Brilliant Military Demonstration in his Honor—The King and President Loubet Acclaimed by the Populace.

The dull white or the glossy finish on laundered linen is a matter of taste—to get either finish perfect is a matter of using Celluloid Starch.

Just add lukewarm water—soaks into fabric without rubbing and stiffens perfectly. The edge or point of the iron will give the gloss. Good grocers sell it.

PARIS, May 1.—Vast crowds filled the boulevards from the early hours people struggled to gain the vantage point along the route to be followed by the Royal procession. On the square fronting the railway station was a surging mass of humanity. A detachment of the first Voltairiers, in showy uniforms and glittering breastplates and helmets and waving plumes, held back the crowds.

The front of the station was elaborately decorated with crimson and gold hangings and the interior was transformed into a superb reception room hung with gobelin tapestry, having crimson and gold furnishings and decorated with flowers and plants. On the balcony was stationed the band of the Republican Guard, in stunning blue and white uniforms.

President Loubet surrounded by the Cabinet Ministers, the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, the Grand Commander of the Legion of Honor, the military and naval dignitaries and the diplomatic corps, presented an imposing appearance.

As the train entered the station the trumpets sounded a Royal salute, and the band played "God Save the King." King Edward descended from his car and advanced slowly and alone, smiling and saluting. He wore the scarlet uniform of a British Field Marshal, his chapeau topped by waving red and white plumes and his breast adorned with various insignia, including the cross of the Legion of Honor.

President Loubet stepped forward and grasped the King's hands. The meeting between the Sovereign and the President was cordial almost demonstrative. Loubet welcomed the King to France and His Majesty, smiling, responded in French, expressing his thanks for the splendid manifestation in his honor.

Traversing the station King Edward and the members of his party entered state carriages, with gorgeously clad postillions and outriders, and escorted by a regiment of Voltairiers, drove to the British Embassy. The route of the procession was through the beautiful Avenue Du Bois De Boulogne and the Avenue Des Champs Elysee, arched with chestnut trees in full bloom.

The lowering clouds which marked the earlier part of the day had broken up and the sun came forth to add to the splendor of the spectacle. The avenues were lined with soldier ranks of dragoons, cuirassiers, horse artillery field batteries and infantry, guns, helmets, and other trappings gleaming in the sunlight. Behind these martial walls the people were banked in solid masses and all the trees, windows and balconies and house tops were crowded with spectators. It was estimated that a million people gathered along the line.

At the Arc De Triomphe, the scene was majestic with the shimmering line of soldiery, a forest of waving banners blaring bugles and rolling drums and succeeding bands taking up "God Save the King."

The President and the King were continually acclaimed as they passed through the living walls of soldiery. Among the populace occasionally discordant shots were heard, but the prevailing sentiment was strongly fond.

When the procession reached the De La Corderie, a battery of great guns crashed forth and reverberated a Royal salute. King Edward alighted at the British Embassy on the Rue Du Faubourg St. Honore, where some previous arrangements had been prepared for him, including a throne room furnished from the art treasures of the Borgese Palace. Above the Embassy, transformed into a palace, the Royal Standard of Great Britain was raised.

After a brief rest at the Embassy, King Edward proceeded with an escort of cuirassiers, to the Elysee Palace where he was received by President Loubet. They remained together alone for some time. When the King was on his way to the Elysee, the crowds continued their friendly manifestation.

Paris today was given up to the elaborate festivities, the Government encouraging fetes, similar to those of the 14th of July. The boulevards were ablaze with color, floral arches and artistic devices symbolic of Royalty. Many American flags were displayed and the United States Consulate was gay with burning. Street amusements and dancing were proceeding everywhere and the cafes teemed with joyous customers. Some of the kiosks displayed caricatures of King Edward and anti-British badges were seen but in the main, the sentiment of the people was most friendly and no notable manifestation of hostility was recorded.

Tonight the City of Paris presented a fairy-like spectacle. The facade of the Opera House was aglow with a myriad of lights, the Column Vendome was crowded with lights and along the boulevard arches supported flaming crowns and other devices welcomed King Edward. The thoroughfares of the city were blocked with a good natured crowd.

President Loubet proceeded to the British Embassy at 8 o'clock and escorted the King through the illuminated streets to the Theatre Francaise to witness the production of "L'Autre Danger." The entire theatre was occupied by invited guests of the Government and the audience was made up of the foremost men and women of France.

Upon arriving at the theatre King Edward passed in the foyer to chat with Prince Murat and other old friends. The audience rose to its feet as the King and the President entered the presidential box. King Edward wore evening dress and seemed keenly to enjoy the performance.

LONDON PAPERS PLEASED.
LONDON, May 2.—King Edward's visit to Paris is chronicled in the daily papers this morning with unusual elaboration. In the editorial articles on the subject is seen a tone of the deepest gratification over the occurrence, which is characterized as a political event of the first importance showing that the estrangement between Great Britain and France has at last come to an end. The spontaneity of the welcome accorded to King Edward is held to prove that the bitterness engendered by the Fashoda and other incidents has given place to reciprocal good feeling and to the best of omens for future friendly relations.

A KNIGHT OF THE GRIPSACK

Who called at our store a few days ago said, "You have the prettiest colored shirts I ever saw in any town," needless to say he bought one. He was right. There are no better. We sell the W. G. & R. make, not the cheap, gaudy kind that fades in the first or second wash. The (woods) town is full of that kind. If you want a shirt that is first class in make, up-to-date in pattern and holds its color to the last day you wear it. Buy our $1.10, $1.25, $1.35 or $1.50 shirt.
