

Kelly's Cross School

The closing exercises of Kelly's Cross School took place on the afternoon of June 30th in the presence of a large number of interested rate-payers. This school has during the past year been under the management of Mr. Thomas McAvinn, B.A., and the outcome of his year's labors have justified the expectations of the trustees when they engaged him last summer. We understand he is under contract for another year in this school. Mr. McAvinn was assisted in the examination by Rev. J. C. Pitre, J. P. Carragher, F. P. Smith and Mrs. J. W. McKenna. All gave evidence of the capable and thorough character of the work done during the year.

At the close of the examination, with J. P. Carragher, as chairman, a short program was presented to the delight of the audience, as follows:

Song: Mary McKenna; Song, Faustina Trainor; Recitation, Mary Bradley; Recitation, Wilfred Woods; Step Dancing, by Minerva McDonald, Justin Kelly, Wilfred Woods, Francis McDonald.

The following pupils made marks sufficient to secure Leaving School Certificates: Mary McKenna, 453 or 75%; William Waddell, 423 or 70%; Mary Bradley, 394 1/2 or 65.45%. Mary McKenna who leads is only eleven years of age, a wonderful beginning in her educational record.

Mary Bradley also received certificate for best writing. Prize, donated by Fr. Pitre, to pupil making highest average in Grade VIII, awarded to Mary McKenna.

Prize, also donated by Fr. Pitre, for perfect attendance, awarded to Mildred Carragher.

Three prizes donated by Mr. McAvinn, were awarded to William Waddell for best deportment to Kevin McKenna for highest average in Junior grades, and to Thomas Trainor for highest average in senior grades.

Several of those present having spoken on the good work being done in the school, and referring to the high standing of the teacher in his profession, the proceedings closed with the reading of the following address by Mary Bradley, which was accompanied by a suitable gift to the teacher:

ADDRESS

Kelly's Cross Mr. Thomas McAvinn, B. A.

Dear Teacher,—As this is the end of the school term, the closing day, we welcome with smiling faces the many joys and pleasures of our summer vacation.

We wish to express our gratitude and appreciation for the interest you have taken in us during the past year. We are all very pleased to know that you intend to remain with us another year, thus keeping up the good work, the advancement of education in our school.

Now, dear teacher, we wish to present you with a little remembrance, just a slight token of our appreciation of your faithful and conscientious work among us. It is not a costly gift but it bears with it the love and best wishes of each and all of our pupils.

We all join in wishing you a very pleasant vacation, coming back with us in a few months' time, refreshed and rested, and even better prepared to resume the duties of your chosen profession—a teacher.

We are yours very sincerely,
Kelly's Cross Pupils.

(Continued) CHAPTER X For half an hour Jeems was alone with Toinette. Then Mary Daghien returned, and with her came a messenger who took him back to the dances which were beginning about the scalp-fire. He was not embarrassed by the critical eyes upon him. The wildness of the night entered his blood, a heat set blazing by the joy of his possession, and as he sang the Seneca victory songs with the others, Toinette was in his heart, and words she whispered to him under the oaks repeated themselves until they dulled his senses and blinded his eyes to everything but their import. As soon as God would let them bring it about she would let him know that she had said that! So he danced. He shouted at Tiaoga's side. Toinette, horrified at first, saw him in his madness. Then she began to understand. But not until he took his turn among the warriors and danced alone in the light of the fire, chanting his story in the language of his adopted people, did Op'chi—translating what he said—let her know fully the dafing of her lover. Jeems' story began with his earliest thoughts and memories of her. He told of their home in the country of the Richelleu, of his dreams and hopes. He described the passing of moons and the growing of his love and how death had come with the Mohawks from the south. Then he came to the finding of Toinette, their flight, the triumph of his love, his fight with the scalp hunter at Lussan's place, and their capture by Tiaoga and his warriors. He others of a similar kind give us of savage life." To Jeems and Toinette there was nothing spectacular in their first day or in the many that followed. After the triumphal night, the Indian town fell once more into the routine of its existence. Men hunted, women worked, children played. Warriors met in solemn councils and smoked incessantly as they discussed the affairs of their commonwealth and planned for the future. The "Dark Year" was upon them. Winter threatened. But there were other matters to be settled. Tiaoga had brought unusual news. The English, under a general named Braddock, had been defeated and massacred. The French had been destroyed on Lake George. Sir William Johnson, the White Father of the Six Nations, was victorious, and the Mohawks were profiting greatly. This brought sombre looks into the faces of the Senecas. The eastern wilderness was bound to run red with war. Tiaoga was sure. His warriors were sure. The long-expected struggle between the English and the French was at hand, and there would be no rest for the tomahawk until the land was free of one or the other. Tiaoga and his councilors in Chenuslo faced war—and famine. If their fighting men went into the east, who would keep the people from starvation? It was decided that Tiaoga should take the war-path again with thirty men chosen by lot, while thirty of his braves should remain to fight hunger and death during the winter months. The drawing came, but Jeems was not included. Shindas was doomed to leave; his sweetheart again. These were days when misgivings assailed Jeems and Toinette in spite of their hopes and plans, yet no cloud more than temporarily darkened their visions. In the heart of each was the prayer that a wandering priest might come their way, so that the ceremony could be performed which would make them husband and wife. In the town were a number of white women who had accepted Indian husbands in the Indian way, but against this practice Toinette revolted. She prayed and Mary Daghien prayed with her, for through the year since her mother had died the Thrush had kept her faith unbroken. The Seneca worshipping her, honored it. Early in November groups began to leave, each with the small amount of food which remained as his share. Mary was to accompany two families of eight people under the protection of Thunder Shield, a valiant warrior and a splendid hunter. They were going toward Lake Ontario. Toinette was relative to Ah De Bah, the Tall Man, a gift of Tiaoga's. Hiding their disappointment, Jeems and Toinette encouraged themselves with visions of a future which they tried to paint in bright colors. The months would pass quickly. With the earliest days of spring, they would return to Chenuslo. Every hour they would live in each other's thoughts, and at night their prayers would cross in the wilderness. Next year there would surely be a way. Fate would not separate them again. In their final moments together, Toinette's eyes glowed with a depth of faith and love which it was impossible for Jeems to measure fully. In this way they parted. He went north and west with Wusko toward the Tyangarumte river which emptied into Lake Ontario. Odd struggles between his devotion for Jeems and for Toinette. He followed his master a distance, then hesitated and turned back. A lump rose in Jeems' throat, and he could not see clearly as his comrade sat in the trail and watched until he disappeared. Wusko led the way to a hardwood country in which he was sure there would be hunting that would last through the winter. There were plenty of raccoons, and the merrymen, or fish ducks, would come to the swift running headwaters to feed as soon as ice closed the lakes and the mouths of the streams. Here they made their lodge of saplings. It was a new kind of home for Wood Pigeon. Jeems built it with a cooking hearth and a chimney and a tiny room set apart for Wood Pigeon herself. The child's eyes glowed with delight at this possession. Each day Jeems told her more about Toinette—how Sol Yan Makwum cared for her beautiful hair, how it was part of her religion to keep herself clean, how and why she'd this thing and that, until thoughts and desires grew in Wanona's head, and she employed the comb and the brush which Jeems made for her until her sleek black hair was never unduly
