Three in Same Family Helped

"My mother was visiting in Detroit a year ago and she was in very poor health. My sister-in-law got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped her more than anything she had taken. She advised me to take it too and I did. My back used to ache and I suffered so with pain at times that I could not work. I feel like a new woman and can do my housekeeping and work in the store. I am glad to answer letters."—Mrs. T. V. How Good a Matrimonial Risk is the School-ma'am? — Grafting Sister-in-Law — Shall the Mother of Two Leave Her Insulting Husband?

Dear Miss Dix—Do you think school teachers make better wives and mothers than other girls? ONE WHO WANTS TO KNOW.

Answer: School teachers have ever been a preferred matrimonial risk and the demand for them for wives is so great that it interferes seriously with the work of educational institutions. For no sooner does a pretty schoolma'am get really worked into her job than she ups and marries.

But how the school teacher compares with other girls as a wife and mother I do not know. I should think that her training and her experience in handling children might better fit her for motherhood, but that it might disqualify her a trifle for wifehood by developing in her a tendency to be arbitrary and bossy, as is likely to happen when a superior mind deals habitually with inferior ones.

However, this is merely theoretical. Certainly the wives that I know who were teachers before their marriage are among the most efficient and helpful of helpmates and are the heads of happy and contented families.

But whether a girl teacher or goes into business, the fact that she has earned her living before she married does more than any one thing to fit her for matrimony. To begin with, the self-supporting girl is likely to make a far wiser choice of a husband than the home-staying girl.

The working girl has had a close-up of men that it is not possible for the girl to have who has known men only socially, and this alone knocks into smithereens all the fantastic illusions about men being godlings and fairy princes that so many girls entertain. The business girl has seen men with their coats off, spiritually as well as physically. She knows when the veneer knocks off just how many are mean and stingy and high tempered and irritable and beastly and sensual, gentlemen only on the outside and when they are dressed up for society.

And she knows what others are gentlemen through and through, chivalrous to old and weak and helpless women, kind and tender, honest and honorable, and so when she chooses a man for a husband she isn't very likely to be fooled in him or taken in by any fine talk.

And the girl herself gets a discipline in business that stands her in good stead the balance of her life. She learns to be prompt and efficient, to do things on time, and to control her nerves and her temper and her emotions. And she learns how to get along with men, and this is invaluable, for you use exactly the same process in smoothing down an irritable husband that you do in handling a cranky boss.

And she learns about the value of money. No woman who has earned a dollar ever looks at it in the same way that the woman does who has always had her money given to her. The one sees it stained with sweat and blood. The other looks upon it as a mere scrap of paper, and so the girl who has supported herself knows how to save money and the importance of laying it up for a rainy day.

Finally, the woman who has been in business makes a better wife because she understands what her husband goes through as no woman even can who has never labored and known the weariness that leaves one spent in mind and body at the end of a day of strain and anxiety. Also, she can talk shop with her husband, and that is the greatest bond that can be between a husband and wife.

So whether a girl is a schoolma'am or a clerk or a stenographer, she makes the better wife for having earned her own bread and butter. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a man who loves his wife and home, but cannot have any home life because of my wife's sister, who insists on living with us. We denied ourselves things we really needed to give her a business course, thinking that in that way we could get rid of her, but she will not work. She prefers to sponge on us. An extra one to feed and clothe means much to me, as I am on a small salary, but, worse still, I have got so I hate to go home in the evening, knowing she will be there, and I can never have any time with my family alone. What shall I do? WORRIED JIM.

Answer: Have enough courage to tell the girl frankly that she must leave. You really don't deserve any sympathy because you are the victim of your own weakness and if you had the spunk of a mouse you would pick up the girl's clothes and send them to the Y. W. C. A., and pay her board there for a week and tell her that she would have to make her own living or starve. And that you are through being her goat any longer.

And you would be doing the girl the greatest possible kindness, for you would make a respectable member of society of her instead of aiding and abetting her in being a deadbeat. As it is, you are encouraging her in being a lazy loafer, and that destroys everything that is fine and good and in anybody's character.

Your sister-in-law thinks that you will let her hang on to you until she can transfer herself to some poor man whom she will victimize for the balance of her life. For the girl who has n't enough principle to go out and earn her own living makes the kind of wife that bums her way through matrimony also.

She is no more willing to work in a kitchen than she was in an office, and she curses the man who gets her as a wife. So for your own good and the girl's good, force her to go out and support herself. Look around you and you will see that the finest, the happiest, the most alert girls that you see anywhere are the business ones. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I have been married more than ten years and have two boys, 4 and 8 years old. My husband is a good provider and a domestic man, but he has the most ungovernable temper that I have ever seen, and he curses and abuses the children and me until I have become unbearable. One of his mildest expressions is to wish we were dead and in Hades with our backs broken. I feel that I can't raise my boys like I want them with their father showing so little respect for them, their mother and himself, so I am thinking seriously of leaving him. I think I can support them and I figure God will show me a way when it is for their good. What do you think about it? WORRIED WIFE.

Answer: It is, of course, a question that you must settle for yourself. You must decide whether the support you get from your husband outweighs the insults you have to stand from him and whether it is better for your boys to have no father at all than such a father as they have.

Personally, I think that nothing is so intolerable as to have to live with a man with a fiendish temper, and that nothing can repay a woman for living in dread of maniacal outbursts, or so degrade her in her own sight as for her to take foul abuse from a man in a rage, when he takes leave of every vestige of sense or sensibility.

Perhaps if you leave your husband on account of his temper it will give

Govt. To Aid The Brick Industry

(Special to the Guardian) TORONTO, Sep. 20.—To aid the brick industry in the present depression and assist in stemming the tide of unemployment, the Government will not use brick from its reformitory labor plant at Mimico, but will buy in the open market for Government buildings to be erected, Hon. Leopold Macaulay recently created Provincial Secretary announced yesterday.

stitute and the Nurses Home and patients cottage for the Provincial Hospital at Orillia, Ordinary explained, Mr. Macaulay said that brick for these structures would be supplied from the Ontario Brick and Tile Plant at Mimico, this plant being one of the provincial reformatories and caring for 200 inmates. The plant can produce 450,000 bricks per month when running at capacity and the policy of the Government has been to use this material, not for sale in the open market, but entirely in the construction of Government buildings.

In a small village in Ireland the mother of a soldier met the village priest, who asked her if she had had news. "Sure, I have," she said, "Paw has been killed." "Oh, I am very sorry," said the priest. "Did you receive word from the War Office?" "No," she said, "I received word from himself." The priest looked perplexed and said, "But how is that?" "Sure," she said, "here is the letter. Read it yourself." The latter said:—"Dear Mother, I am now in the Holy Land."

The two immediate projects for which brick will be purchased are the stores building at the Whitby In-

They can control their tempers if they would, because they do it in business and in society. Otherwise they would never hold a job, or have a customer or client. And the first able-bodied man they cursed would whale the life out of them.
