

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press) "Intimidated" by a crowd of angry fans, Referee Harry Ertle named Bill (Young) Stribling a rascal in a bout with Mike McTigue, then altered the decision three hours later 16 years ago today. Ertle reverted to his original ruling that the fight was a draw, after he was away from the menace of Stribling's home-state pals in Columbus, Ga.

YANKS BEAT REDS IN 9TH INNING OF OPENER

Keller's Triple Paves Way For McCarthy Men To Get Off To Flying Start

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Staff Writer) NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(AP)—In as tight a ball game as ever thrilled a World Series audience, New York Yankees got off to a flying start in their drive for a fourth straight world championship today by nipping Cincinnati Reds 2-1 with a dramatic ninth-inning score.

Until clouting Charles Keller, rookie right-fielder, tripled with one out in the last frame, and came dancing home on Bill Dickey's line single to centre, the battle was dominated almost entirely by the defence, rather than the offence, to the intense excitement of a crowd of 58,541 in Yankee Stadium. Receipts were $219,041.

The pitching mastery in the right arms of Charley (Red) Ruffing for the Yankees and Paul Derringer for the National League standard bearers held command all the way. They were aided spectacularly by the Yankees' double-play kids—shortstop Frank Crosetti and second baseman Joe Gordon—on the one hand, and, on the other, by Frank McCormick, the Reds' first sacker, whose fielding was little short of sensational. The Yankee infield pulled off three double plays.

There had been momentary "breaks" which resulted in a run for each club early in the game. The Reds drew first blood, in the fourth inning, when Ival Goodman walked, stole second on a low throw from catcher Dickey which escaped Gordon, and raced home on McCormick's ground-ball single which slid past third base into left field.

Yanks Deadlock Score

There were cheers as this development sent the spirited Reds away in front. But back came the Yankees in the fifth to tie it up. With one down, Gordon fired a single past third base. Up came Babe Dahlgren, the successor to Lou Gehrig on first base and generally regarded as the "weak link" among the bombers of the Yankees' firing line.

He produced. He shot a fast ground ball along the third base line, which was fair by three feet. Bill Werber made a stab at it, but the ball kept right on going to the left field corner. Gordon charged past second, rounded third and headed for home as leftfielder Wally Berger retrieved the ball, and threw to second base in response to frantic singles from teammates.

Dahlgren reached second safely, Lennie Frey took Berger's throw, wheeled and pegged to the plate. Catcher Ernie Lombardi had to leap to pull down the toss, and Gordon raced home safely under him. There was considerable discussion afterward as to what might have occurred if Berger had made the throw directly to the plate, instead of paying attention to his infield mates and trying to stop Dahlgren from running out his two-bagger.

Hurler's Steal Show

After that both pitchers took over the show. From the fifth, when Harry Craft singled and was erased by the third double play of the game by the Yankee infield, through to the ninth, Ruffing and Ertle gave up only four hits to the fighting Rhinelanders.

7 Yanks Fanned

Derringer was touched for only half a dozen blows. He fanned seven members of the vaunted Yankee hitting lineup, getting out of Joe Dimaggio and Red Rolfe. After the Yanks scored their run in the fifth, he retired 12 men in order until

Accuses Hitler Of Hypocrisy

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(CP)—Marshal Joseph Pilsudski's widow, among the Polish refugees here, tonight accused Adolf Hitler of hypocrisy in having ordered military honors paid at her late husband's tomb in Krakow. "That was perfidious!" she exclaimed when a reporter questioned her on Hitler's show of respect to the father of modern Poland.

If the Nazi Fuehrer had really revered Pilsudski's memory, she said, he would never have allowed his planes to bomb the Belvedere Palace, where she and her husband lived.

"Since Pilsudski's death," she said, "the palace has become a national museum. It stands alone on a high place. The bombing couldn't have been a mistake."

trying conditions of warfare. German trucks and tanks were breaking down in increasing numbers, and the further they advanced from their original bases, the more they suffered from a growing shortage of fuel and repairs.

The Poles, it also appears, were wholly unprepared for the kind of invasion they had to meet. Their equipment was out of date. They relied too much on infantry and cavalry, and not enough on trenches and fortifications.

