NEW PRINCIPAL.—Automatically Rev. Dr. Daniel James Fraser, L.L.D., D. D., register of the Presbyterian College of Montreal and senior professor on the staff of the college, has become acting principal in succession to the late Rev. Dr. Scrimgeour. This is made possible by a provision in the charter of the college which automatically appoints the senior professor in the college to the position of acting principal until the yearly meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. As this body does not meet again until June, 1916, Dr. Fraser will retain the acting-principalship until that time, unless special action is taken by the Assembly. Rev. Professor Daniel James Fraser, D. D., was born in Alberton, P. E. Island, on September 15, 1866, and spent his preparatory school days at the Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, where he took a first-class teaching diploma. Entering McGill University, Dr. Fraser spent several years there, taking his bachelor degree and first-class honours in philosophy and being valedictorian in 1890. After that he was appointed a lecturer in classics at the Montreal University, where he remained two years and served as the editor in chief of the College Journal. Dr. Fraser was sent to the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance Convention at Liverpool, England, as a delegate from the Presbyterian Church of Canada. He acted as moderator of the Montreal Presbytery for a space of six months during the year 1911. Prof. Fraser has gained much prominence by his contributions to various religious publications and has also issued in printed form many noted sermons. In 1897 while pastor of St. Steven's Presbyterian Church, in St. John, he wrote on the life of Queen Victoria, entitled, "Victoria, Queen and Mother."

HE GOT A LIFT.

Young people who live in towns where they are the only country often think themselves very superior persons as compared with those who live in the country, and often by word or deed behave in a manner not at all worthy of them. Sometimes they are taught a lesson they are not likely to forget, as the young man who, "got a lift" in the following instance certainly did.

"Hello, Turnips!" cried a young fellow, turning round as he heard the rattle of wheels, and standing still until my father drove up. "Can a fellow get a lift to Newton?" And without waiting for reply he vaulted into the cart. "It might as well ride with you as walk. Now, then, hurry up your old nag!"

My father looked at the young man rather sharply, but said nothing beyond a "Get-up!" addressed to his horse. After two or three miles had been traversed the young man paused for a moment in his inconsequential chatter and remarked, "It's more of a distance to Newton than I thought."

"It's a good distance," replied my father, dryly. Another twenty minutes passed, and then the young man inquired:

"About how far is it to Newton?" "Well," my father replied, "keepin' straight ahead, the way we are going now, I should say 't would be a matter of 20,000 miles or so; but if so be you was favorable for gettin' out of my cart and walking it back, it isn't very much above eight miles."

BRITISH EYE-WITNESS DECLARES GERMANS FEEL DEFEAT NEAR.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Professor Bernard Pares, who has been the British official eye-witness with the Russian armies, and is now back in London, summed up yesterday for the Daily Chronicle his impressions of the eastern campaign.

"The war in Poland has revealed Russia at her best," he said. "When I left the Third Army in Galicia at the end of June, the Germans were fifty miles south of Lublin. They took a month to get there and that's not bad work for the Russians. When we retreated from Gorlice they took precious good care not to press us too much. On one occasion a Russian corps of 6,000 men, hampered though they were by lack of adequate artillery and munitions, actually took 7,000 prisoners, more than they themselves.

"Both Germans and Austrians are in a chronic condition of depression. It is hardly surprising that after their great successes in Galicia they somehow realised then as they realise more than ever now, in spite of any temporary advantage, the fact that they cannot win unless we choose to lose.

"Quite apart from the enthusiasm with which the Slav populations, Poles, Czechs and Ruthenians, greeted their appearance on Austrian soil, the remarkable fact must be recorded that in a very large number of Austrian civilians quite voluntarily accompanied Russians when the latter were forced to retire. Not only do they treat the wounded German or Austrian prisoners as well as their own people, they often actually treat better. I had many personal illustrations of this, and of the manner in which the saltness of the German captive was soon worn down by the sheer kindness of his Russian attendants. Their Slav prisoners are treated with the greatest tolerance and often may be seen walking with perfect freedom in the streets.

On the German side I was told no such amenities redeemed the ruin of war. Their troops were brutal, arrogant and often drunk. German prisoners, unlike Austrians, are sometimes found so hopelessly intoxicated that they are not sober for twenty-four hours after their capture. On the other hand, I can say with certainty that there is not one case of drunkenness in the whole Russian army. The drink that Germans often deliberately leave when they evacuate a town is promptly thrown into the gutters."

MAJ. GEN. HUGHES AS GUEST OF GEN. FRENCH.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Major-General Sam Hughes, who is paying a brief visit to the headquarters of the Canadian division at the base and arrived on Friday at the General Headquarters, where he was a guest of General French. On that day he visited the Princess Patricia's and then went on to the Belgian headquarters to lunch, afterwards making a tour of the Belgian lines.

On Saturday General Hughes spent the day with the Canadian division, Colonel Bates, convalescent hospital for soldiers suffering from minor ailments and nervous shock in the neighborhood of general headquarters, was visited on Sunday by the Canadian War Minister. He lunched with the general commanding the first army and inspected part of the first army line.

This week he has been the guest of General Joffre at the headquarters of the French army.

Major-General S. B. Steele, Canadian Militia, is gazetted to a command attached to the headquarters staff.

FURS POPULAR FOR AUTUMN FASHION

The following forecast which is decidedly interesting is taken from the London Daily Sketch and shows what a prominent part fox furs will take in the coming winter's fashions.

"And what about furs—especially the price of them?" was my final appeal. "Furs," said Mr. Reville, "will be slightly cheaper—but he emphasized the 'slightly' when I expressed my surprise at this statement. For so long we have been told that furs will be at prohibitive prices by next winter.

"There is a great demand for furs just now," Mr. Reville went on, "and large orders have been placed, because people are availing themselves of present prices, which have certainly fluctuated to the advantage of the purchaser. The precious furs, such as chinchilla, sable and ermine will still, of course, be very costly."

Here let me interpose that in Mr. Reville's big collection of lovely furs there is just now the handsomest coat in London, or, for the matter of that, anywhere. It is all chinchilla from throat to the heel, the skins most wonderfully put together. Its price is somewhere about two thousand pounds.

Mr. Reville agrees with me that sable, so beautiful in itself, is an "old" hat. That is to say, it puts several years on to the apparent age of the woman who wears it.

RACCOON AND SILVER WOLF.

"Next winter we are to have some new furs," further pronounced authority. "One of the most becoming of these will be the raccoon—a fur with orange tints in it, which will be matched by orange satin linings. Fox furs will be favourites again, and silver wolf and skunk will be greatly worn."

Mandel Bros., of Chicago are advertising Fox Furs as the August feature and they have a collection unsurpassed, every fox treasure from a gray fox set at $10 to a select fox set at $1200 being represented.

THE WAIL OF A TENDERFOOT.

It's ten long months—or is it years?— Since I left the city's lights To hit the lonesome trail of the West And to see the far-off sights.

But now I've seen the country wild, And felt the silence spread Across the plain and over all As though all life was dead.

I've listened to the howling wind, And watched the empty plain, Just longing for the city's crowds— Oh! to be back again.

With the boys and the girls, the fun and the noise, Away from the silence deep, And the sight of this awful, endless plain.

Ah! I see it in my sleep. But it's here I came and must remain, Though it drives me mad at last; But I'll dream of the days before I'd the craze

Of the Western trail in my brain. And if perchance you should drop in To this God-forsaken land, Just give me a call and let me feel The grip of a fellow's hand.

It's the far-off field that's always green And never the place we've got, And it's me for the East if my luck should turn, To God's own chosen spot.

—AMY SETON FOX.
