Fortunately, she was not injured, the train stopped and she boarded it.

PROMPT RESPONSE.—The promptness of the Summerside Fire Dept., on Saturday, probably being burned to the ground. At about noon, smoke was seen on the west corner from near the platform, the firemen quickly chopped a hole through and put the fire out with small damage. The fire is supposed to have started from a cigar butt which some one had carelessly thrown down. H.

SPORTS.—The relay race from Alberton to Tignish on Wednesday the 5th inst., drew a large crowd, only two teams completed the Indians of Lennox Island and the Tignish team, the Indians won out. In the first three miles, Michael Thomas, Indian, outran his competitor 3/4 of a mile, and the last three miles of the race was won by Bernard Francis, Indian, by a good margin. The large crowd of people who gathered to see the finish of the race at Tignish, packed the grand stand so full that it gave way and precipitated all hands to the ground. No one was hurt and the crowd clubbed together and erected a temporary stand.—H.

LIFE IN THE LONG AGO
When Huts Were Homes and Beds Were Shakedown of Straw.

For centuries the common people of England made their home in wooden huts of one room. When a family increased in numbers or wealth, another hut was built beside it, or, rather a lean-to was added and then another and another, as need required.

Sometimes they followed a straight line. At other times they were built out from the central hut at various angles. The roofs of these huts were thatched. An opening was left in the centre for the smoke to escape. The fire was always built in a hollow in the centre of the room. Beds were made of straw. Often they were merely shakedown in the corner. Occasionally the straw was held in a little frame resembling the ribs of a ship.

Houses built by Saxon knights were much more pretentious. They were big halls, like the Roman atrium, with a lofty roof thatched with slate or wood shingles. The floor was of hard clay. In the middle was a great fire of dry wood. The thin, acrid smoke from the fire escaped through an opening in the roof directly above the hearth.

Round the fire were long benches on which hearthsmen and visitors sat when not fighting or at work, and talked and drank the hours through. The tables were long boards on trestles. At night the floor was strewn with straw, and like the less prosperous folk, host and visitors slept together.— Youth's Companion.

CURIOUS MEXICAN TREES

One Whose Fruit is the Counterpart of the Green Parrot.

Mexico probably has a greater range of remarkable vegetation than any other country in the world. The parrot fruit tree produces an odd shaped fruit, bearing a close resemblance to green parakeets. When the parakeet is frightened it makes a dash for the parrot tree, where it assumes a position which makes it look like the suit itself. So close is the resemblance that their enemies, the hawks, occasionally fly by a tree on which a dozen or more of these birds are sitting, apparently unaware of their presence.

Another remarkable tree is the arbol dinamite—dynamite tree—whose fruit, if kept in a warm place, bursts with considerable force and a loud report, scattering its flat seeds to a surprising distance.

One of the most interesting fruits in Mexico is known as the melon zapote, or papaya. It contains considerable pepsin, which reacts against both acid and alkaline conditions of the stomach, and it is said that a diet which includes papaya precludes dyspepsia. Both the fruit and the leaves possess the singular property of rendering tough meat tender. When the pulp of the fruit is rubbed over a piece of tough meat the juice attacks the fiber and softens it.—National Geographic Magazine.

The Right Address

A young New York broker of convivial habits fell in with an old school friend who had gone on the road.

"Whenever you're in town come up and bunk with me," urged his friend as they separated, "no matter what old time it is! If I'm not there just go ahead and make yourself at home. I'll be sure to turn up before daybreak."

Soon after this the salesman arrived in town about midnight and, remembering his friend's invitation, sought out his boarding house.

There was only a dim light flickering in the hall, but he gave the bell a manful pull. Presently he found himself face to face with a landlady of grim and terrible aspect.

"Does Mr. Smith live here?" he asked.

"Impossible. Impasses. . . ."

"What happens when an irresistible woman meets an immovable man?"

"She never does."

BRINGING UP FATHER

"I'LL TAKE THIS BOOK TO MY ROOM AN' PRETEND I'M READIN' IT AN' WHEN MAGGIE SEE'S IT I'LL MAKE A HIT WITH HER."

"WHERE IN THE WORLD CAN IT BE? I'VE LOOKED HIGH AND LOW FOR IT!"

"SO! YOU GOT THAT BOOK?"

"YER!!"

"NOW DON'T YOU EVER DARE MOVE ANYTHING OUT OF THE SITTING ROOM AGAIN!"