But Russia not struck at the critical moment, the Poles, by entrenching themselves before the German steam-roller recovered its momentum, might have established a new line, and employed defensive tactics more appropriate to German methods.

Daily War Survey

(By The Canadian Press) The comparative lull still prevailing on the western front gives the military authorities of the warring nations opportunity to strengthen their own positions and analyze the war in Poland with a view to profiting by the first large-scale application of the theory of lightning war with mechanized forces.

Reds Still Confident Of Outcome

By Charles Dunkley Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(AP) "One game don't win a series. The Yanks are no super ball club. They can be beaten and I'll send Bucky Walters after them tomorrow."

It was the "Deacon" Bill McKeechne, speaking as sole spokesman in behalf of his royal Reds. He waved newspaper men away from the Cincinnati players, reminding the writer that he would do all the talking and cautioning photographers to take no pictures.

"Bezer" Lombardi, the Reds' big catcher, was raging mad when he stormed into the dressing room. He ripped off his chest protector and hurled it into the air. Then he slammed down his mask, picked it up and threw it across the room after the chest protector. All the while cursing and mumbling to himself. He kicked his trunk a couple of times and then flopped himself down on top of it, the picture of disgust and rage.

None of the Reds talked to each other, leaving all explaining to their manager.

Over in the Yank's dressing room the world's champions were hilariously happy. Joe McCarthy moved into his private dressing room to receive congratulations from Postmaster-General James A. Farley and State General Herbert Lehman.

McCarthy gave praise to both Red Ruffing, his victorious pitcher and to Paul Derringer, the vanquished.

"Both pitched a careful, beautiful game. It was just a question who would get the runs and we managed to get them."

SALE RUMORED

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The New York Sun said today negotiations had been resumed for sale of Swift & Company's interest in the $7,000,000 packing concern of Libby, McNeil & Libby to the English-controlled Lever Brothers & Unilever, Ltd., a $500,000,000 organization which does the greater part of the soap and oleomargarine business of the British Empire.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—(AP)—William B. Traynor, Vice President and Treasurer of Swift and Company, today denied a report that negotiations were under way for the sale of Swift's interest in Libby, McNeil and Libby Packing concern to the English-controlled Lever Brothers and Unilever, Limited. "There is no foundation for such a rumor," Traynor said. "The report was published in New York. Use Minard's for bites."

Red Wings Tied With Colonels As Little World Series Goes Into Finals

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 4.—(AP) Rochester Red Wings squared the little world series with Louisville of the American Association by defeating the Colonels 9-5 in the sixth game of the series tonight. The international baseball leaguers staged a seven-run scoring spree in the third inning to clinch the game.

Herschel Lyons allowed Louisville 11 hits, but kept them well scattered except in the seventh inning, when the Colonels staged a five-run rally, climaxed by Campbell's home run with two runners aboard.

The Wings reached Leroy (Bud) Parmelee, making his third start in the series for two home runs in the second inning, and then fell on him and his successor, Flowers, for seven more counters in the next frame. Flowers and Shaffer shackled the Wings for the remainder of the game.

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, and Benny Leonard, once holder of Ambers' boxing crown, are among hundreds of guests expected to attend Lou's marriage to Miss Margaret Mary Celio.

... and cranberry sauce

When the first white settlers on this continent felt the urge to give thanks that their crops were safely in, Father took his blunderbus and shot a wild turkey while Mother ventured into the marsh for cranberries. Turkey and cranberry sauce did not come out of the storehouse—so they became symbols for extra thanksgiving.

As you sit back after your Thanksgiving dinner in 1939, your pipe, cigar and cigarette give, if you come to think of it, cause for extra thanks.

For the industry which supplies you with the peaceful pleasures of smoking now supports some 300,000 of your fellow Canadians and adds to the work and wages of many thousands more on farms and railroads, in factories and stores. This is important to you, whoever you are, because Canada is more than a stretch of territory. It is a community of interests, an organization for living through which we all make our livelihood and in which we dwell in enviable comfort and security. . . . And all this has been developed in a land which was forest and marshes when turkey and cranberry sauce became viands of thanksgiving.
