their hearts against the time when He shall come again in judgment and redemptive power.

Christmas is the festival of the Holy Child, and because of Him all child-life has become sacred. At this Christmas we appeal to the Christian people of this nation to take every precaution that the children of Canada may be protected from all those influences which would harm, either their bodies or their souls, and thus be given every encouragement to increase in wisdom and in stature, and in favour with God and man. We would especially urge upon the people of our country the need of self-examination and the liberation of their own lives from such habits and attitudes as may cause one of these little ones to offend.

Christmas is the festival of the Holy Family, and the light that shone in the stable of Bethlehem cast its radiance over father, mother and Holy Child, should shine in every Christian home. We appeal to the Christian people of our Commonwealth to guard the sanctity of home life against the countless forces that are seeking to destroy this fundamental pillar of Christian society, and by every helpful ministry to seek such an enrichment of home life that thus the whole family of man may be blessed.

Christmas is the festival when once again the world becomes vocal with melodies of peace and goodwill. The glory of Christianity is its universalism, and the good tidings proclaimed are for all people. When Christ is in the heart of man, there can be no room for national vanity, racial arrogance, or contempt of creed. Especially at this time, when the Jewish people into whose midst our Lord was born are harassed in many lands, we appeal to all Christian people in this Canada of ours to open their hearts to Him who is at once the Light of the Gentiles and the Glory of His people, Israel. Let us, in the words of the apostle, pursue these goals which make for peace, first in our own country and then among all nations.

Christmas is the festival of the Incarnation. All Christians rejoice in the belief that the very God, to show forth His love for mankind, divested Himself of His heavenly glory, took upon Himself the form of a servant, was made in the likeness of man, humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. In those trying days when much is said and thought about social and economic ills that upon people in this Canada of ours to open their hearts to our Dominion to remember Him who, though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that by His poverty, might be rich. When Christ is in the heart of man, he is a servant, was made in the likeness of man, humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. In those trying days when much is said and thought about social and economic ills that upon people in this Canada of ours to open their hearts to our Dominion to remember Him who, though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that by His poverty, might be rich. CANADA'S UNSOLVED MYSTERIES

MURDER IN A FURRIER'S STORE

(By Campbell Carroll, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

(Copyright, 1934, by The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—(C.P.)—Systematic callousness marked the murder of George Jobin, a Montreal furrier, in his little store on Anheuser Street, early in the evening of May 14, 1921.

The storekeeper had his jugular vein carefully cut with a pair of scissors belonging to the shop after he had been hit over the head with a mechanic's hammer. Jobin, who was 35 years of age, had struggled with his assailant until struck down. It remains an unsolved crime.

The motive for the crime was robbery. A sum of $250 the furrier was known to have had in his possession was missing when the body was found on the floor of the store. A diamond ring Jobin wore had been pried off with a pair of tweezers and the murderer had evidently failed to notice that the precious stone had fallen out and rolled into a corner.

After the slaying Jobin's assailant showed a callous sang froid. Police investigations revealed he went to a sink, drank a glass of water, and washed his hands. Bloody finger prints were found on a glass and on the tap. A woman neighbor reported she had seen a man walk out of the furrier's store carrying a tool bag. She thought his hands looked red but paid little attention to him at the time because she surmised he had been helping Jobin dye furs.

The police thought the murderer must have been well acquainted with Jobin's habits. He made his visit to the store on Saturday evening when the furrier's staff was always away. On this night, too, Jobin balanced up his accounts for the week.

The hammer similar to that with which the murderer could have felled his victim was found in a St. Catherine Street sewer not far from the scene of the crime but its discovery did not aid the police in unravelling the mystery.

A sinister by-product of the case was a number of bloodstained notes which were circulated in uptown Montreal theatres for some time. Although each of them was carefully examined for finger prints they failed to provide a clue to the identity of the killer.

They watched Old Charley until the car disappeared over a hill a few hundred yards south of the gate.

Both the girl and her husband glanced frequently at the sign.

When the wagon stopped at the gate, an Indian boy of ten said cautiously to the ground and, with his wide eyes fixed on the three by the main box, sidled to the gate and opened it. This done, he speedily rejoined the family in the wagon. Kenneth Warren went forward. "Can you tell me," he addressed the two-hundred-pound Indian on the wagon seat, "where Mr. Snavely is? Are you his man?"

"The Indian looked at his two-hundred-and-fifty-pound squaw, glanced back among his numerous progeny, and then turned his black eyes on Warren. "No sabb," The horses started forward.

"Mamma, letter for the man!" David, the letter from the box outstretched, started toward the retreating wagon.

"No, David, not to that man. Mamma will tell you when the man comes to whom you are to give the letter." An instant later she whirled about to her husband, the letter in her hand. "Kenneth! This letter—it's the one I wrote over two weeks ago to Snavely—he doesn't know we're coming!"

MEN DRESS IN BETTER TASTE THAN WOMEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Kenneth Collins, New York department store executive, in a sweeping statement last night said, "All women's fashions are ridiculous."

"Obviously enough," he told the Art-in-Trade Club "I am of the belief that the average man dresses in better taste than the average woman."

Collins said with conviction, "I don't think that I have ever seen more than one fashion in the past 10 years that was not fundamentally ludicrous and unbecoming."

He said women taught him the unbecomingness of women's clothes because they themselves are the first to laugh when styles of three to five years ago are displayed. Such laughter, he said, would not be provoked by a thing of real beauty only a short time after it was created.

That which is beautiful in women's clothes, Collins said, are "the lines that most closely harmonize with those of women's figures."

Houston, Canadian Industries, Mrs. M. Orr.

Three new members joined. The December meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Houston on Dec. 11. Roll call for meeting by every member being present. Committees appointed: Sick, Mrs. Jas. Houston and Mrs. A. Johnston. School, Mrs. Davis Moffatt and Mrs. Davis Moffatt and Mrs. W. Orr. Refreshment, Mrs. A. Johnston. Mrs. Warfield Orr and Mrs. Harold Toombs. Questionaire on Child Welfare for next meeting, Mrs. Andrew in charge. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Blair Andrew and Miss Marguerite Houston, assisted by Mrs. Ella Wyand. Meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and Better Schools, Mrs. Jas. them.

PRINCESS DENIES RIPT WITH MDIVANI MATE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Oceans at present separate the Alexis Medvans from the former Barbara Rutten restles 10 cent store hidvans, who denied on reaching the United States late today the existence of any rift between herself and her polo playing husband.

"He's just gone to shoot tigers or something—that's all," she said as she straightened a sprig of lilac pinned or her sable coat, "and I've come to spend the holidays with my parents."

"He likes that sort of thing," she said. "I've got to go to work."

Barbar was asked what they both liked. She could think of the country of China.

"We may go there to live," she celebrated in high wide and handsome fashion recently in Paris, had cost between $10,000 and $25,000.

"It only cost about $5,000," said she.

"Ridiculous," said the hetress was the rumor that food had been imported into France for the occasion from Russia. "Who would want to eat Russian food?"

"As for herself, she had been eating no food at all. "I have been starving."

Since she last was here she had lost 45 pounds.

"Not nothing is my motto," she asserted. "Be like Gandhi. For three weeks I ate no solid food. It either kills you or you lose weight."
